Hollywood Inside

SOME of the most expensive 'props' ever made, consisting largely of military equipment, will be utilized by Warners in three currently shooting pictures with national defense themes. United States government, through military authorities, is making an aircraft carrier, huge Boeing Flying Fortresses, dive bombers, pursuit ships, training planes and other equipment worth millions of dollars available for two features, 'Flight Patrol' and 'Dive Bomber' and a two-reel preparedness picture, 'Here Comes the Cavalry.' At Fort Bliss, Tex., today the first shot for the two-reeler will be of 17,000 cavalrymen and 250 planes passing in review before high-ranking officers. In 'Bomber,' on location at the San Diego Naval Base, Warners will have the use of a $350,000,000 aircraft carrier, 23 of the gigantic Boeing bombers, 25 dive bombers, 70 combat ships, 15 training planes and three complete crash units. Scenes for 'Patrol' on location at Alhambra, will require hundreds of planes.

DEAL is being worked out for Tex Ritter, now winding up his last series of musical westerns at Monogram, to go to Columbia to co-star in a group of outdoor action features on that company's 1941-42 program. So far, it is understood, that new pact has not been inked but negotiations are reported in the closing stage. It is expected that Ritter will be teamed with Bill Elliott, who for the past two years has been doing westerns for Columbia, in the new group being planned. Ritter has been starring at Monogram in the musical oaters produced by Edward Finney, who brought the western unit over from Grand National three seasons ago, but Finney is said to be dickering for his services with a major lot and will not join in the new Ritter deal.

METRO will be the only company releasing what is classed as a big picture during Holy Week when it sends out 'Men of Boystown.' Usual custom is to hold back the big product that hasn't hit the theatres until after the Easter religious ceremonies are over but due to the nature of the picture, depicting the work of Father Edward J. Flanagan in rehabilitating boys at Boystown, Neb., company feels film is a fit subject for release during that period. Additional advantage is gained due to the fact that other companies have followed the general practice of holding back their bigger features during Holy Week, leaving Metro a clear field to play for theatre trade without competition of the same class.

THERE is a feud brewing between two male stars that may lead to fisticuffs if one goes on with his impractical joking. Jokester is noted for having a rather flat sense of humor and for playing juvenile tricks on his fellow actors. While the other actor in the same picture was singing, the funny one went to a monitor mike on another part of the stage, switched on the current and talked into the sound track. He spoiled a perfect take, one that director, crew and singer had labored to get. Prankster went into gales of laughter at his own antics, but stopped short when he was told by his victim that he would be slugged if it ever happened again.

20TH-FOX, with its cavalcade of radio, 'The Great American Broadcast,' is in the peculiar position of not being able to use radio exploitation to its full effect. Primarily a musical, film has eight tunes by Mack Gordon and Harry Warren, none of which can be plugged over the air because of the Ascap-BMI set-up. To offset the loss of network plugs, 20th-Fox is framing a special musical trailer for theatres to educate the public and is also now working on a deal to set the tunes on the 200-odd radio stations around the country who have signed licensing agreements with Ascap.

'LADY FROM NEW ORLEANS,' Republic's John Wayne-Ona Munson starrer, will beat Universal's 'The Flame of New Orleans,' with Marlene Dietrich and Bruce Cabot, into national release. 'Lady' will hit theatre marquees April 22 and 'Flame' will be released three days later, April 25. Universal is talking of making a premiere junket to the Louisiana locale of the film, although plans have not been fully developed. Republic also would like to have a New Orleans premiere of its picture.

APPROXIMATELY 40,000 junior admissions weekly are being attracted to Fox-West Coast theatres in California since the circuit set up the reduced tariff plan for juves a couple of months ago. Despite the cutting of box office rates for youngsters, the average admission price for the circuit is 33½c, compared to 32c last year, it is reported by Charles P. Skouras, circuit prexy. Three years ago the average admission prrice for film houses in the Los Angeles area was between 15 and 20 cents.

REPUBLIC will be the first studio to try out the idea of combining its press previews and exhibitor trade showings Friday afternoon at the screening of 'Sis Hopkins.' Studio is taking no chances on previewing the Judy Canova starrer in a projection room, but has obtained the Studio City theatre for the combined showing. If the 'Hopkins' plan is successful it will be adopted for the future with both press and exhibitors banding together at one showing.

The good old fashioned murder film was sorrowful and grim.
The gloomy villain prowled the joint when lights were low and dim,
And now and then a shriek arose to pierce the tragic night
And audiences trembled at the victim's woeful plight.

But now the villain pulls a gun and pulls a gag likewise.
The victim sings a comic song and merrily he dies.
Detectives romp around the place and rumba all the while.
For nowadays the fans demand a murder with a smile.

Song by Charles Previn and Sam Lerner. Previewed March 31. Running time: 84 mins.

Frank Lloyd has taken the humorous slant on the reason and the manner in which the gallant gentry of Wyoming granted women the franchise, thereby setting an example for all the world. Lloyd doesn't claim to have followed history. He merely forewords his entertaining and showmanly presentation as the way in which it might have happened. 'The Lady From Cheyenne' is no grandiose epic. It kids the pants off some things a self-respecting epic would never dream of profaning, such as politics. It extols the wile and guile of women in winning what they want, nice women and—expedient women. Its whimsical suggestion as to how the emancipation of women may have had its genesis, out on the American frontier, in what was considered one of the rawest of the new states, is deft satire and bright funning. The telling is excellent screen narrative, the performances are colorful, the result is a piece of substantial, beguiling audience entertainment. With logical exploitation, it has every reason to expect profitable business.

Screen play by Warren Duff and Kathryn Scola, based on an original assembly of facts by Jonathan Finn and Theresa Oaks, takes the basic historical data and weaves it delightfully around a schoolma'm who became outraged at the wanton violence of men who dominated her frontier settlement and their contempt for women as human beings. She proceeds in a very feminine and astonishing way to do something about it. When 'the lady from Cheyenne' discovers that women can do nothing directly about law and order or the complexion of their town politics, she wheedles a state legis-ment defense money, around $2,900,000,000 will be spent in territories served by National Theatre Corporation houses the F-WC chief stated. He then proceeded to give a breakdown of the various amounts to be laid out in the several California operating districts. Greatest sum wiil be spent in the Los Angeles No. 4 district, to which Stan Meyer has just been appointed district manager succeeding Dick Dickson, resigned. Slightly more than $1,000,000,000 has been earmarked for this territory, embracing $390,000,000 directly by the U. S. government and $616,000,000 in orders not completed at the Douglas and Vultee plants.

Defense expenditures in other California districts, as outlined by Skouras, follow: Cullen Espy's Los Angeles territory, $36,300,000; B. V. Sturdivant's district, $56,300,000 in addition to $262,000,000 at the Burbank plane factories ordered by outside governments; George Bowser's San Diego and Long Beach areas, $373,500,000 by the government and $330,000,000 outside; Lou Christ's Arizona district, $4,700,000; Lou Rosenberg's San Luis Obispo area, $9,900,000; Charles Thall's metropolitan district in San Francisco, $260,000,000; Dick Spier's district, $160,000,000; Harry Sipel's territory, $14,500,000, and Nick Turner's Inland Northern California area $268,000.

In launching the Spyros Skouras drive, which officially starts April 13, and continues until July 13, Skouras told the nearly 300 district and house managers and home office employes gathered in the Fiesta room at the Ambassador hotel, that he was confident the Northern California territory, with a quota of $38,000 per week above par, would cop first honors, and that Southern California, with a quota of $68,000 over par per week, should run an easy second.

$31,000 IN PRIZES

Prizes to be awarded in the drive will total around $31,000, about $4,000 more than a year ago, Skouras said, with an additional $5,000 to be hung up for two special weeks yet to be worked out. There will also be $7,700 awarded to 'the forgotten man,' the F-WC prexy said, this sum going to operating chiefs not directly connected with actual theatre management, such as bookers, etc.

Yesterday's session was presided over by Arch Bowles, with Skouras and his various aides outlining the details of the new business drive. Government consent decree was discussed by Charles A. Buckley, head of circuit's legal department, who voiced a plea that Fox West Coast managers live up to the letter of the decree, no matter what other operators might do. There has been no admission of guilt in setting up the decree, Buckley said, the agreement relating solely to further conduct of distributors and theatres.

Summed up briefly, Buckley said, the consent compels the distributors to trade show their product before selling; compels the licensing of pictures in groups of not more than five; compels the abandonment of the practice of forcing shorts; prohibits distributors and affiliated circuits from buying pictures for different exchange centers, such as buying in Southern California for Northern California; sets down rules regarding adequate clearance; provides for arbitration, and places limitations on undue expansion for a three-year period.

There is nothing alarming in the consent decree, Buckley insisted, and the principal worry for theatre managers is that of clearance.

PENSION PLANS

Buckley also dwelt briefly on National Theatres' proposed retirement or pension plans, stating that 25% of company's candy sales would be devoted to an employes' fund, from which it is possible that after one year some definite retirement or pension plan may be evolved. Buckley stated that profits from candy sales in the theatres now run around $6,500 to $7,000 per week, so that approximately $1,600 can be devoted immediately each week to this special fund.

Skouras touched on proposed circuit buying plans, announcing that for the time being the F-WC buying would be centered in the hands of Larry Kent, Cullen Espy and Charles Thall, and with Ed Alperson transferred from Chicago to head the buying for the Pacific Northwest houses.

Chaplin, Others Tell Of Schenck, Moskowitz Honesty, Integrity

New York, March 31.—Charles Chaplin and other tops in the picture business paraded to the witness stand in Federal court here today to testify as to the honesty and business integrity of Joseph M. Schenck and Joseph Moskowitz. The Schenck-Moskowitz big guns roared at the opening of the defense, with the government formally resting its case and Judge Grover Moscowitz denying seven applications to strike from the indictment and to dismiss the charges of income tax evasion.

Four character witnesses were on the stand, headed by Charles Chaplin, who declared he first met Schenck in 1914. The actor described the formation of the United Artists Corp., and declared that after the formation it was decided to secure a man 'who had a keen sense of business, a man in whom they all had confidence, a man whom the industry trusted, a man, above all, whom we could trust, Joseph M. Schenck, to head our business.'

HELD COMPANY TOGETHER

Chaplin stated Schenck held the company together, that he was the 'appeaser,' settling arguments, while the start depended on his 'generosity, kindliness and judgment.' He declared 'ours is a great friendship, that is why I am here. Everybody is Joe Schenck's friend.' Chaplin testified the executive's reputation for honesty and integrity is 'good'.

The next witness, Irving Berlin, told about Moskowitz, stating he had known him for 20 years, that he 'never heard a word against him,' and that his reputation for honesty and integrity is 'excellent.'

Phil S. Gibson, chief justice of the California Supreme court, the next witness, testified he met Schenck in 1923. Since then he said he had associated with the film executive in business and a social way, especially when Schenck was chairman of the Infantile Paralysis campaign in California, and when he was engaged in other charity and social work. He said Schenck's reputation was the 'highest'. He declared he flew here voluntarily to testify.

GOLDEN ON STAND

John Golden, legit producer, next declared he had known Moskowitz for a dozen years. He said Moskowitz is 'a good boy—a fine, competent business man,' and that his reputation in the industry is 'very good.'

The government then blocked a move to call four internal revenue men on the grounds that agents could not be allowed to testify unless permission of the Treasury Department is secured. An attempt will be made to get permission. The last witness was Carol Hall, certified public accountant, who continues on the stand tomorrow. Will H. Hays is expected to testify tomorrow, James Farley on Thursday.

HAYS, RE-ELECTED MPPDA HEAD, SLAPS TNEC BLAST

duced pay from the former $100,000 annual wage, in effect about three and a half years.

Carl E. Milliken was re-elected secretary, while George Borthwick, assistant treasurer, was named treasurer and a member of the directorate in place of Col. Frederick Herron, now in active army service. Milliken has taken over Herron's foreign division work.

Probably the most startling part of the Hays annual report was a slap taken at the Temporary National Economic Committee's blast at the industry. It follows in part:

'It is interesting to note that the recent monograph published about trade practices in motion pictures and the screen's codes of self-regulation reviews legislation, litigation and arbitration, and finds them all wanting. The statement is so keen about the forest that it overlooks the trees—the essential factors by which the industry grew up. We cannot quarrel, however, with a conclusion reached in the monograph that no present patent medicine remedies, no simple solutions, and no infallible formulae exist for any problems in this industry.

'On the contrary, to quote from this monograph, issued under the auspices of TNEC, and written without any hearing or submission on the part of producers, distributors or exhibitors, what the industry needs "more than anything else" is intelligent and sympathetic study.

WHOLESALE CRITICISM

'The screen is too prominent a medium for criticism, right or wrong, not to be constantly leveled at it. Wholesome criticism allows for constant self-examination and stimulates our progress; baseless criticism gives us opportunity to establish facts about the industry.'

The motion picture industry, facing 'an unparalleled opportunity for service in this crisis of events,' is rising fully to the occasion, Hays declared in his report.

'The responsibilities undertaken by the industry on every front of total defense,' Hays asserted, 'demand greater vigilance than ever at the dykes of self-regulation. Our pictures must serve the entertainment needs of a nation in possibly its greatest historic moment. Entertainment has a more responsible function than ever.'

Hays paid a tribute to the trade press of the industry in his report. 'It is not only a medium for the exchange of information among all branches of the industry,' he said, 'but it is able to survey our problems as a whole and render constructive service in the execution of our programs.'

CITES H'WOOD'S RECORD

'The high civic consciousness displayed by members of the industry never has been more clearly reflected than through their relief, charity and community activities in Hollywood. Members of the industry,' Hays said, 'have been taking their place in the civic life and social services of their communities and the nation. The volunteer services of many have been made available to the government.'

lature into passing a bill which gave women the vote and permitted the impanelment of the first woman jury. A love story is neatly entwined with the political maneuvers, and some ladies who didn't then rate the name, helped pave the way for the legislative precedent, in scenes which provoke much of the legend's amusement.

Loretta Young delivers one of her top enactments as the doughty school teacher who refuses to be bullied by the town's ruthless robber baron and his henchmen. She stabilizes her character very carefully as a naive, honest and strangely candid woman but in no sense a caricature. And in that she had of course the shrewd collaboration of Producer - director Lloyd who guided the comedy very carefully, effecting an adroit admixture of character and situation humor with strong melodramatic elements to give it excitement and suspense.

As antagonist, Edward Arnold opposes Miss Young with a well proportioned role as the lawless promoter.

Robert Preston persuasively plays the courtly young lawyer, mouthpiece for Arnold, who manages to keep all the skullduggery nice and legal until his love for the schoolma'am about-faces him. Frank Cravan has a solid part as the courageous editor who helps the women in their battle for the vote. Gladys George contributes a choice performance as spokeswoman for the ladies-of-the-parlor who are intrigued by the idea of the vote and help soften up the legislators to pass the bill. In the group with Miss George, Dorothy Granger and Marion Martin also are in evidence. Jessie Ralph, Stanley Fields, Joseph Sawyer, Roger Imhof, Samuel S. Hinds, Spencer Charters, Charles Halton, Wade Boteler are prominent in lesser parts. Willie Best creates a striking impression as the legislature cloakroom attendant whose advice to Miss Young contains gems of political technique and spur her on to victory.

Lloyd's direction emphasizes the comedy at all times, but also marches the story along with bold dramatic connectives, as when the roughs beat up the editor, burn the schoolhouse, kill the man who challenges Arnold's rule and hold up the train in an effort to kidnap the schoolteacher on her return from the Cheyenne capital. All this is pitched against backgrounds and sets carefully devised to preserve the atmosphere of early Wyoming days. Deserving a big share in this authentic creation is the art direction of Jack Otterson and the excellent photography of Milton Krasner.

Drab attire of Miss Young during early part of the story is well calculated not alone to create sound character but to enhance the contrast when, later, she bedecks herself gorgeously under tutelage of the honky-tonk gals to bedizen the legislators and the governor. The gowns are Vera West's.

Col Says Distribution, Production Must Be Industry Combo

to 1939 out of 9,169 features produced the majors made 3,581 and independents 5,588. Company cites the competition of radio which spent $45,000,000 on talent, and the high costs of original plays, in increasing production costs, thus necessitating a distribution outlet for a producer.

In its own case Columbia says it was discriminated against by the majors who refused to distribute its product, or gave harsh terms, necessitating its securing money for the formation of its own exchange system.

Company lists loans and borrowing from 1935 to date, showing it lent as many times as it borrowed and equally from independents and majors. It pointed out it gets nothing for nothing, showing how it paid RKO $50,000 above Katharine Hepburn's salary in borrowing the actress for its film, 'Holiday.'

Columbia splits its product with independents and majors and declares this suit is res adjudicata as judgment has already been entered in the Interstate Circuit suit in Texas. Dismissal of the action is asked.

Cartoonist Charges Against Disney Given Yager

A conference was held at the National Labor Relations Board yesterday on the unfair labor practice charges filed against the Walt Disney studio by the Screen Cartoonists Guild. The board was represented by George Yager, chief field examiner, with Attorney George E. Bodle appearing for the Cartoonists.

A large number of affidavits from Disney employes were turned over to Yager to be included with the exhibits. It is probable that the board will be ready to recommend a hearing date by the end of this week.

The Screen Cartoonists Guild charges that Disney officials have been sponsoring a company union, and that efforts have been made to intimidate workers and prevent them from joining the Guild. The SCG now claims to represent a big majority of the 700 employes.

New Negotiators Will Handle Demands of Directors Guild

Demand of the Screen Directors Guild for minimum salary scales for directors is being taken out of the hands of the Producer-SDG Conciliation Committee, and will be negotiated by committees representing the two groups. George Stevens is chairman of the Guild committee, while Y. Frank Freeman is expected to head the Producer delegation.

The following statement was handed out by the SDG yesterday: 'The Producers Conciliation Committee (B. B. Kahane and Roy J. Obringer) asked that further meetings be postponed as they have been advised by Y. Frank Freeman that the Producers signatory to the Basic Agreement would appoint a negotiating committee to meet with such representatives as the Screen Directors Guild might designate to discuss a minimum contract for directors. (We understand that Y. Frank Freeman will be chairman.)

'The board of directors instructed the president, Frank Capra, to appoint a committee, and he selected George Stevens, chairman; Frank Capra, Philip Rosen, George Marshall, Lesley Selander and Felix Feist. Action has been held up on account of Freeman's trip to New York, but as soon as he gets back about the beginning of this week he will immediately set a date for the two committees to meet.'

At the Producers Association it was stated that if Freeman arrives in time, a meeting of the Association will be called for Monday night (7). Freeman, however, would have authority to name the committee prior to this meeting.

The Directors are asking minimum salaries ranging from $250 to $500 per week for directors on small budget pictures, a 90% Guild Shop, and guaranteed terms of employment.

STRIKE CALL AT DISNEY MAPPED

MEX. PREXY BIDS BIZ TO 'GOLD' FETE

Receipt of an invitation from the President of Mexico for the picture industry to participate in Mexico's Motion Picture Festival in Mexico City from April 12 to 14 was announced last night by Y. Frank Freeman, prexy of the Producers Association. The affair will be highlighted by the world premiere of Capt. James Roosevelt's 'Pot o' Gold.'

In announcing acceptance of the invitation, Freeman stated:

'The President of Mexico, through

Chas. Pathe Believed In Nazi Trouble

New York, April 1.—No word has been received from Charles Pathe, pioneer film man, who was slated to arrive from Lisbon more than two weeks ago. Pathe News, which he founded, and RKO, which releases Pathe News, had planned various honors for the Frenchman, now 66. Pathe News had cabled three weeks ago that the film-maker was flying here, but he was not on the plane as scheduled. Although transportation delays are thought possible, there has been a hint that Pathe might be in trouble with Nazis in France.

Roosevelt Sees Dad

New York, April 1.—Capt. James Roosevelt, who arrived here from the Coast over the weekend, went directly to Washington on his arrival. He is due here for the opening of his 'Pot o' Gold' at the Roxy theatre next Friday. Roosevelt then returns to the Coast prior to his departure for Mexico City.

Brandes Gets Break

Alaine Brandes, one of the featured girls in Metro's 'Ziegfeld Girl,' will have the femme lead opposite George Houston in Producers Releasing picture, 'The Lone Rider Gallops to Glory.'

Smith Guides 'Shanghai'

Noel Smith has been signed to direct Universal's 'Half Way to Shanghai,' on his first job away from Warners in past four years.

Spot Withers, Banta

Grant Withers and Jack Banta go into RKO's 'Parachute Battalion.'

LOMBARD, RKO STYMIED

RKO and Carole Lombard are at an impasse on a new contract. Miss Lombard talked with George J. Schaefer several times on a new deal during his recent stay here, but nothing materialized. Studio, however, told her they had several scripts in mind for her. On other hand, she informed Schaefer that the only way a new deal could be made would be to have it stipulated for Gregory La Cava and Alfred Hitchcock to direct the pictures she appears in.

Likely, however, if nothing eventuates at RKO and Columbia holds back starting date on 'Bed Time Story,' Miss Lombard will agree to play lead in the latter film.

TWO-REEL COMMERSH PIC BUDGET'S ABOUT LIKE B'S

Elizabeth Arden is producing a two-reel commercial pic in Technicolor which, it is understood, will cost almost as much as some of the B product that major companies are turning out. Picture has been in production on the Fine Arts lot for three days and is already day and a half behind schedule. It has five art directors, three stages cluttered with sets and a horde of talent.

Director on job, Will Jason, is being paid $4,000 for the chore, which is tops in compensation for making a two-reeler.

SOEG HITS CLOSED SHOP LEGISLATION

Members of the Screen Office Employes Guild, meeting at the Roosevelt hotel last night, went on record as being opposed to adoption of legislation outlawing the closed shop and to the anti-sabotage bill. The report on pending labor legislation, both state and national, was made by George Macon, head of the research committee. Reports on Producer negotiations also were made by the various committees. Eldred Cocking, survey analyst of the Wage-Hour Division, spoke.

RINGLING CIRCUS STRIKE HINTED IN NEW YORK

Hellinger Sets Meehan On 'Nightingale'

John Meehan has been signed by Mark Hellinger to script 'Bowery Nightingale' at 20th-Fox from an original by Oliver H. P. Garrett. Hellinger also has John Balderston working on 'Fifth Avenue' and John O'Hara on 'God's In His Heaven.' Which of these goes into production first has not yet been decided.

NY LEGIT OPENING

WATCH ON THE RHINE

New York, April 1.—Climaxed by a powerful third act, Lillian Hellman's new play, 'Watch On the Rhine', pitches to a terrific finale under the top flight histrionic performances of Paul Lukas, Mady Christians, Lucile Watson and George Coulouris. It's really Lukas' moment, the plentitude of salvos after the last of a series of some dozen curtain calls attesting to the generous and well earned approbation of a sterling characterization.

It's a different sort of anti-Nazi play, with Lukas depicting the honorable German who rebels at the madness that came with Fascism. It is localed in what he, his wife and their three children at last felt was

INDIES' AID IS TOSSED TO AFofL

A strike call involving hundreds of workers at the Walt Disney Studio was being readied by union leaders last night. While it was said the initial call would apply only to groups affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, it is understood that pledges of full support have been received from independent crafts with members employed on the lot.

Plans for the walkout were completed yesterday at a conference of AFofL leaders, with only the date re-

Wesley Ruggles, Metro Talk One-Pic Deal

Wesley Ruggles was at Metro yesterday discussing the possibility of his coming to that lot on loanout from Columbia to direct one picture. Discussion was in preliminaries with nothing accruing from the talk last night. Ruggles has two pictures to make at Columbia where he has his own production unit. Difficulty in casting the properties he wants to make is holding back start of the pictures. The Metro proposition would give him a chance to go into immediate production. Should Ruggles make the Metro deal it is likely that Claude Binyon, who scripts his pictures, would go along.

Allenberg, AMG Prexy

Bert Allenberg was re-elected president of the Artists Managers Guild last night at a meeting of the AMG board of directors. John McCormick was elected vice-president; Ralph Blum, secretary, and Harry Friedman, treasurer.

Vincent in Tucson

Merle D. Vincent, chief of the hearings branch of the Wage-Hour Administration, checked out last night for Tucson. Will be in Arizona about two weeks.

Hollywood Inside

MAX AND DAVE FLEISCHER have written President Roosevelt offering to make technical cartoon shorts for the training of American soldiers. In the first World War the Fleischer brothers made 20 one-reel cartoon shorts graphically illustrating numerous phases of training and gun operation. Pictures were made at Fort Sill, Oklahoma, with Major O. O. Ellis and Major Gary of the War Department general staff assisting. Prints are still in use and include shorts on 'Theory of Five Unit Firing Order,' 'Operation of the Lewis Machine Gun,' 'Operation of the Stokes Mortar,' 'Operation of the Rifle and Hand Grenade,' and others. New shorts of the kind to illustrate recent radical changes in U. S. armaments may be needed.

At break of dawn the troops lined up to fight the hated foe,
To brave the storms of shot and shell that soon would lay them low.
For they were bold and hardy vets in tattered uniforms
Who had no fear of leaden hail and laughed at shrapnel storms.

They gazed upon the sombre clouds that gathered in the sky
And as they were about to charge, prepared to do or die,
The film director stopped them, and his heart was full of pain.
'No war today,' he told his men. 'It looks too much like rain.'

Men of Boys Town

(Drama)

Metro release of a John W. Considine, Jr., production. Stars Spencer Tracy and Mickey Rooney. Features Bobs Watson, Larry Nunn, Mary Nash, Henry O'Neill, Darryl Hickman, Lee J. Cobb. Balance of cast: Sidney Miller, Addison Richards, Lloyd Corrigan, George Lessey, Robert Emmett Keane, Arthur Hohl, Ben Weldon, Anne Revere. Directed by Norman Taurog. Original screenplay by James Kevin McGuinness. Photography, Harold Rosson. Music score, Herbert Stothart. Film editor, Frederick Y. Smith. Previewed April 1. Running time: 105 mins.

This is the second picture Metro and Producer John W. Considine, Jr., have made about Boys Town, the Nebraska institution founded and shepherded by Father Edward J. Flanagan, the priest who maintains there are no 'bad' boys and who has sheltered, counseled and sent out as good citizens thousands of neglected and misguided youngsters of assorted creeds and races. Like its predecessor, 'Boys Town', this one, 'Men of Boys Town', deals dramatically as well as documentarily with that now widely-known institution. And like the first one, the second has the humanity, the vitality, the inspirational quality to boost it high among the year's box office leaders.

'Men of Boys Town' is frankly and artfully a sentimental picture. It will tear the heart of the toughest audience. And its unquestionable audience appeal as sheer absorbing entertainment may serve to remind Hollywood that unalloyed sentimental dramas are still a theatre demand, despite the reluctance and shame of many producers and writers to acknowledge such hokum taste.

Spencer Tracy in the Father Flanagan role, and Mickey Rooney as the reconditioned tough who becomes mayor of Boys Town, carry on the sequence started in the film which introduced the men and boys of the school. Now Rooney is in a spot where he must do something for others, even for Father Flanagan in a crucial hour, rather than being himself an object of salvage. An embittered lad with a broken back, victim of reformatory brutalities, comes as a challenge to the efficacy of the priest's methods. If the men and lads of Boys Town can make that hopeless kid laugh again they will account themselves worthy and successful. Almost half the picture is taken up in bringing out that hard-won laugh. And every foot of it is absorbing, tense, by turns humorous and pathetic, because the story is sound and warmly human and the performances strong with conviction and the importance of the material.

The picture blasts the set-up and methods of state reformatories, basing the shocking chapters of its narrative upon brutalities of guards and callous inertia of executives as exposed in recent newspaper accounts. And this dramatic indictment, purposefully contrasting the methods and results of the divergent institutions, brings out some of the most persuasive acting by youngsters in the cast, Larry Nunn, a sensitive lad with intelligence and skill, in the role of the unsmiling waif, and little Darryl Hickman in the cocky role of a seven-year-old stick-up, said to be

Publicists Will Session Soon on NY Guild Request

A membership meeting of the Screen Publicists Guild will be called soon to act on a request from the New York Guild for support in its fight for recognition. It is probable that the new national constitution also will be ratified at the meeting. Various articles in the Constitution are now being discussed at unit meetings in order to avoid delay when the general session is called.

Both matters were taken up Monday night at a meeting of the SPG executive board. While board members were heartily in favor of extending every aid to the Easterners, it was felt the situation should be placed before the general membership before the Guild was officially placed on record.

PLAY REVIEW

ROSE MARIE

The old Mason opera house on lower Broadway raised its curtain last night to what might be called an evolution in show business. What a good sized audience saw on the creaky old boards was a full-blown presentation of the perennial operetta of the mountie country played by a cast of close to 50 and with 14 musicians in the pit.

But get these prices: matinees, 15c to 29c; nights, 25c to 49c.

There it is and well may one ask, how can they do it?

Arthur Spitz, who is personally bankrolling the venture, said he did it successfully in Europe and it can be done here. It's show biz in the Woolworth way—if the turnover is populous enough there'll be plenty of sauce to go around. 'Rose Marie' and succeeding light operas ('Merry Widow' is next) will be done 15 times a week, which means mats daily and an owl show thrown in on Saturday night.

Considering the tariff, the mounting and cast is very much okay. Virginia Card has the title role and in very few performances of this popular Friml-Hammerstein nostalgic piece has 'Indian Love Call' and some of the others been sung better. Her voice has a wide range and loses none of its melodic sway in the higher registers. She also does a forthright job of acting. John Hendrik is a bit too stiff as the romantic lead but he manages the songs in good tenor voice. Others contributing acceptable support are Dick Horn, Pat Dooley, George Eldredge, Lemoyne Redmund, Sonja Levkova, Robert Winton, James Westerfield, Thomas Glynn, Warren Christian, Lenore Rae, Grace McKaig, Johnny Pelletti, Paul Craik, Elm Halprin, Alexandra Hamilton, Virginia Lotito, Laurie Darling and Anna Verite. In the ensemble are 22 girls and 10 mounties. Production is staged by Theodore Bachenheimer and Fritz Berens directs the music. House, a 1,600-seater, must run close to capacity at all performances if Spitz is to make a go of it. There's a pretty husky nut there considering that no one is working under minimum union scale.

Interesting adjunct to the poor man's Biltmore is the five-cent buffet in the lobby. All sandwiches and drinks are priced at a nickel.

Spitz's experiment will be watched closely by legit showmen. If it clicks the era of three-thirty operettas will pass into limbo.

Newsreel Profits Leap

New York, April 1.—Both gross business and net revenue are up for newsreels over last year. With former rental scales still in effect, some of the reels are reporting as high as $1,800 added revenue weekly. Net is being aided by reduction in expenses originally budgeted for covering the European war. Reels feel a fee increase is necessary and separate selling of them under the consent decree may be the solution. In the past they have been regarded by exhibs and sold by the companies as some extra service theatres get if they buy feature product from the distributor.

based on a case of record in Father Flanagan's school.

Tracy, playing with his customary restraint, impersonates the head of Boys Town with strength, humility and dignity. Mickey Rooney shows an emotional power beyond anything he has previously done in the pathos of his devotion to the priest and his responsibilities to his younger schoolfellows. Bobs Watson carries on his role as Pee Wee, turning on his old faithful tear gushers when needed, most effectively. Sidney Miller has a noteworthy juve role as the Jewish boy who is one of the priest's most trustworthy helpers. Numerous other boys are interesting in flashes.

Mary Nash and Henry O'Neill are individually outstanding as the would-be adopters of Rooney to replace their own lost son. Scenes which they share with Tracy and Rooney when the boy has to make up his mind whether to go to a home of luxury or remain with his priestly benefactor and inspiration are among the most heart-tugging in the film. Fine also is the performance by Lee J. Cobb, the business manager of the institution, whose job it is to coordinate Father Flanagan's yearning to expand his quarters to house the endless stream of kids, and the hard realities of getting the coin for more dormitories. Addison Richards is a good judge; Lloyd Corrigan a banker; Arthur Hohl a shockingly brutal reformatory guard. George Lessey, Robert Emmett Keane, Ben Weldon, Anne Revere capably complete the cast.

Norman Taurog's direction finds a sure way to the heart of any audience through the guidance of the youngsters, playing with irresistible sincerity and scoring with vivid portrayals, coupled with equal devotion from the older members of the cast. Taurog's combined artistry and sensitive feeling for the full dramatic value of his subject are up to his best proved standard.

Major responsibility for this fine production, its content and its worthy presentation, belongs to John W. Considine, Jr., who originated the Boys Town idea for pictures, ventured with it strikingly in the initial film and scores increasingly with this sequel. He has excellent technical support from Herbert Stothart in a distinguished musical score, first class photography by Harold Rosson, and contributions from the art and sound departments.

James Kevin McGuinness is author of the deeply moving, significant and expertly crafted screenplay.

Exhibitors who did well with 'Boys Town' may bank on this successor. The same exploitation elements still are good, even better than with the first and cumulatively so, with several top screen names to decorate the marquee.

UNION LEADERS READY STRIKE CALL AT DISNEY

maining open. Several leaders were in favor of immediate action, but others suggested the company first be given a time limit in which to meet with the unions.

It is probable that an ultimatum will be sent to Disney officials today giving them until some time Friday to arrange meetings with the various crafts. While there was some talk of ordering a walkout tomorrow, general feeling was that no actual strike call would be issued until Monday in order to give officials every opportunity to arrange an amicable settlement with the unionists.

The drive will center around the Screen Cartoonists Guild, which recently signed a contract with Metro, and which claims to represent a big majority of approximately 700 Disney employes. However, the teamsters and other AFofL crafts have since organized the lot and are ready to move in when the go signal is given. The Society of Motion Picture Film Editors, with a 100% majority on the lot, recently filed unfair labor practice charges against the studio with the National Labor Relations Board.

Unionists said that every move possible had been made to eliminate the necessity of taking drastic action, but that Gunther Lessing, attorney for the company and spokesman for Disney, had ignored their requests for meetings. They said he had repeatedly refused to meet with them and refused to answer their telephone calls. In the meantime, they claimed that salaries are being cut and hours reduced in an effort to intimidate the workers. The SCG also has carried its fight to the NLRB, and scores of affidavits have been filed with Field Examiner George Yager.

Move to unionize the Disney lot has been headed by Aubrey Blair, AFofL international representative and spokesman for Meyer Lewis here; Herbert Sorrell, business representative of Moving Picture Painters Local 644; George E. Bodle, attorney for the Screen Cartoonists Guild, and business representatives from half a dozen other AFofL crafts who have pledged their support. A move to place the Disney products on the labor unfair list has already been authorized by the Glendale Central Labor Council.

Friends of Walt Disney were busy last night trying to avoid a walkout. Several of them urged him to take over the labor negotiations himself or call in somebody who was familiar with the situation. There was some talk that Victor E. Clarke, who is favored by certain executives for appointment as general manager of Central Casting Corp., might be asked to step in and conciliate the differences with the unions.

Hays, Fowler, Miggins Laud Schenck At New York Trial

New York, April 1.—Will Hays, Gene Fowler and Ben Miggins were the character witnesses presented today by the defense in the Government case against Joseph M. Schenck and Joe Moskowitz in the United States District court before Judge Grover Moscowitz and a jury.

Hays testified he met Joe Schenck in 1922 when he became head of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America. He testified that Schenck always cooperated in establishing high standards in moral, educational and artistic advancement of the screen, and his reputation for honesty, integrity and square-shooting is fixed as good in the film industry.

Hays further said that it made no difference whether Schenck associated with gamblers or Willie Bioff, as his reputation would not change.

Gene Fowler gave Joe Moskowitz a big sendoff, declaring the latter's reputation in the industry is 'the best.'

Ben Miggins, Continental manager for 20th-Fox, testified that Schenck made business trips to Paris and London in 1936-37 and addressed the company convention in 1936. He said that in 1937 Schenck received the decoration of the French Legion of Honor from Paul Bonnet, French foreign minister; also that Schenck was in daily contact with Hollywood, New York and London while in Paris, that he signed Gracie Fields and Monte Banks in London, negotiated for Jean Gabin, whom his company has just signed, and discussed possibilities of bringing the Marx Brothers into the company production group with him.

The defense established that Schenck spent far more on business expenses while in Europe than 20th-Fox reimbursed him for.

Carol Hall, an accountant, goes on the stand tomorrow, with James Farley scheduled to be called Thursday.

The defense will take 10 days to two weeks before it concludes its side of the case.

He and Miss Parrish will make a duet on 'Let's Love Again,' by Carter and Rosen.

Indie Outfit Gets Go Sign From SAG After Pact Sigging

The ban on Sunshine Productions, Inc., was lifted yesterday when the company sponsors signed a contract with the Screen Actors Guild. The SAG boom was lowered Monday when it was learned the company, said to be fronted by Ted Lloyd, New York radio tradepaper columnist, was shooting a newsreel version of a radio program at Columbia Broadcasting studio without paying the wage minimums required for actors.

The SAG, in announcing the settlement, stated: 'Sunshine Productions, Inc., has signed a contract with the Screen Actors Guild. The Guild on Monday, March 31, halted production work by this company on a newsreel version of a radio program in which Jimmie Fidler was the announcer, which was being shot at a Hollywood radio studio. The Guild withdrew all actors from the production because of the failure of the company to sign a contract. Under the contract just signed, Sunshine Productions, Inc., will respect the Guild-Producer contract minimums and other conditions of the basic agreement which covers all motion picture production.'

Lloyd is understood to have produced a similar version in New York and to have stated he had made arrangements for Paramount release.

C. J. Hyans reported on the Federated Amusement and Allied Crafts, and how membership in the organization has aided AGVA in organizing night spots that could not have been reached otherwise. He read a long list of houses that have signed with AGVA since the working agreement with other amusement crafts was formed.

sanctuary, a retreat some 20 miles from Washington. The scene is skillfully intertwined with a sub-romance. The heavy is a penniless house guest, a Rumanian count, which Coulouris so expertly portrays.

Bronchial audience made a slow first act a bit of hazard. But once the play swung into its stride, with its strong second act and socko third stanza, it almost parred the rave enconiums 'Watch On the Rhine' elicited in Baltimore last week. True, the buildup was a shade too much, but then few shows come to Broadway so heavily touted and match the advance raves. Nonetheless, 'Watch On the Rhine' is a worthy new drama and Herman Shumlin has a hit. It's a cinch for pictures.

Others in the cast are John Lodge, Helen Trenholme, Eda Heinemann, Anne Blyth, Peter Hernandez, Frank Wilson and Eric Roberts. Setting was done by Jo Meilziner. Helene Shumlin did the costumes.

The SCG is seeking minimum wage scales, hours and conditions for the employes who voted 100% to designate the Guild as their collective bargaining representative. One of the major points to be decided will be in limiting the number of apprentices to be used.

Dates for opening negotiations with Leo Schlesinger and Screen Gems will be fixed the first of next week.

Hollywood Inside

HUGH HERBERT is the only man on the Universal lot who can park his car wherever he pleases. Top executives have spaces reserved for their automobiles, but haven't got the freedom of the grounds. Herbert, currently in 'Hello Sucker,' has been violating the strictest of studio rules, parking his car in front of his bungalow, the stage, or any place but the parking lot. Irate studio cops, if the key was left in the lock, drove the car to the lot; if it wasn't they hunted out the actor and made him fork over the key. Yesterday Herbert approached David S. Garber, manager of operations. Herbert buttered Garber with compliments about the neatness of the studio, then produced pen and paper and asked for his autograph. Garber, proud of the actor's request, complied. Herbert then had the rest of the sheet filled with instructions, typed by a conspiratorial stenographer, to all cops, ordering them to allow the actor's car to have the run of the studio.

TITLE of 'In The Navy' has been switched by Universal to 'Abbott and Costello in the Navy.' Names of the comics are figured to be sure fire at the box office after the reception of them in 'Buck Privates.' 'Oh Charlie,' which they recently completed, will not be released until after release of 'Navy,' the studio believing that it should follow the two military pictures. Budget on 'Oh, Charlie' has also been increased and several scenes will be added, including one production number based on George Gershwin's 'Rhapsody In Blue.' Warners recently announced plans for making a story of Gershwin's life, to include all of the American composer's music. 'Rhapsody In Blue,' however, has been owned by Universal for some time.

AN IMPORTANT production problem solved by Ted Reed in directing 'Her First Beau' at Columbia, is being utilized by a number of other studios. Reed figured a way to get around the expense involved in making long shots of street scenes, or shots out of office windows. He also found a method that put people into these scenes so the scenes wouldn't look static and false. Although painted backdrops or miniature buildings were retained for the scenes Reed used midgets to walk through, keeping the long shots with humans in perfect perspective. Universal adopted the idea for 'The Flame of New Orleans,' then Lewis Milestone annexed the technique for scenes in 'My Life With Caroline' at RKO.

ACTION of the Producers in removing standby painters and placing them on a six-hour basis is causing considerable jealousy among picture directors and cameramen. It is claimed that top ranking directors and cameramen on major productions are being given standby painters, but that lensers and directors on smaller productions are required to get along without a standby painter, having to call the paint shop and wait until a man can be sent over whenever a set has to be touched up. Boys not in on the gravy claim they do not get painters as familiar with the situation as the regular standbys, and have to spend considerable time explaining how the work should be done.

NEGOTIATIONS between the Screen Writers Guild and Producers will be resumed tomorrow. By GEORGE E. PHAIR

They taught the kids the hard old way in simple days of yore
When primal education was a tough and thankless chore.
Arithmetic and spelling kept the lads at work all day
While sparrows chirped outside the door and lilacs bloomed in May.

There was no relaxation then to soothe the youthful brow
Nor cinematic training, as the kids are getting now.
Your old man trudged his weary way to school with spirits low,
But now the pupils romp to see a motion picture show.

Power Dive

William Pine and William C. Thomas production for Paramount release. Stars Richard Arlen and Jean Parker. Supporting cast: Helen Mack, Roger Pryor, Don Castle, Cliff Edwards, Billy Lee, Thomas Ross, Louis Jean Heydt, Pat West. Directed by James Hogan. Produced by William C. Thomas. Associate producer, John Rogers. Screenplay by Maxwell Shane and Edward Churchill, based on a story by Paul Franklin. Camera, John Alton. Sound recording, Farrell Redd. Edited by Robert Crandall. Art direction, F. Paul Sylos. Previewed April 2. Running time: 68 mins.

William Pine and William C. Thomas have no need for apologies for their initial Paramount feature. In 'Power Dive', first of a series of three pictures of the flying game, produced under the banner of Picture Corporation of America, they have turned out a down-to-earth film, replete with thrills and containing enough suspense, coupled with romance, to satisfy even the most exacting of cinema fans.

Produced on a very nominal budget, 'Power Dive' merits rating with some of the much more expensive pictures released on the Paramount program, and while there are no real 'draw' names in the cast, the personnel comprises seasoned players who give everything they possess to make the finished product one that exhibitors everywhere will find an excuse for playing.

This picture marks the screen debut of Don Castle, who has been entrusted with the second male lead, and he more than makes good, auguring well for future plans which Par has in store for him. Dick Arlen and Jean Parker are given star billing, and rightly so, but several of the supporting cast run a close race for top honors.

Yarn is built around the airplane test game, with Arlen as the ace of plane testers and Castle as his younger brother who aspires to the glory and plaudits which flying of this nature brings. Miss Parker portrays the enthusiastic daughter of a blind inventor of a plastic machine which is constructed by Roger Pryor, the plane builder, only after another of his ace testers, Louis Jean Heydt, has crashed and met death in a ship of his own invention.

Arlen is loath to have his kid brother take up the flying game, but the youngster has fallen for the charms of Miss Parker and finally emerges with plenty of honor heaped upon him. Most of the comedy is provided by Cliff Edwards, Arlen's mechanic, and Thomas Ross does a capable job as the blind designer who lives to see his invention accepted by the government.

Helen Mack, seen on the screen for the first time in many moons, portrays the wife of Heydt, and gives a restrained, though highly acceptable performance, and Billy Lee, as their son, is satisfactory. Pat West has a small bit as a mechanic at the flying field, and as usual handles the part adequately.

Performances of Arlen, Miss Parker and Castle are outstanding, particularly the latter, who not only has an exceptional personality to offer screen fans but is long on looks and histrionic ability. He should go a long way. Roger Pryor is the plane manufacturer, and while his performance tends somewhat toward the lighter vein, he is satisfactory in the portrayal.

An excellent directorial job has been turned in by James Hogan, who has overlooked nothing to give the production everything that a small-budget picture can possibly have. Not once does he slip up on even the most minute detail, and the result is screen entertainment of the first degree.

Maxwell Shane and Edward Churchill turned in a convincing and comprehensive screenplay of Paul Franklin's original yarn, and John Alton has done a superb job of photography. Editing job of Robert Crandall is without a flaw.

Summed up, 'Power Dive' is the sort of screen material that exhibitors, once they have gotten behind it and given it the proper selling angles, should cash in on and at the same time give patrons plenty in the way of screen entertainment.

PCC Convention Committee Here (15) To Frame Program

tended to the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, headed by Ed Kuykendall as prexy, to meet simultaneously with the Pacific Coast group, the first time in the industry's history locally that two exhibitor bodies, with, however, somewhat divergent ideas, will unit for a good-will gathering such as is proposed.

Program as tentatively set, and which will in all probability be carried out to the letter, calls for the PCCITO to hold its individual business and open forum sessions of its conference on the mornings of June 9-10-11, while the MPTOA sessions, which will be more in the nature of talks by industry leaders, will be held on the afternoons of those days. Social activities of both organizations will be combined. Thus the viewpoints of both organizations on all matters affecting independent exhibitors will be individually expressed during the separate business sessions.

The trustees of the PCC have developed a definite, concrete program which, together with the recent appointment of Albert J. Law as general counsel, is expected to develop to the best interests of all indie theatre owners on the Pacific Coast, and their business sessions therefore will be devoted to that undivided interest.

The consent decree, together with other matters of vital interest to indie exhibs on the Coast is the objective of Law's current trip to Washington and New York. It is the intention of the PCC trustees to give all indie theatre men on the Pacific Coast a complete report at its convention on the results accomplished by Law, the officers and trustees of the exhibitor organization.

Writer Sues Cowan, Ronell for $15,000 On Par's 'Music'

Arthur Robinson, writer on musical subjects, filed a $15,000 damage suit yesterday in Superior court, charging piracy of his story in the Paramount picture, 'There's Magic In Music,' formerly 'The Hard Boiled Canary.' Defendants are Lester Cowan, independent producer, and his wife, Ann Ronell, song writer.

Robinson contends he wrote the original story, based on the activities of youngsters in the musical camp at Interlochen, Mich., and turned it over to Cowan. Later, he charges, it was sold to Paramount and credited to Ann Ronell, who was in Europe at the time, according to the complaint.

Plaintiff states he collaborated on data for the story with Joseph E. Maddy, musical director at the Interlochen camp. He is represented in the suit by Morton E. Feiler.

Industry Tributes Father Flanagan At Studio Fete

Father Edward J. Flanagan, founder of Boys Town, Neb., and whose work has inspired two pictures at Metro, was honored yesterday at a testimonial luncheon given at the studio by Louis B. Mayer for more than 300 picture people, church dignitaries, social workers and public officials.

Father Flanagan expressed his gratitude to the studio for making 'Boys Town' and 'Men of Boys Town'. He spoke humbly of the great work he is doing in rehabilitating errant youngsters and pleaded with those at the luncheon to heed the plight of 'the neglected, unwanted and unloved boy who has become a serious problem in our society . . . His bruised and tortured heart must be nursed back to normal health through kindness, love and sympathetic treatment, not through brutality of physical and mental cruelty that is frequently practiced by guards in our so-called reform schools.'

Bishop James Hugh Ryan, of Omaha, Neb., also was honored at the luncheon. He praised films and said that 'the cinema has done, particularly in these last few years, a great deal to promote good citizenship, worthy ideals and sound democratic thinking.'

James E. West, head of the Boy Scouts of America, also spoke, lauding the great work of Father Flanagan and tossing another bouquet at Metro and the industry. Archbishop John J. Cantwell and Mayor Fletcher Bowron were among the guests.

Spencer Tracy and Mickey Rooney, stars of 'Men of Boys Town', did a scene from the picture. Kathryn Grayson was magnificent in singing three numbers. The St. Luke's Boys Choir also sang. Metro's recording orchestra, conducted by Nat Finston, accompanied Miss Grayson and the choir.

Among the picture folk present were Ben Goetz, Harry Ginsberg, Samuel Goldwyn, Sam Katz, Harry Cohn, John W. Considine, Harry Rapf, Norma Shearer, Walter Wanger, H. M. KELLY SETS UA SALES PLAN WITH PRODUCERS gauged upon the income that the exhib gets from playing them.

It was undecided yesterday whether David O. Selznick, who is to produce two, will release them on the new basis. Selznick was the only UA producer not at the meeting yesterday. However, he conferred with Kelly prior to the session.

Those who attended the meeting with Kelly in the Alexander Korda office lot in General Service Studios, besides Korda, were Edward Small, David Loew, Richard A. Rowland, Sol Lesser, Hal Roach, Walter Wanger and Henry Henigson, latter representing Globe Productions.

Small has five pictures scheduled for the new season besides 'Corsican Brothers,' which was a 1940-41 commitment; Wanger will make three, Korda likewise, Roach possibly three and others one or two with the possible exception of Globe whose future production policy has not been determined.

The producers do not want to give the impression that the plan is block booking, as UA has always sold each picture individually, but under new plan want to give exhib a minimum product assurance, without having him feel that he is buying a block package of the company product.

Kelly plans returning to New York today and will announce the new selling plan at the initial UA convention in New York on April 14.

Auditors Tell Court Government Owes Schenck Money

New York, April 2.—Testimony that Joseph M. Schenck overpaid his income tax in 1937 instead of paying too little was given in Federal court here today by two auditors, Carol F. Hall and Myron Fink. The latter testified that the government really owed Schenck $55,442.

U. S. Attorney Mathias Correa fought against admission of the figures, but Judge Grover Moscowitz allowed them, after it was shown they were based on exhibits already in evidence, including books of the 20th-Fox company.

Dr. Attilio H. Giannini, retired banker, testified as a character witness for the film executive, stating he knew Schenck for 22 years and that his reputation for 'forthright honesty and outright integrity' was 'very good'.

Dennis O'Brien, of O'Brien, Driscoll and Taftery, testified for Joseph Moskowitz. He said he knew him for 15 years and that his reputation was 'excellent'.

Hall and Fink will be cross-examined tomorrow, with James Farley, former postmaster general, appearing as a character witness.

Schenck and Moskowitz are on trial charged with failure to make proper income tax returns.

Mary Pickford, ill in St. Vincent's hospital here, stated she regretted exceedingly that she would not be able to go to New York to testify for Joseph M. Schenck. She said 'Mr. Schenck is generous and honorable and sympathetic to all those who need his support.'

to arrange meetings with the various unions. Monday (7) has been tentatively set as a deadline.

Studio executives, however, are known to have already contacted Joseph Tuohy, business representative of Studio Transportation Drivers Local 399, and offered to negotiate. Unionists said this indicated a switch in procedure by the studio, but added none of the unions would sign until they all had presented their contracts.

Walter Spreckels, regional director of the National Labor Relations Board, spent some time in conference with Walt Disney and Gunther Lessing, general counsel for the company. It is understood that Edmund D. Hannan, prexy of the Society of Motion Picture Film Editors; John W. Lehners, business representative of the group, and Attorney Leonard S. Janofsky also sat in on the parley. The Society recently filed charges with the NLRB accusing Disney of unfair labor practices.

Spreckels stated he acted merely in the hopes of bringing about an amicable agreement that would eliminate the necessity for long and costly litigation. He said it was the duty of the NLRB to arrange such a settlement wherever possible.

It is reported, however, that Disney and Lessing were advised their knowledge of labor affairs was so slight as to make it difficult for them to handle negotiations in the present cases. It was suggested to Disney several times yesterday that he call in some labor expert in whom he could place confidence to handle relations with the unions.

Lessing is understood to have stated that reports that he had ignored the union were erroneous. He was quoted as having stated he was perfectly willing to talk with the crafts, but that his time had been so occupied with other matters he had not had time to arrange meetings with them.

While it was generally felt that yesterday's conferences had somewhat cleared the atmosphere, the showdown will come today when the union leaders ask the studio executives for conferences. Aubrey Blair, AFofL international organizer and representative here for Meyer Lewis, western director of the AFofL, is acting as contact for the unionists. He is being aided by George E. Bodle, attorney for the Screen Cartoonists Guild, which claims to represent a big majority of the Disney workers; Herbert Sorrell, business representative of Moving Picture Painters Local 644, and other AFofL tops.

REPORT 'LITTLE FOXES' ONE OF FIRST IN DEAL

There is a likelihood that both Samuel Goldwyn and David O. Selznick will align with Warners for the latter to release their output of pictures. Goldwyn likely will start with the new season, 'The Little Foxes' being his first picture, while Selznick would fulfill his United Artists commitment of two pictures before entering into any contractual relations with Warners.

Though there has been considerable talk since Goldwyn relinquished his UA holdings that he might continue to release his forthcoming productions through that company, it is known that Goldwyn, who had tenta-

Gloria Swanson Starts RKO Tests Tomorrow

Gloria Swanson will start making clothes and scene tests at RKO tomorrow for femme lead in 'Father Takes a Wife' opposite Adolphe Menjou. Tests will run several days. Picture calls for 18 costume changes with Miss Swanson to have half a dozen or more to display during test making. J. R. McDonough will produce the picture which is slated to start April 14, but to date no director has been assigned. Should the Swanson deal not go through, RKO, it is said, would use Signe Hasso in the role.

Chick, the RKO Hirsute Snipper, Does a Lip Preview of 'Kane'

'Citizen Kane,' which has had the longest projection-room engagement of any picture to come out of Hollywood, now numbers its audience of select names between 1,200 and 1,500. Wednesday night picture played to another free audience of around 170, using two projection rooms to reveal the screen appearance of Producer-director-writer-actor Orson Welles to the invitees, which included production names, actors, flacks from other lots and Chick, the RKO barber who plies his shears on the Wellesian locks.

Hollywood Inside

NETWORK and agency production execs are not taking too kindly to the enterprise of a New York radio columnist who made a deal with Paramount to deliver a series of one-reelers showing the inner workings of radio. Two of the shorts have already been made, the last at CBS here which had a few unpleasant repercussions when the promoting lad tried to cuffo the talent but was stopped cold by Screen Actors Guild. Idea behind the series is to expose the inner workings of radio, such as script preparation, sound effects and production tricks. Radioites hold that illusions of dialers may be shattered if they are shown too much of what goes on behind the mikes. They hold that it would be equivalent to exposing the trick shots and miniatures used in film making. Understood that representations will be made to Paramount if the series verges too close on trade secrets. Presently Paramount is the most radio-minded of the picture plants, being in the midst of a four-picture tieup with the Kate Smith airshow.

DESPITE the heavy loss of European markets due to the war, 20th-Fox is able to report, according to W. J. Hutchinson, manager of its foreign distribution, that foreign revenue is going up. Hutchinson says it reached its highest point last week since early last fall. This is largely due to accelerated attendance in South American and Asiatic countries. China, particularly, has proved an excellent market since the withdrawal of Japanese troops and concentration of Nippon's forces in smaller areas, thus lifting minimum screening restrictions. Although 'Down Argentine Way' met heavy going in Argentina, it did well in all other Latin American countries. 'The Mark of Zorro' also brought large foreign returns.

It is understood that an incident recently reported in Daily Variety, in which two top-flight actors participated, led to the nix on jesting. While one actor was singing the other went to a monitor mike, turned on the current, spoke into the sound track and ruined a perfect recording.

One of the world's oldest problems, 'Which comes first — the chicken or the egg?' is still puzzling Hollywood, where chickens are plentiful and too many producers lay eggs.

Translated into Hollywoodese, the question is: 'Does a star make a picture or does a picture make a star?'

Many a star, who has galloped along on a succession of good stories, suddenly stumbles over a colossal B production and finds himself tainted with b.o. which does not mean box-office. On the other hand, a good actor who has been bowed down by weight of woeful scripts, suddenly awakes in a sleeper and finds himself hunted by autograph hounds who didn't know his name last month.

Shakespeare contended that 'the play's the thing' but a lot of Juliets have laid eggs, and so have a lot of Romeos, contrary to biological laws. In pictures it has developed into a three-way combination of play, player and exploitation, with exploitation often romping home seven lengths in front of its wobbly brethren.

Film Previews

(Comedy With Music)

United Artists release of a James Roosevelt production. Stars James Stewart, Paulette Goddard, Horace Heidt and His Musical Knights. Features Charles Winninger, Mary Gordon, Jed Prouty. Supporting cast: Frank Melton, Dick Hogan, James Burke, Charlie Arnt, Donna Wood, Larry Cotton, Henry Rockquemore, William Gould, Aldrich Bowker. Directed by George Marshall. A George Marshall Production. Story by Andrew Bennison and Monte Brice. Screenplay, Walter DeLeon. From an idea by Haydn Roth Evans and Robert Brilmayer. Music director, Lou Forbes. Dance director, Larry Ceballos. Set designer, Hans Peters. Photography, Hal Mohr. Dance cinematographer, Harry Jackson. Film editor, Lloyd Nosler. Costume designer, Helen Taylor. Set decorator, Howard Bristol. Musical arrangements, Basil Adlam and Frank Devol. Songs by Henry Russell; Mack David and Vee Lawnhurst; Hy Heath and Fred Rose; David Franklin; Henry Russell and Lou Forbes. Previewed April 3. Running time: 85 mins.

James Roosevelt has a hit show in 'Pot o' Gold' as his initiation into the motion picture business. Lively, tuneful, amusing and frequently hilarious, the filmusical is a prime audience entertainment package. In James Stewart it has a top money name; the support is quality; Horace Heidt, the band man, comes through with excellent impression for his screen bow; direction by George Marshall is tops, and altogether the offering can be boomed and sold by United Artists among its choicest product.

James Stewart is posed as an impractical musician who gives lessons to kids in his music shop and is quite content with life as translated through his harmonica. His uncle, Charles Winninger, a hard-fisted money maker, accounts the boy a complete failure, and, for sake of the family name, pleads with him to come into his own business, health foods. Ludicrous circumstances drive Stewart into association with his uncle, where eventually he takes charge of the latter's 'happiness hour' broadcast. Stewart also steps into a feud between Winninger and his neighbor, Mary Gordon, a boarding house keeper, whose property the uncle covets and seeks to acquire. The neighbor tribe, including Horace Heidt, and their pals comprise a noisy but very efficient band whose housetop concerts just below the tycoon's office drives Winninger to the point where he thinks he's lost his reason. In the family also is Paulette Goddard, who quickly reciprocates Stewart's interest until she discovers his family identity. From then on, this discovery serves to keep alive the antagonism. Stewart and the girl finally hit on the 'Pot o' Gold' idea, taken from the Heidt radio broadcasts, to bring reconciliation between the two feuding groups and to iron out their own romance.

Stewart has a fat role and plays it with his customary ingratiating manner, his character winning unusual sympathy and chuckles for its whimsical contrast to Winninger's blustering toughness and irascibility. Winninger loads his role with skillfully managed comedy, highlighted in scenes where he is finally persuaded by ruse that he needs a rest because he believes the real music he hears is wholly imaginary. It is while the uncle is in the wilderness that the boy and the girl cut in to change

Scotland Yard

20th-Fox production. Features Nancy Kelly, Edmund Gwenn, John Loder. Cast: Henry Wilcoxon, Melville Cooper, Gilbert Emery, Norma Varden, Leyland Hodgson, Lionel Pape, Lilian Bond, Leo Carroll, Frank Dawson, Eugene Borden, Edward Fielding, Robert De Bruce, Denis Green, Jimmy Aubrey, Yorke Sherwood, Lester Matthews, Doris Lloyd. Directed by Norman Foster. Sol Wurtzel, executive producer. Screenplay by Samuel G. Engel, John Balderson, from play by Denison Clift. Photography, Virgil Miller. Art direction, Richard Day, Lewis Creber. Film editor, Al De Gaetano. Costumes, Herschel. Musical director, Emil Newman. Previewed April 3. Running time: 68 mins.

As ploddingly British in pace as any mystery tale ever made in England, but with just about everything in the way of plot, circumstance and twist in it, is 20th-Fox's 'Scotland Yard', the last picture Norman Foster directed for the studio before he took off for Mexico. Sol M. Wurtzel's production should do well in the secondary spots with the excitement of high drama against today's war background as strong selling points.

There is the angle of an imposter who is able, through the blessing of plastic surgery, to masquerade as another woman's estranged husband. There is a splendid portrait of the dogged, stubborn Scotland Yard man who never gives up the chase.

Story opens with a daring bank robber fleeing a Scotland Yard inspector and his men. Henry Wilcoxon is the gunman. Edmund Gwenn is the inspector. Wilcoxon creeps to the home of a bank director, John Loder, and his wife, Nancy Kelly, while they are expressing their mutual hatred. Loder is in uniform, ready to go to France with the British Expeditionary Forces. Wilcoxon commandeers the family car and steals a locket in which the pictures of the banker and his wife are pasted. Gwenn captures him, but he manages to get away, with amusing humiliation to the inspector.

The robber joins the Army, distinguishes himself under fire, is shot in the face and turns up in a military hospital. The artistic skill of a surgeon who copies the portrait in the stolen locket, gives him the face of Loder. Before the end of the picture the banker's wife discovers he is a fraud, but a charming and gentle fraud, and she goes on with the deception. The real banker is in a Nazi prison camp. A spy ring in London discovers the masquerade and threatens exposure unless the bandit cleans out the bank vaults for them. In a last minute denouement, amid the crash of an air raid, the reformed robber and his old enemy, the detective, capture the gang.

Edmund Gwenn does a clean job in the role of the clerkish but sharp-witted little detective. Loder has polish and plenty of masculine charm in the dual role, and Miss Kelly is more than competent. She does complete justice to the costumes, particularly to a pair of breath-taking lounging pajamas. Henry Wilcoxon, as the bandit before the face-lifting, is excellent in his brief appearance.

Herschel's costumes are splendid. Photography by Virgil Miller, and art direction by Richard Day and Lewis Creber, are excellent. Samuel G. Engel and John Balderston wrote the story from a play by Denison Clift.

The Great Lie

Warners release of a First National Picture. Stars Bette Davis. Features George Brent, Mary Astor, Hattie McDaniel and Lucille Watson. Supporting cast: Grant Mitchell, Jerome Cowan, Charles Trowbridge, Thurston Hall, Russell Hicks, Virginia Brissac, Olin Howland, J. Farrell Macdonald, Addison Richards, Sam McDaniel. Directed by Edmund Goulding. Executive producer, Hal B. Wallis. Associate producer, Henry Blanke. Screenplay, Lenore Coffee. From the novel by Polan Banks. Photography, Tony Gaudio. Art director, Carl Jules Weyl. Film editor, Ralph Dawson. Special effects, Byron Haskin and Robert Burks. Gowns, Orry-Kelly. Music director, Leo F. Forbstein. Orchestral arrangements, Hugo Friedhofer and Ray Heindorf. Music by Max Steiner. Previewed at Warners Beverly, April 3. Running time: 110 mins.

'The Great Lie' provides roles which are an actress' delight. There are two, about equally apportioned for emotional leeway and skillful requirements. And the film is a triumph of acting—and direction—over the basic material. Superficially, it poses the kind of problem women are interested in, having to do with maternity and husbandly love under strange circumstance; with jealous rivalry for a child born to one and reared by another of women who have been wife to the same man. This kind of story substance, plus the marquee magnet of Bette Davis' name, bolstered with good support, portends the kind of grosses which steadily support the Davis vehicles in the key runs.

The problem posed in the Polan Banks novel and the screenplay by Lenore Coffee is what a young father and husband will do when he is finally told, under anguished compulsion by the wife he loves, that not she but the other woman, to whom also he was married for a few weeks illegally, is the mother of his son. The situation is the result of a strange bargain made between the two women during the time when the husband, George Brent, a civilian aviator, is lost and reported dead in Brazilian jungles. When he returns, as one from the dead, his child, which he assumes was born to Bette Davis, is almost a year old. And now, still in love with the man, Mary Astor, a temperamental and expedient concert pianist, wants the child back because it will give her an advantage in the attempt to win Brent again in the long, bitter battle between the women.

The contest, the shifting advantage between the legal wife and the one who, finding herself illegally wed, returns to her career, provides some intense scenes but also shows the highly contrived and theatrical story structure here and there, despite all the artistry of the performers and the director. The narrative begins with comedy treatment of a drunken party interval, revealing the fact that Brent and Miss Astor are not actually married because her divorce had not become final. Brent then weds Miss Davis, and there is a period of idyllic happiness, beautifully stated on the screen by the lovers themselves and the reaction of their household servants, headed by Hattie McDaniel. From then on, the story treads more swiftly around the brink of tragedy, with some humor oddly realized from the hystive; Joseph Tuohy, business representative of the Transportation Drivers; Ben Martinez, business head of the Studio Plasterers, and Dave Lory, business representative of Film Technicians Local 683. It was announced that dates for further meetings would be arranged the first of next week.

After the conference yesterday it was announced that much of the misunderstanding between Disney and the AFofL had been cleared up. Unionists said that Disney executives had expressed a desire to go along with the AFofL program along the lines of other studios. It was explained officials had been hesitant to move until they ascertained the desires of the employes, some of whom are affiliated with an independent federation on the lot.

Labor leaders were preparing a time ultimatum yesterday for Disney to open negotiations when Lessing agreed to a preliminary conference with heads of the various crafts. The situation now is expected to remain in status quo until the first of the week when Herbert Sorrell, business representative of Moving Picture Painters Local 644, returns from San Jose where he is attending a state conference of the Brotherhood of Painters.

Blair, Sorrell and George E. Bodle, counsel for the Screen Cartoonist Guild, are expected to contact Lessing the first of the week to reach some agreement on opening negotiations with the Cartoonists and other crafts. Plans for a strike have already been drafted by Unionists, but all plans were shelved, at least temporarily, when Lessing agreed to talk with the leaders.

The SCG claims to represent a majority of approximately 700 Disney employes. The Cartoonists are now seeking certification from the National Labor Relations Board, but have expressed a willingness for a cross-check of their membership against the Disney payroll to determine whether they represent a majority.

The Society of Motion Picture Film Editors, an independent group, is seeking to set a deal with Disney. The Society has already filed unfair labor practice charges against Disney with the NLRB. The SCG charges Disney with sponsoring a company union, and claims officials have tried to intimidate employes to keep them from joining the Guild. William Littlejohn is president of the SCG.

It was reported last night that the studio might call in Victor H. Clarke as labor contact.

Teagarden at Par

Jack Teagarden arrived yesterday from Cincinnati and reported at Paramount to talk over band leader's forthcoming chore in 'The Birth of the Blues.' Teagarden and his musical group open an engagement at the Casa Manana tonight.

CBS DEAL BLAZES AGAIN FOR KJBS AFFILIATION

Reopening of negotiations between CBS and Ralph Brunton looking to a network affiliation with KJBS in Frisco was reported yesterday following a hasty trip here from New York by Herbert Akerberg, Columbia's station relations head. Brunton came down from Frisco for the conference, after which Akerberg stratolined back to New York!

Deal has been in the works for some time, following refusal of Federal Communications Commission to okay CBS buy of KSFO in the Bay City. Both KSFO and Brunton's KJBS have applications before the comish for power hike to 50,000 watts. It is generally conceded that the chain will play along with the site that gets the nod. Akerberg's quick trip here to confer with Brunton is taken by some as an indication that the latter's station will get the favored wattage.

New York, April 3.—Harry Fromberg, trustee in bankruptcy of Grand National Pictures, Inc., has filed suit in Supreme court against 20th and De Luxe Laboratories, Inc., asking $500,000. Suit claims the loss of 2,200 negatives of Educational Film Corp., of whom plaintiff is the assignee, in a fire at the Fox plant in Little Ferry, N. J., July, 1937, after negatives were given to De Luxe for safekeeping.

Answer to action makes a general denial and claims plaintiff is backing out of an agreement whereby De Luxe was willing to make duplicates of all destroyed negatives for nothing.

and yesterday delivered himself of some pertinent remarks anent Mr. Welles' maiden venture into films.

'A picture entirely different in technique from anything that has yet been brought to the screen,' he declared. Another point that Chick made was that 'the acting and the photography surpass description when trying to compare it to what we usually see in pictures.'

There was an unquotable phrase or two used by Chick when asked if he thought the picture was a portrait of William Randolph Hearst. 'What the —— difference is that going to make to the majority of the present-day theatre audiences, who, particularly among the younger ticket buyers, have heard little of Hearst and care less,' he said. 'In my opinion the story doesn't take any offensive liberties, and beside other men have been portrayed on the screen before this.'

Chick went on to say that 'when I walked out of the projection room I carried a deep impression with me of having seen something well worth-while.' Getting back to the Hearstian angle, Chick said, 'Of course, the picture should never have been made under the circumstances, but now that it is, what's all the shouting about. Go ahead and release it, but not under the title of "Citizen Kane," but as "The Picture Hearst Didn't Want Shown".'

Chick says that instead of having to sit through a whole string of titles and credits, picture opens immediately with action and all credit lines are used at the end.

Studio is now swaying between Monday or Wednesday as the date for a West Coast press preview with decision expected this weekend.

'Abbott and Costello' Starts Production At U Next Week

Arthur Lubin, who will direct Universal's 'Abbott and Costello In the Navy', returned from San Diego yesterday by plane after checking background shots for the picture. Filming begins next week.

Chief Petty Officer Hank Harris, from the San Diego Naval Base, has checked in at the studio to serve as technical advisor. Six songs by Gene de Paul and Don Raye were completed and turned in. The Andrews Sisters will sing four: 'Bring On the Navy', 'Gimme Some Skin', 'Hula-Ba-Luau' and 'You're Off to See the World'. Butch and Buddy will give out with 'Flotsam and Jetsam' and 'Starlight, Starbright' will be sung by the male lead, as yet unselected.

would pay $4.50 per month, $13.50 per quarter, and $54 per year; Third Soundmen, $4 per month, $12 per quarter, and $48 per year; Fourth Soundmen, $3.50 per month, $10.50 per quarter and $42 per year. It is estimated this would bring in more than $30,000 per year from dues, with operating costs now running around $26,500.

The special assessment, a flat amount per member, together with the increase in dues above operating expenses will provide sufficient money to pay off all current debts, including the $14,000 salary compromise which Harold V. Smith, 695 business representative, agreed to accept. When this indebtedness is wiped out, the new schedules will enable the union to put aside several thousand dollars each year for an emergency.

Notice of the assessment received by sound technicians this week states:

'Although you have been previously notified, this is to call your attention that the second half of the assessment levied against each member is due and payable. According to classifications now due and payable are the following amounts: First Soundmen, $12.50; Second Soundmen, $10; Third Soundmen, $8; Fourth Soundmen, $5.' Those failing to pay are liable to be assessed a like amount for delinquency under a resolution approved by the membership.

It also is understood that members have directed that about 100 members be dropped from the rolls for failure to pay dues over a long period of time.

the nature of his broadcast and to give the McCorkle band its chance. Paulette Goddard carries her part ably, sings and dances well. Horace Heidt, introduced casually as the leader of the amateur band, is easy and natural throughout and, with his band, gives out captivating music and displays an interesting screen personality. Mary Gordon carries on her violent feud with Winninger with amusing vehemence. Marked for good performances in support are Frank Melton, Jed Prouty, Dick Hogan, James Burke, Charlie Arnt, Donna Wood, Larry Cotton, Henry Rockquemore, William Gould and Aldrich Bowker.

George Marshall scores with all his seasoned directorial skill in seesawing the comedy and the musical numbers for full entertainment values, and, together with the cameramen, Hal Mohr and Harry Jackson, and the dance director, Larry Ceballos, gives the offering pictorial distinction.

Music is of top merit. There are several distinct hits among the numbers, which are equally divided, three and three, for Ascap and BMI. 'Broadway Caballero', by Henry Russell, is a pretentious reprise piece, used for rhumbas, tangoes and other terpings in the radio broadcast scenes. 'When Johnny Toots His Horn', a military number dealing with the throes of early army training, is bound to be vastly popular. It is by Hy Heath and Fred Rose. 'A Knife, a Fork and a Spoon' is, so far as this reviewer knows, the first song dedicated to the boarding house and extolling its 'homey' virtues. It has the swing and nostalgic note of a good college song, and Dave Franklin is the author. Choice also and novel, carrying out an exceptionally meritorious collection of numbers, are 'Do You Believe In Fairy Tales?' by Mack Gordon and Vee Lawnhurst; 'Hi, Cy, What's Cookin'?' by Henry Russell and Lou Forbes, and 'Pete the Piper' by Henry Russell. Music gets fine direction by Lou Forbes; arrangements by Basil Adlam and Frank Devol; recording by P. J. Townsend.

Stewart, as well as Miss Goddard, sings—and pleasingly.

Walter DeLeon has the screenplay credit, with story by Andrew Bennison and Monte Brice, from an idea by Haydn Roth Evans and Robert Brilmayer. Composite writing is a smart and well-knit job, standing up all the way, bright in dialog, amusing in situation, ably dovetailing the musical and comedic elements.

Larry Ceballos handles the dance direction, climaxing in the 'Broadway Caballero' number, with marked excellence.

James Roosevelt demonstrates in 'Pot o' Gold' that he has the precise kind of executive ability and the showman's slant and knowledge to qualify him for top rank among picture producers.

In addition to its own distinguished merits as a production, the picture has the added exploitation advantage of the 'Pot o' Gold' radio program by Horace Heidt after several seasons of continued popularity.

teria of approaching motherhood by the pianist and the careful nursing and coddling of the expectant matron by the childless wife in a desert hideout.

It is in these scenes where the one woman rations the other's cigarettes, brandy, food and guards her like a precious prisoner that much of the picture's novel comedy is engendered. This same novelty and freshness of detail is notable throughout the picture, a distinction shared by the scenarist, Lenore Coffee, and the director, Edmund Goulding.

Miss Davis delivers one of her most thoughtful and skillful enactments. Matching her, foot by foot and scene by scene, is the fine performance of Mary Astor as the hard, glittering career woman. The complementary job is a brilliant duet of difficult roles. If there is any flaw in either, it is that the innuendo during the duel of wit is unnecessarily broad in spots.

George Brent is equally effective in shading his role to meet the counter thrusts of the two women at his exclusive affections. Hattie McDaniel gives one of her memorable performance as the servant whose unfettered emotions are oddly utilized to express what is in her mistress's apprehensive heart. Lucile Watson gives dignity and sincerity to the role of Miss Davis' aunt. Grant Mitchell has an important part as the pianist's manager. Ably completing the supporting group are Jerome Cowan, Charles Trowbridge, Thurston Hall, Russell Hicks, Virginia Brissac, Olin Howland, J. Farrell Macdonald, Addison Richards and Sam McDaniel.

Director Goulding with admirable finesse guides the drama with just the proper pace to create the required conviction, even where it threatens to become obviously theatrical. He creates beautiful love scenes. His feud between the two women keeps up its edge. The comedy is smart and adult. The conclusion doesn't slop over.

Lenore Coffee's screenplay adroitly capitalizes all the dramatic entertainment elements in Polan Banks' original situation, provides fascinating episode, brilliant dialog and generally honest reactions amongst the characters. Tony Gaudio does a capital job with the camera. Max Steiner's score also is away above the usual.

Hal B. Wallis as the executive producer and Henry Blanke as the associate put showmanship behind a piece of exploitable merchandise attractively presented.

NY Suit Against 7 Pic Outfits Ends Out of Court

New York, April 3.—Suit filed by the River Theatre Corp. against the Skouras Theatres, 20th-Fox, RKO, Warners, Columbia, Paramount and United Artists was settled out of Federal court today. Anti-trust action charged defendants with having raised the clearance against the plaintiffs' Central theatre, Pearl River, Rockland county, N. Y., from seven days to 52-70 days after the Nyack theatre. A court ruling setting the original seven-day clearance had been asked.

Plaintiff had claimed the Central was losing $200 weekly and was a 'junk' house as the result of the raised clearance.

Mr. George E. Phair
Daily Variety,
Hollywood.

Dear Mr. Phair:

In a recent issue of Daily Variety, in effect you wrote, . . . "The path of a professional model often leads to a motion picture studio . . . but how does one become a model?"

You will recall my answer.

Now you say . . . "Simplest way to break into motion pictures is to break out on a magazine cover. How to break out on a magazine cover is another problem."

The same answer Mr. Phair. The problem may be solved here in this office.

Many of the magazine cover girls are selected by ace photographers and artists from dozens of our talented models, all of whom hope some day to crash the gate to stardom.

Sincerely yours,

DOROTHY S. PREBLE

Government Taking 10% Taxes From Benefit Shows

New York, April 3.—All benefit shows will be subject to the 10% amusement tax, it has been ruled by Internal Revenue Bureau. Charity shows, heretofore, have been exempt from government tax. Ruling states 'all benefits that pay any part of the gross for anything or to anybody in connection with the show must pay the tax either by adding 10% to the face value of the tickets or absorb it and pay the government the percentage on the total receipts.'

Action by the revenue bureau is the outcome of Treasury Department's investigation into the plethora of benefits of late, mostly for war relief agencies, and into Theatre Authority's and talent unions' disbursement of charity funds. Spokesmen for TA declared they are in accord with the move, contending that some of the coin collected for war charities should remain in this country. At a scheduled hearing will be determined the effect of the ruling on the Greek relief campaign sponsored by Spyros Skouras. Point has been raised that receipts from these shows should be tax free.

SELZNICK, GOLDWYN, WB TALK RELEASING DEAL

tive negotiations on with Warners to release 'The Westerner' until UA notified that company it would take legal measures to prevent the deal, has been interested in having Warners release his type of product, and credence to the releasing agreement is given by the fact that studio has loaned Bette Davis for the lead in 'Foxes'.

Besides her the cast will include Richard Carlson as male lead, Teresa Wright from the New York stage and Carl Benton Reid, Dan Duryea, Charles Dingle and John Marriott, who appeared in the New York company of 'Foxes'.

William Wyler is to direct, with production set to start April 15. This would enable Goldwyn to deliver his picture in the early fall for the start of the 1941-42 releasing season.

NO PERIOD DETERMINED

It is not known as to the period for which Goldwyn would enter into contractual relations for handling of the product, or number of pictures he would make each year. He has four or five stories ready for casting and possibly might make all those for the new season. It is known that Goldwyn, should he make the deal with Warners, who likely would participate in financing part of the productions, would continue to make the pictures at his own studio on Santa Monica boulevard. Understood that the possibility of the Goldwyn proposition was discussed at the current executive conclave in the Warners studio and indications are it may be inked within the next few weeks, after lawyers go over the various phases of the contract.

SELZNICK TALKED LONG AGO

Selznick first started talking with Warners several years ago when he planned 'Gone With the Wind.' Deal was almost at consummation point when a switch was made to Metro, with whom Selznick had been negotiating previously.

Warners is said to have offered both Selznick and Goldwyn a most attractive releasing plan. In addition both Selznick and Goldwyn would have further advantages in the arrangements by being able to borrow from Warners top flight names which might be required to head the casts of their pictures. The Selznick talking is more or less in the embryonic stages with Warners, and if it should lead to consummation it might take a period of several months to complete the deal.

St. Louisans Prepared For 3-Theatre Preem Of Rep's 'Hopkins'

St. Louis, April 3.—Herbert J. Yates and James R. Grainger have arrived here as the vanguard of the Hollywood party coming in tomorrow for the premiere of Republic's 'Sis Hopkins,' at the Fox, St. Louis and Missouri theatres. Judy Canova, John Wayne, Ona Munson, Jerry Colonna, Mary Beth Hughes, Lois Ranson, Don Barry and James Ellison are among those who plane in tomorrow morning.

Welcome at the Lambert airport will be followed by an official greeting at the City Hall, radio broadcasts, social events, the premiere and a ball that night at the Coronado hotel. Group will remain over Saturday for additional appearances for benefit of the Greek War Relief drive.

Picture's opening has been subjected to an intense exploitation campaign, covering two-sheets posted in all towns within a 100 mile radius; theatre trailers; cards in railway and bus stations; display announcements in downtown and suburban houses and nearby communities; plus cooperative ads in the Star-Times and other newspapers locally and in the surrounding towns. Five radio stations will broadcast arrival and other special events, including the Friday afternoon Greek War Relief show.

Moskowitz Declares Schenck Never Was Dishonest

New York, April 3.—Joseph Moskowitz took the stand in his own defense in Federal court today, denying the government's income tax charges, and attacking the government theories on tax returns. He traced his history from 1918 when at 18, he became an $18-a-week clerk with Joseph M. Schenck, who is being tried with him, up to today when he receives $1,000 weekly on a five-year contract.

The witness declared he knew Schenck well, that he esteemed him highly, and that Schenck never suggested in any manner, shape or form that they try to cheat the government or anyone else. Pointing out Schenck's generosity, he said, 'No one else could pick up a check when with him.' The witness declared that in arranging income tax returns it was impossible to secure accurate figures, since so much was spent that was never entered on the books, and that it could not be determined where business expenses began and pleasure ceased.

CITES EXAMPLE

He said that in all returns an estimate is used, using cash disbursements for example. The witness showed Schenck spent $38,000 in California, $18,000 in New York. Half of the California expenditures was deducted, none from the New York. Moskowitz pointed out that he might have erred in taking a little more off California than the government was willing to allow, but stated this was more than made up for by not deducting anything in New York and London.

Asked by Judge Grover Moscowitz if vouchers from California would not have given the exact figures, Moskowitz retorted the government worked on the figures for two years and still did not have them accurate. Moskowitz said John Codd, Dolph Schadler, of 20th-Fox and Loew's, respectively, made up the actual returns on figures he gave them from weekly studio reports on cash disbursements and yearly estimates.

Moskowitz said he has yet to see any classification of figures, adding: 'In all cases I took an estimate which I still believe to be correct on expenses not reimbursed by the company. I did nothing wrong. I had no intention of trying to cheat the government, nor did I cheat the government. No one ever suggested any such thing to me.'

FARLEY ON STAND

Prior to Moskowitz, who continues on the stand tomorrow, James Farley testified Schenck's reputation for honesty, integrity, squareshooting is 'excellent', and Martin Quigley testified as to the same for Moskowitz. Quigley denied any thoughts of advertising influenced his opinion of Moskowitz.

Other witnesses were Lester Mohne, 20th-Fox manager in Mexico; Myron Fink and Carol Hall, accountants. Fink disclosed that Schenck on March 12, 1941, filed an application with the government for return of his entire 1937 tax of $202,621. He said this action was based on a decision by the Treasury Department ruling dividends received are return on capital and are not taxable.

MONOGRAM SCHEDULES 53 FILMS FOR 1941-42

tions'. They will be 'Land of the Sky Blue Water', an original story based on the song by Charles Wakefield Cadman, and 'Navy Bound', a Talbert Josslyn story of the sea, originally published in Collier's. 'Blue Water' also will include another Cadman composition 'At Dawning', to both of which Monogram owns the exclusive film rights.

In addition to the pair of top-budget films, the diversified program will comprise four 'East Side Kids' specials, 24 Westerns and 23 additional general release features.

First of the four 'Kids' releases will be titled 'Ghosts In the Night', film featuring Bela Lugosi, Huntz Hall, Leo Gorcey, Bobby Jordan and the East Side Kids. The remaining three of the series, to be labeled 'Box Office Champions', also will feature an adult name player as well as the 'toughies'.

There will be 10 productions under the classification of 'Monogram Money Makers'. These will include 'Aunt Emma Paints the Town', a comedy drama by Harry Heruey; two Bela Lugosi starring films, 'The Night of Horror' and 'Kiss of Death'; 'The Spy', adapted from the James Fenimore Cooper novel; 'You Can't Beat the Law', bandit novel by Al Jennings; 'Trail of the Wolf', Jack London's tale about a dog and his fight against the north; 'Sweetheart of the Campus,' by Leona Dalrymple and published in 'Women's Home Companion'; 'Top Sergeant Mulligan', 'Down Memory Lane' and 'Here Come the Marines'.

SUCCESS SERIES

There are also 10 films slated under the heading, 'Showmen's Success Series'. There will be an action drama by James Oliver Curwood titled 'God's Country and the Law', and 'False Colors', a story of the race track. Others in this series will be 'Sunshine Sal', hillbilly musical comedy; 'The Fighting Cadet', 'Hill-Billy Willie', 'Lil Louisiana Lady' and 'Flame Fighters', latter based on the exploits of a big-town fire department.

Monogram will reissue three pictures of recent seasons. Mickey Rooney will be seen in 'Hoosier Schoolboy', and company will again release 'Boy of the Streets' with Jackie Cooper, and 'Siren of the South Seas' with Movita.

In the Western group Mono will again produce eight features in the Range Buster series, featuring Ray Corrigan, John King and Max Terhune. In addition, it will inaugurate a new series with Buck Jones and the Routh Riders. Completing the program will be the reissue of eight John Wayne features.

$3,000,000 ADVANCE

Predicting that the forthcoming season will be Monogram's greatest year, Johnston will reveal to the franchise holders that the company's sales quota for 1941-42 will be $9,225,000, an advance of more than $3,000,000 since the reorganized comany held its convention in 1937.

Plans have been completed, Johnston will advise, for a 50% increase in the budgets of 16 films and a 30% tilt in the appropriations for 12 others. In paying tribute to the sales force, Johnston will reveal this morning that the new sales quota and budget increases are based on the most ambitious program ever planned by Monogram.

New program, according to Johnston, will be built around down-to-earth stories with plenty of action and comedy. In an effort to capitalize on the 'friendly neighbor' policy of the Federal government, several of the forthcoming features will have South American locales and others will feature Spanish orchestras, dancers and songs. Johnston, in announcing the new program, also will reveal that a considerable number of the Westerns which company will produce for the new year will be planned to appeal to Latin-American film fans.

JOHNSTON PRESIDES

Today's activities, presided over by Johnston, will be largely given over to conferences between Mono execs and the franchise holders on distribution and production problems.

Among today's speakers will be Steve Broidy, general sales manager, who will outline selling methods, and Trem Carr, who will make a general analysis of studio plans. Tonight the conventioneers will be guests of Producer Sam Katzman at the Hollywood Legion fights, followed by a party at Charley Foy's club.

In attendance at the convention will be reps from Mono's 36 exchanges in the United States and Canada, together with a large delegation of home office and studio execs.

Castings for 'Blondes'

Jeanne Kelly joins the cast of Universal's 'Too Many Blondes,' which started shooting yesterday. Kernan Cripps and Doug Evans have also been placed in the musical.

Wm. Goetz at Desk

William Goetz returned to his desk at 20th-Fox yesterday after going to New York to testify at the income-tax trial of Joseph M. Schenck.

Hitching Post Takes Six Holt Westerns; 'Fargo Kid' First

Deal has been signed between the Hitching Post and RKO for screening of the six 1940-41 Tim Holt westerns during the coming months. Theatre opens today with the first under pact, 'Fargo Kid'. Also on the bill will be 'Wyoming Outlaw'.

Other western productions lined up for this month by theatre is 'Wildcat of Tucson' and 'Hidden Gold' (11); 'In Old Cheyenne' and 'West of Pinto Basin' (18), and 'Wagon Train' and 'Trail Blazers' (25).

Hulling in From Frisco For Mono Confabs

Mel Hulling planed in yesterday from San Francisco to attend the Monogram franchise holders meeting which opens today at the Roosevelt hotel for three days. Hulling is a partner with Howard Stubbins in the operation of Monogram Pictures of California and the Pacific northwest. Also planing in yesterday for the powwow was Don Widlund, manager of the J. M. Handy Film Co., who came from Detroit.

Reid Gets 'Scarface'

'Lady Scarface,' original by Arnaud d'Usseau and Richard Collins, has been placed on Cliff Reid's production schedule at RKO. Frank Woodruff will direct and Frances Neal and Dennis O'Keefe have been assigned the romantic leads.

Tunes for Dietrich

Frederick Hollander has completed two songs for Marlene Dietrich to sing in Warners 'Manpower.' Tunes are 'I'm in No Mood for Music Tonight,' 'He Lied and I Listened.'

Where Next?

Warners is lining up a world premiere for 'Underground' to fit the picture's title. Film is slated to debut the latter part of May at the Carlsbad Caverns, New Mexico, with party of Hollywood picture names, newspaper and magazine writers, photographers and studio executives in attendance.

English Pathe Manager Cites Calm During Nazi Air Raids

William J. Gell, Pathe manager for England, who planed in from New York yesterday to attend the Monogram franchise holders' convention, opening today, says that British film business, particularly exhibition, is going on as usual, in spite of the inconveniences caused by Nazi bomb dropping. Gell, who was given a cocktail party at the Roosevelt hotel by the Monogram contingent yesterday afternoon, stated that probably around 400 theatres in England have been closed by bombings, but that several of these have since reopened. British film audiences, he said, sit through performances virtually as they did before the war, and few patrons actually desert theatres when air raid warnings are sounded.

Only radical change from usual conditions, he said, was that in London all filmeries close at 9 p.m., but in the outlying districts houses remain open until about 10:30, the ordinary closing hour.

Norton V. Ritchey, Mono foreign manager, who planed in with Gell, is making his first trip to the Coast. He said that foreign picture business was good in spots, particularly in Sweden where there is still a lucrative market for the better grade of pictures. As regards South America, he was not as optimistic as other film execs, stating that he has found little in the Latin-American market at present to warrant undue confidence.

UNIVERSAL UPPS ABBOTT, COSTELLO 'CHARLIE' 25Gs

Universal is going to embellish and add more entertainment to 'Oh, Charlie', recently completed, starring Abbott and Costello. Around $25,000 will be spent to add a night club sequence which was in original script, but eliminated. Sequence will have Ted Lewis and his orchestra, also the Andrews Sisters. Will require about two weeks and work on it begins May 15. Lewis, currently playing Golden Gate, San Francisco, will do one-nighters for couple of weeks before coming here for the picture. Decision to add the scene was made following the big b.o. success that 'Buck Privates' the Abbott and Costello picture is making.

MINNESOTA MEASURE IN SENATE SHORTLY

Minneapolis, April 6.—By a vote of 104 to 3, Minnesota state legislature's lower house passed the Northwest Allied's anti-consent decree bill which contravenes the decree's groups-of-five sales plan by requiring distributors to offer the entire season's product, the same as at present, and also to grant 20% cancellation and to refrain from forced selling of shorts. Measure will reach senate floor within a few days. It carries a favorable committee report.

If bill is enacted into law, major film companies opposing it indicate they'll seek a restraining order and fight its constitutionality.

Louella's LifeBO Studio Much Too Chilly for Hedda

It was only natural that Hedda Hopper would want to see Paulette Goddard while the actress was rehearsing just a few steps down the hall from Miss Hopper's Sunkist broadcast studio at KNX. It so happens that Miss Goddard was preparing for a dress rehearsal of her guest appearance on Louella Parsons' 'Hollywood Premiere' for LifeBO.

Hollywood Inside

LOS ANGELES dailies, with the exception of the Hearst Examiner, have broken down on their national amusement advertising rate, and are now affording studios opportunity to take advantage of the national advertising rate, less the regular agency commission. What the new setup virtually amounts to is that from now on this type of advertising will no longer be charged the exhorbitant rate of national amusement space, but gets the same rate as general national advertising, with its slightly higher than the ordinary amusement tariff. However, dailies have agreed to allow the customary 15% agency commission on this type of copy, so that advertisers will not only get a reduced rate but the papers will sacrifice 15% of the total. First of the majors to take advantage of this new setup is Metro, which is placing space on 'Men of Boys Town' through the Donahue & Coe agency. Amusement advertisers, heretofore, have either had to place the advertising direct, at the higher rate, or pay the agency commission in addition to the space rate.

REPERCUSSION of music fight between American Society of Composers, Authors & Publishers and broadcasters is resounding in Hollywood Bowl, where Easter sunrise services Sunday go out to the nation over the Mutual span. For the first time in years the Lord's Prayer, with original music setting by Josephine Forsythe, will not be aired due to copyright on the music being owned by G. A. Schirmer Publishing Company, an Ascap affiliate. For sentimental reasons the Bowl committee decided against using non-copyright music with the Lord's Prayer as Mrs. Forsythe left an endowment to perpetuate the Easter services. Jeffrey Lynn will read Salutation of the Dawn at the Bowl services.

CAROLE LOMBARD has signed with the A. & S. Lyons agency for representation on picture and radio contracts. At the time of the Lombard-Myron Selznick & Co. arbitration it was figured the actress might go to the Nat Wolff office. Wolff is now associated with the Lyons agency and will handle all of Miss Lombard's radio activities and work in conjunction with Arthur Lyons on screen deals. Since the studios have learned actress is a free agent again with no future commitments with RKO, many have been putting forth both one-picture and term contract offers.

REASON behind James Roosevelt's trip to Washington is to arrange for permission from the British Embassy and the State Department for Sol Lesser to produce a picture around the life of Winston Churchill. Lesser, United Artists producer, has registered the title of 'Prime Minister' and has material assembled ready to turn over to a writer if Roosevelt's trip is successful in obtaining clearance. Present association of Lesser and Roosevelt is understood to reach only as far as negotiating an okay from the British government is concerned.

REASON for the clarity of Kathryn Grayson's voice in her first screen appearance in 'Andy Hardy's Private Secretary' is due to special insert in the regular release prints. To assure no loss of quality, the footage and sound track, running around 250 feet, were processed on fine grain positive film and inserted in all release prints. By using this method Metro sound and Laboratory execs have been able to maintain fine points of the voice and musical accompaniment found in the original recording right into the theatres where picture will play.

Department reports that acceptance for page displays with stories have already been received from several out of town sheets.

LANA TURNER was yanked from her guest spot on Chase & Sanborn program yesterday after J. Walter Thompson agency refused to make script changes demanded by Metro. MG Ties Sedgwick 'Ridiculous' is the password on the 'Miami' set at 20th-Fox, where Walter Lang is Simon Legreeing the boys and gals from dawn until dusk.

It is a good old story about the clergyman who prayed for rain, and finally the rains came and flooded the valley, leaving nothing above the tide but the little church on the hill. Presently the waters crept into the church and the clergyman prayed again:

'Oh Lord, we thank thee for the rain, but this is ridiculous.'

So when Betty Grable and Carole Landis and Bob Cummings are swamped with work, they go around muttering the cryptic word: 'Ridiculous.'

Film Previews

Sis Hopkins
(Musical Comedy)

Republic production. Stars Judy Canova. Features Bob Crosby and his band of Bob Cats, Charles Butterworth, Jerry Colonna, Susan Hayward, with Katharine Alexander, Elvia Allman, Carol Adams, Lynn Merrick, Mary Ainslee. Director, Joseph Santley. Associate producer, Robert North. Screen play, Jack Townley, Milt Gross and Edward Eliscu. Original story, F. McGrew Willis. Production manager, Al Wilson. Photography, Jack Marta. Supervising editor, Murray Seldeen; film editor, Ernest Nims. Art director, John Victor Mackay. Musical director, Cy Feuer. Special music and lyrics, Jule Styne and Frank Loesser. Orchestrations, Walter Scharf. Wardrobe, Adele Palmer. Dance director, Ada Broadbent. Previewed at the Studio City theatre, April 4. Running time: 98 mins.

Republic well justifies its position as 'the independent major company' with 'Sis Hopkins,' a vehicle that has served femme names capably in the past as an audience-pleasing comedy of a rural miss who has her ups and downs when she enters into a more material way of life. In this, its latest time around, the story is given its best production, some topnotch music, sterling performances by Judy Canova, Charles Butterworth, Jerry Colonna and others of the cast, and first rate direction by Joseph Santley to make it figure importantly as screen fare that will strike a responsive chord in nearly every viewer. The choice of Miss Canova to lend her appealing qualities to the title role was a happy one and can only result in building that actress into a film name to be reckoned with when box office receipts are counted.

Republic has splurged heavily to mount the picture with the utmost production values and the results compare most favorably with similar ventures by other companies. At times, though, this open-handedness reaches a little too far in its effort to endow the feature with every quality, and the trimming of a few of these extra contributions would result in an even more handsome entertainment presentation.

Sis Hopkins, the country cousin, is brought to the big city to live in luxury with her uncle, his wife and daughter. Sent to the same college with her snobbish cousin, Susan Hayward, poor Sis leads an hectic life until, after a series of misadventures brought on by the scheming of Miss Hayward, she convinces everyone that fine clothes and pretty manners do not a princess make. Jack Townley, Milt Gross and Edward Eliscu, in fashioning the screen play from F. McGrew Willis' original story, bring the piece up to date, inject modern dialog and garnish the situations with fun and laughter for a well-earned writing credit.

Miss Canova, in her own inimitable style, sells herself fortrightly to the public, making Sis Hopkins an appealing figure. Miss Canova's vocal and rural clowning gifts are completely turned loose for audience pleasure and will mean increased film following for her future pictures. Bob Crosby pleasantly portrays the rich young man who is the guiding genius of the college's annual musical show, which serves as ample justification for the introduction of the tunes and dance numbers. The Devil and Miss Jones
(Comedy Drama)

RKO release of a Frank Ross-Norman Krasna, Inc., production. Stars Jean Arthur. Features Robert Cummings, Charles Coburn, Edmund Gwenn, Spring Byington, S. Z. Sakall, William Demarest. Supporting players: Walter Kingsford, Montagu Love, Richard Carle, Charles Waldron, Edwin Maxwell, Edward McNamara, Robert Emmett Keane, Florence Bates, Charles Irwin, Matt McHugh, Julie Warren, Ilene Brewer, Regis Toomey, Pat Moriarty. Director, Sam Wood. Producer, Frank Ross. Original and screen play, Norman Krasna. Production design, William Cameron Menzies. Musical director, Roy Webb. Photography, Harry Stradling. Special effects, Vernon L. Walker. Art director, Van Nest Polglase; associate, Albert D'Agostino. Miss Arthur's gowns by Irene. Recording, John L. Cass. Film editor, Sherman Todd. Assistant director, Argyle Nelson. Previewed at the Academy, Inglewood, April 4. Running time: 91 mins.

'The Devil and Miss Jones' will prove a happy venture for the new producing combination of Frank Ross-Norman Krasna, Inc., and RKO, which is releasing it. Perfectly tuned to the present-day need for entertainment in a lighter vein, but with substance to back up the comedy, feature is headed for big business. For its star, Jean Arthur, who also is interested in the company, the picture is a solid success. For Charles Coburn it offers one of his most advantageous assignments, and that gentleman socks it home with a major delivery. In the direction, Sam Wood again rates himself as one of Hollywood's foremost craftsmen and the results spell heavy ticket sales and contented audiences for all exhibitors.

The basic theme—that of capital versus labor—is handled delicately and with a humorous touch in dialog and situation by Norman Krasna's writing. His material has been whipped together deftly, a novel opening used to placate the moneyed classes, and some gentle, unoffensive fun-poking employed against the laboring factions.

Charles Coburn, the richest man in the world, is having labor trouble in one of his many vast enterprises, a department store. He hires himself out as a shoe clerk to get at the bottom of the trouble and clean house of those vassals who dare rebel against the money lord. The adventures that befall the rich old gent in his sly spying cost him much of his dignity but change him from a stern financial tycoon to a mellowed, understanding character. There is a delightful play of character against character, the sometimes brief but important etching of cast individuals in one-sequence assignments, sharp dialog and brisk movement throughout to spell thoughtful and thorough realization of all the showmanly values with which the picture is laden. That these factors stand out is a credit to Director Sam Wood, whose handling of the picture as a whole, and of those separate sequences, each an entertainment gem, merits wide applause.

Miss Arthur brings to her role of the shop clerk in love with the young agitator a loveliness and ability that is hard to match. Her performance in the romantic interludes and the dramatic portions are skillfully natu-

The Great Swindle
(Melodrama)

Columbia production. Stars Jack Holt. Features Jonathan Hale and Henry Kolker. Supporting cast: Marjorie Reynolds, Don Douglas, Boyd Irwin, Sidney Blackmer, Douglas Fowley, Tom Kennedy. Director, Lewis D. Collins. Producer, Larry Darmour. Screenplay by Albert DeMond. Original by Eric Taylor. Photography, James S. Brown, Jr. Music, Lee Zahler. Film editor, Dwight Caldwell. Previewed April 5. Running time: 54 mins.

There will be no singing in the streets when 'The Great Swindle' comes to the screen, for it is distinguished by a definite lack of originality and a minimum of movement. The picture does not provide an adequate background for the virile qualities of Jack Holt. Action is confined to players making entrances (with 39 doors being opened and closed, by actual count, as the film unwinds) and there is no love interest. Picture is strictly for those who like Jack Holt in anything, but it ought to return Columbia's original small investment in the secondary spots.

With one or two exceptions in the cast, Holt is like a football player with no interference. He does very well with his part, but story limits hobble him in the role of fire insurance investigator. Jonathan Hale, Henry Kolker and Douglas Fowley do well enough in their respective roles, and Marjorie Reynolds is passably charming in a brief appearance before the camera. Don Douglas, Boyd Irwin, Sidney Blackmer and Tom Kennedy lend support.

Holt, investigating a fire in a warehouse owned by Hale, comes across definite evidence of arson. Hale is under suspicion, for Holt and his assistant, Douglas, take pictures of electrical wiring that prove the fire was started by experts. Fowley and Kennedy are really responsible, doing the job for Blackmer, who is the go-between for a mysterious Mr. Big. The mystery man turns out to be Kolker, an investment broker who stands to make a huge financial gain through foreclosing on Hale and taking over the insurance company employing Holt. Blackmer double-crosses Fowley and Kennedy even after the gangsters have stolen the incriminating pictures and ruined the physical evidence at the warehouse. Holt and Douglas are in the warehouse and do battle with the arsonists. Douglas later recognizes Fowley's picture in the rogue's gallery. Wire-tapping leads to the arrest of the four conspirators. The almost complete absence of romance is marked, although Douglas and Miss Reynolds fall for each other in the last few feet.

It is necessary to say that everyone concerned with 'The Great Swindle' does as well as he possibly can with the material. Eric Taylor wrote the story and Albert DeMond is responsible for the screenplay. Lewis D. Collins directed what there was to direct and Larry Darmour produced.

Donlevy Gets Horn

Brian Donlevy will portray a trumpet player in 'Birth of the Blues,' Bing Crosby starrer which is scheduled to start (14) at Paramount. Donlevy is now finishing up role in 'The Great Man's Lady' at Par.

Repent At Leisure
(Comedy Drama)

RKO production. Features Kent Taylor, Wendy Barrie, George Barbier. Supporting cast: Thurston Hall, Charles Lane, Nella Walker, Rafael Storm, Ruth Dietrich, Cecil Cunningham, 'Snowflake' Toones. Director, Frank Woodruff. Producer, Cliff Reid. Screenplay, Jerry Cady. Original by James Gow, Arnaud D'Usseau. Photography, Nicholas Musuraca. Art direction, Van Nest Polglase, Albert D'Agostino. Gowns, Renie. Film editor, Harry Marker. Previewed April 5. Running time: 67 mins.

Good and folksy, marred only by flaws in the writing, RKO's 'Repent at Leisure' can do alright in the subsequent runs, for it is a potage of comfortable hoke peppered with laughs, seasoned by some good acting and sprinkled with the deft production touches of Cliff Reid.

Kent Taylor, Wendy Barrie and George Barbier head the competent cast. Acting honors go to Taylor and some of the supporting players, notably Ruth Dietrich, Cecil Cunningham, Charles Lane and an uncredited baby. Taylor is especially pleasing as a simple young necktie salesman trying to succeed. Miss Barrie is quite attractive. Barbier gives his usual skill to the role of a rich department store owner in league with a daughter who wants a 100 per cent American husband instead of the comedy prince her mother has chosen.

Although there is a 'this-is-where-I-came-in' feeling about parts of the plot, those scenes satirizing the conduct of a great department store and lampooning the pomposity of store executives rescue the picture from mediocrity. Miss Barrie, as Barbier's daughter, bumps into Taylor on a bus as she flees from marriage with the prince. When all single men in the store are about to be fired, Taylor, thinking Miss Barrie is a jobless model, marries her, saves his job and becomes manager. He discovers his wife's real identity and instead of patting himself on the back for an amazing stroke of handsome luck in marrying the boss' daughter, he is deeply wounded to realize that hard work, honesty and loyalty to dear old Baldwin's department store have had nothing to do with his success. It is hard to believe, but he leaves his wife and their adopted baby, becomes manager of a competing store and tries to ruin his father-in-law. Barbier proves too shrewd, however, and a merger of the stores is effected, with Miss Barrie dictating terms to Taylor. When the baby almost falls down an elevator shaft, Taylor rescues him in the nick of time and the estranged mates are brought together again.

Frank Woodruff's direction does much to strengthen story weaknesses and Reid's production is enhanced by the art direction of Van Nest Polglase and Albert D'Agostino, the photography by Nicholas Musuraca and the gowns by Renie. Jerry Cady's story seems to have been written at even greater speed than he is noted for, but he does deserve a bouquet for the stuffed-shirt department store business. James Gow and Arnaud D'Usseau penned the original.

New York, April 6.—Hal Roach Studios, Inc., asked dismissal of the counter action in its answer to a $500,000 claim made by Loew's and the Metro Distributing Corporation in Federal court last Friday, declaring that contracts made with the film companies covered everything. Roach's suit is for $1,263,993, claiming that Loew's breached its distribution contracts with him by overcharging, failure to pay rebates, and other specifications.

Counter suit by Loew's and Metro charged Roach overcharged them on production costs and included items which were not legitimately deductible.

RKO Declares $2 Dividend on Its 6% Preferred

New York, April 6.—Directors of Radio-Keith-Orpheum have declared the initial dividend of $2 on the 6% preferred since new shares were issued as part of the reorganization setup. Dividend is payable May 1 to stock on record April 21, leaving $5.50 accrued and unpaid as of May 2.

Declaration doesn't mean that the company is inaugurating regular dividend payments on a $6 annual basis. By making this payment it is understood the company forestalls election of directors by a minority group of stockholders.

House, which has a capacity of 1322 will be scaled at $1 throughout, with benefit performance starting at 11 p.m. Show will be virtually the same as given recently at the Shrine auditorium. . . . P. Moskowitz Describes Schenck Tax Moves In New York Trial

New York, April 6.—Joseph Moskowitz continued on the stand all day last Friday under examination by Defense Counsel Harold H. Corbin, with his testimony blasting away at the Government's case against Joseph Schenck and himself before U. S. Judge Grover Moscowitz and a jury. Among the important points brought out by Moskowitz were that in 1933 Schenck was allowed $28,554 by the Government for expenses incurred in earning his salary, which was $6,000 more than he asked in 1935. That year, the first in which the Government makes charges of evasion, Schenck asked for $22,000 for expenses, but the Government was only willing to allow $167.

A letter from the Treasury department to Moskowitz in 1934 allowing the deductions of $28,554 was used by Moskowitz as a basis for the 1936-37 deductions, he told the jury.

Moskowitz pointed out that in 1935 Schenck had listed his net income at $138,460, and the Government examiner some months later declared it was $148,466, and asked for an additional $5,604 in tax, which was paid, apparently settling all disputes on the 1935 tax situation, until now, when the Government claims fraud. Moskowitz told how he estimated Schenck's expenses and how he gave his work sheets to the Government examiner who was perfectly satisfied with the deductions. When Leo Colin, treasury agent, started his examination again prior to the institution of the suit against Schenck, Moskowitz showed him how he could have deducted over $22,000, the amount asked, in N. Y. expenses alone.

ULTRA-CONSERVATIVE

The 20th-Fox Eastern representative stated he felt he was always ultra-conservative in his deductions and estimations, and could have taken far more if he had so desired He declared he had always estimated his own deductions and Schenck's, since no accurate amount could be secured, and no one had ever told him this was improper.

Moskowitz's own returns were introduced for 1933 and 1934 to show how he, who secured far less than Schenck, was permitted more for business expenses and entertainment by the Government. In 1933 he asked for $5,972 and was allowed $5,458, and in 1934 he asked for $6,128 and was allowed $5,780. At this time his salary was $32,200 yearly, against ten times that amount and more for Schenck.

Moskowitz denied having destroyed the 1935 worksheets which could not be found, and stated emphatically that no one had hidden or destroyed them for him.

He told at the end of the day of his negotiations with William Goetz for the sale of the Jockey Club stock for $5,000, and declared it to be a legitimate sale for property which apparently was valueless. Goetz took a 'flier' on the property in the hope that Mexico might rescind its anti-gambling law. With gambling out, the track was valueless. The witness continues on the stand Monday on the same transaction.

Crosby might not be correctly classed as an actor in the strictest sense of the term, but his name in the dance world and his screen personality are factors that can not be treated lightly.

Charles Butterworth goes to town in his role of the rich uncle, a retired plumber, giving both the subtle and broad comedy moments all the benefit of his best talents. Jerry Colonna, the dramatic professor at the school, never allows a chance for a laugh to get by and with his particular brand of fun keeps the chuckles rolling in to fully merit the assignment. Susan Hayward sings one number well and gives the 'meany' character a standout performance. Katharine Alexander, the aunt, is swell. Elvia Allman is another fun factor. Carol Adams, Lynn Merrick and Mary Ainslee lend personal charms and promising ability to their parts.

Joseph Santley's stage musical comedy experience stands him in good stead in the direction. He blends the comedy, dramatics and straight musical portions together with a skilled hand that takes the best advantage of the wealth of material assembled and adds another worthy credit to his growing list. Robert North's associate production job carries through every requirement in a showmanship style, thoroughly justifying the budget dollars spent.

Jack Marta's photography exactingly delivers in every phase. The special music and lyrics by Jule Styne and Frank Loesser rank easily in the popular class. There is a swell patriotic túne, 'It Ain't Hay,' the lilting 'Well, Well,' and the equally good 'Look at You, Look at Me.' Walter Scharf's orchestrations; Cy Feuer's musical direction; the dance direction by Ada Broadbent; the wardrobe by Adele Palmer; John Victor Mackay's art direction, and other individual production aids are importantly done.

The Devil and Miss Jones

ral and the lighter spots developed with a high comedy flare.

Coburn is a delight to behold as the rich man who sets out to fire the trouble-making employe but ends up by clearing his business of the real trouble-makers — the various people who hold posts of authority in the store. His first trip to Coney Island and the many mishaps that result as he finds middle-aged romance with Spring Byington are so easily played that no thought of theatric artifice intrudes to mar the natural-seeming proceedings.

Robert Cummings delivers what is probably his best screen work to date as the labor agitator and beloved of Miss Arthur. He is handed several priceless scenes, particularly the police station episode where he talks Coburn out of the hands of the law, that are sure laugh getters, and his more serious moments are as strongly sold.

Edmund Gwenn, a store section manager who also is the rival with Coburn for the hand of Miss Byington, romps away with a character that in less sure hands could have lost much of its slick flavor of fun, and menace. Miss Byington doesn't allow any of her footage to get by without registering fully and she ably helps in accounting for the picture's better moments. S. Z. Sakall, Coburn's bewildered personal servant, brings to the screen another of his perfect performances. William Demarest, store detective, wallops over the comedy character as one of the chief aids to excellence running through the picture. Walter Kingsford, manager of the department store, is another decided factor around which the story swings.

Montagu Love, Richard Carle, Charles Waldron and Edwin Maxwell are a laugh foursome as yesmen directors in the Merrick Enterprises. Edward McNamara, Regis Toomey and Pat Moriarty, the law trio which gives Coburn an unhappy moment during the Coney Island escapade, figure prominently in the results. Perfect bits are contributed by Robert Emmett Keane, Florence Bates, Matt McHugh, Julie Warren and Ilene Brewer, the latter with an hilarious job of a young girl being fitted for shoes by Coburn.

Frank Ross's production is of top quality. The casting, even to the smallest spot, is perfect, and the mounting garners every value obtainable from the budget. If 'The Devil and Miss Jones' is a sample of what to expect in the future from Ross's new producing unit, a profitable life is easily predicted. For the production design, William Cameron Menzies rates top praise. Roy Webb's musical direction is brilliant. The photography by Harry Stradling shows Miss Arthur to the best advantage and his use of the camera in a number of scenes brings them to life with realistic effect. Vernon L. Walker's special effects are a major contribution, as is the art direction by Van Nest Polglase and his associate, Albert D'Agostino. Striking costumes for Miss Arthur were designed by Irene. Sherman Todd's editing and the sound recording by John L. Cass are first-rate.

Hearstian Groups Up For Examination In Tarkington Suit

New York, April 6.—The Hearst Magazine, Inc., the Hearst Corporation and Hearst International Magazine are to be examined next Wednesday before trial in Federal court here through A. S. Moore, secretary, in connection with Booth Tarkington's suit against Warners for $100,000. Author's allegations are that the company did not base their film, 'Penrod and His Twin Brother', on any story of his, as credited.

Warners base their unique defense on the claim that the public associates the film company, rather than the author, with the fictive character of 'Penrod' as a result of the many pictures it has made concerning 'Penrod'.

ST. LOUISANS GRAB FOR 'HOPKINS'

St. Louis, April 6.—World premiere of Republic's 'Sis Hopkins' at the Fox theatre Friday night drew 25,000 fans in a milling group three blocks deep around the house to watch the contingent of stars from Hollywood. Net proceeds went to Greek war relief. Arrival of picture folk climaxed a day of crowded events which began when Judy Canova, John Wayne, Ona Munson, Jerry Colonna, Mary Beth Hughes, James Ellison, Don Barry and Lois Ranson arrived early afternoon on the Alton Streamliner after the special plane which was to have brought them from Kansas City was stormbound.

New Type Projector For Juke Boxes To Be Made Here

Production is expected to get underway within the next 60 days on a new type of film projector attachment to be used with record juke boxes. Device, invented and patented by Dwain Esper, will allow the projection of bands, musical acts and other visual entertainment in synchronization with music from records in the regular automatic phonographs.

Company was incorporated last week in Sacramento with an authorized capital stock of $1,000,000 to place the attachment on the market under the name of Pic-A-Tune, Inc. Concern's title will be changed this week due to priority on the name and a portion of the shares will be offered to the public.

New film projector attachment is understood to compare more favorably in initial cost and expense of operation than the many 'coin-in-the-slot' projectors now being placed on the market to replace straight music boxes, according to Jack L. Rau. Rau and his law partner, Arthur A. Desser, are counsel-members of the company.

According to Rau, attachment will be offered at around $200 and the films sold outright at $6 for a reel of six subjects. Subjects will be filmed on 35mm. and then reduced to 8 mm. Negotiations are underway for the filming of bands and acts during actual recording of music, although Rau states attachment can now be used with numbers already recorded where pictures of a band or singer are shown doing the same music, and in perfect 'sync'.

One of the chief advantages of the invention as pointed out by Rau is its ability to permit a patron to both see and hear a musical number of his own choice, individually, and for only five cents. Another is the fact that it can be used with current phonograph equipment without the necessity of scrapping present 'juke boxes', as the widespread popularity of the 'coin-in-the-slot' projectors would likely do.

New company has established headquarters at 843 Seward and will job out the manufacture of the automatic electrically controlled and operated apparatus. Model of invention is now on display at the offices and a number of others have been spotted around for some time for tryouts.

MIRANDA SPLIT BOOKING UNIQUE IN LA CHANNELS

Carmen Miranda will split two weeks' stage bookings in Los Angeles between Grauman's Chinese theatre, operated by Fox West Coast, and the Paramount, operated by Fanchon & Marco. South American actress has been booked for week of April 23 at the Chinese, drawing down $7,500 for her stint, in addition to which she furnished her rhumba orchestra of six men. Paramount date commences May 8, and stage show in all probability will be augmented for the booking.

In addition to the $7,500 salary for the star, F-WC will have to provide a standby orchestra of six men and furnish all stagehands necessary.

Split booking between two opposition theatres is believed to be first instance of such a date in the Los Angeles area. It develops that both Fanchon & Marco and F-WC were dickering for the 20th-Fox player, and Sherrill Cohen of the Orpheum also had a bid in for her services. F-WC, instead of holding out for a week for the player at its downtown acer, Loew's State, agreed to the F&M booking at the downtown Paramount.

Denver Arbitration Complaint Under Decree Dismissed

Denver, April 6.—First complaint filed with the Denver office of the American Arbitration setup under the consent decree, was dismissed by George D. Begole, arbitrator, after several days' hearing following J. J. Goodstein Enterprises' decision to drop the complaint against 20th-Fox, Metro and Paramount.

Goodstein complaint had charged the three defendants with depriving the Goodstein theatre, Longmont, Colo., of pictures and with selling their films to another theatre in the town in which 20th-Fox had an interest. Three film companies had alleged the complaining exhibitor was not 'reputable and responsible' and was not entitled to relief under Section 6 of the Consent Decree.

Abrupt dismissal was not favored by the three defendants, as they were planning to present their claim that they had never actually refused a run to Goldstein. A. J. Gould, defendants' counsel, also said that 'it is unfortunate from our standpoint that we could not have shown conclusively here that the consent decree was being used for the purpose of compelling the Fox Theatres to lease this theatre.'

Florence Eldridge, appearing as brother and sister, is glove-fitting in the lead roles. Allan Reed scores in a dialect part. Judy Parrish and Arthur Franz register as a pair of kids meeting their first big problem. Outstanding bits are contributed by Helen Carew, John Morny, Edith King and Doro Merande. Henry Hull's boy, Shelley, handles a bit adequately.

Excellent dialog carries a number of philosophical lines, albeit a bit soap-boxy. Good direction keeps interest alive, and physical end of the production shapes up nicely. Play will be pruned for spring tour and held until fall for Broadway.

10,000 New England Gawkers Slap-Happy at 'Lie' Preem

Littleton, N. H., April 6.—Presence of Bette Davis tripled the normal 4,800 population of this typical New England town last night when her latest Warners film, 'The Great Lie', was given its world premiere here. The White Mountain folk ogled at a trainload of newspaper men and women, mag writers, photographers and radio spielers during the day, then turned all attention at night to their newly adopted celeb neighbor and her new husband, Arthur Farnsworth.

While the film was received warmly by mixed audience of natives and outsiders, the reception for Miss Davis was the paramount feature, keyed to a birthday celebration for the star which developed into unique public holiday. While Warners practiced organization was evident in handling of the press accommodations and in the spectacle surrounding the opening night, the townspeople and their guests otherwise took over and made it more of a civic event than a preem hoopla. Some 65 press guests trained in from New York, Pittsburgh, Philadelphia, Washington and were given the run of the town, guested at an old-fashioned sugaring-off party, shot up and down Cannon Mountain by aerial tramway, treated to skiing exhibitions and to cocktails at the local theatre by Manager Jack Eames, with Miss Davis as hostess.

Torchlight parade, preceding the premiere, drew a mob of 10,000 gawkers, and the mob outside the theatre had the 80 police slap-happy. Corny local talent on stage at the Premiere theatre (seating 800) gave a charming atmosphere to the entire spree.

Governors of two states, Robert O. Blood of New Hampshire and William H. Wills of Vermont, and Judge Albert Billodeau, representing the governor of Maine, as well as Senator Styles Bridges of N. H., headed list of distinguished guests. There was a torchlight motorcade from Miss Davis' farm home to the theatre, and afterwards a birthday ball at the Town Hall, where Miss Davis cut a 95-pound cake and danced with Governor Blood.

Newsreels covered and Boston papers today gave it Page 1 attention. Opening was set by S. Charles Einfeld and Mort Blumberg, Warners exploitation chiefs, while details were handled by the eastern publicity staff, headed by Mitchell Rawson.

Proceeds from premiere and the ball were turned over to two local charities, the Littleton hospital and the Golden Rule Home for Boys.

Louella's LifeBO Studio Much Too Chilly for Hedda

dio C strolled Hedda, oblivious to any possible dagger-looks that might come from the stage where LOP was adjusting her glasses for another squint at her lines. Once in the booth Hedda waved jovially to a few friends on the stage. As Announcer Harlow Wilcox moved toward the mike, Producer Charles Vanda spied Hedda.

Blurted Wilcox, 'And now, the first lady of Hollywood . . . I think she has something to say to you.' But she didn't, not at Wilcox's cue. Vanda called for a cut.

'What are you doing here, Hedda?' Vanda wanted to know. 'Louella will not speak another line until you get out of here.'

Not being one to hang around where she isn't wanted, Hedda waved a farewell to Miss Goddard and departed as quietly as she came, without even a glance in the direction of LifeBO's 'first lady'.

RKO Will Roadshow 'Kane' with 3-City Opening Soon policy, trains in from New York today.

Press preview will take place in New York and Los Angeles Wednesday. Preview will be held here at the Ambassador theatre and in New York at the Broadway. Studio announcement said showings will be limited to the press.

Screenings will follow in Washington, San Francisco, Seattle and San Diego. Welles is author, producer, director and actor, although Herman Mankiewicz gets writing credit. Joseph Cotton, Dorothy Comingore, Everett Sloane, Agnes Moorhead, George Coulouris, Ruth Warrick, Ray Collins, Paul Stewart, Erskine Sanford and William Alland are in the cast.

The Welles contingent, pointing out that Depinet had failed to name the roadshow theatres, maintained a skeptical attitude.

Welles, according to inside report, will not make another picture for RKO until he sees what happens to 'Citizen Kane.' And, in any case, he is declared to have decided not to make the picture at his own expense, as he had said previously he would, unless RKO will let him film Conrad's 'Heart of Darkness.' It was on the understanding that he would be permitted to make 'Darkness' that Welles based his prior promise to make a second at RKO for-free.

Before the altercation over 'Kane' arose, Welles had stood ready to make a second without cost to RKO, even if it were some other picture than 'Darkness,' but he now is said to feel that RKO has not treated him with fairness, and all he will live up to is the strict letter of the contract. This provides that he must make one more picture, which will not be done until after the situation on 'Kane' clears.

Hollywood Inside

CONSIDERABLE speculation is being done by the 35 newspaper and magazine names who were personally invited by James Roosevelt to attend the Mexico City premiere of 'Pot o' Gold' now that jaunt has turned into an industry affair under the aegis of the Hays office. Understood that many of the news correspondents were telephoned by Roosevelt personally from San Diego requesting their attendance at the affair, but that now, right on the eve of scheduled departure for the Mexican capital little satisfaction as to whether their names are still on the guest list can be obtained from the Jock Lawrence publicity headquarters in the Hays office. With train bearing the special car engaged by the Producers' group to take a portion of the estimated 45 film, radio, press and photographer people below the border ready to take off tomorrow morning, Fourth-Estaters are still waiting to find out whether they should pack their bags or give the whole matter the strict go-by and aren't any too enthused about the vagueness emanating from Lawrence's quarters as to their status. Guest list of acceptances from members of the film industry, issued yesterday, so far includes only players, representatives of the Screen Actors and Screen Directors Guilds, the Producers and the U. S. government numbering around 22. This group will necessarily be added to by hair-dressers, etc., who will be required to attend to the needs of the players, and photographer. There will be few additional accommodations to take care of the press in the estimated 45 reservations.

COLUMBIA for the first time outside its occasional Frank Capra shows, is talking around the million-dollar figure for a feature. It's the Fred Astaire starring musical, temporarily titled 'You'll Never Get Rich.' While the budget is not yet actually set, Cole Porter is being brought from New York for the music, and Bob Alton, who handled the dance chores in the Broadway hits, 'Panama Hattie,' 'Pal Joey' and 'Lady In the Dark,' has been engaged to do the terp numbers in collaboration with Astaire. Piece is set up to be heavily musical and splashy, and is one of the first of this type elaborate filmusicals Columbia has tackled. Astaire is already at work creating his dances, with Alton. Rita Hayworth has the glam spot, and Sidney Lanfield will direct.

As a result of the new booking terms, player's agents are now asking $10,000 weekly for her services. Miranda drew a flat $6,000 for her week in San Francisco, and will get a guarantee of $7,500, plus a percentage over $20,000 at the Paramount, which booking follows the Hollywood date by two weeks.

Reaching for the Sun

(Comedy Drama)

Paramount release of a William A. Wellman production. Stars Joel McCrea, Ellen Drew. Features Albert Dekker and Billy Gilbert. Supporting cast: Eddie Bracken, Bodil Ann Rosing, James Burke, Charles D. Brown, Michael Duggan, Regis Toomey, Hobart Cavanaugh, Charles Williams, Nella Walker, Warren Hymer, Billy Fletcher. Directed by William A. Wellman. Screenplay by W. L. River. Based on story by Wessel Smitter. Photography, William C. Mellor. Process photography, Farciot Edouart. Art direction, Hans Dreier and Earl Hedrick. Music score, Victor Young. Editing, Thomas Scott. Previewed at Alexander, Glendale, April 7. Running time: 88 mins.

Off the beaten track, 'Reaching For the Sun' is a refreshing change from the repetitious similarity of much of the ordinary film material. Its romantic comedy and its fretful drama coincide with much of the commonplace, many of the problems, some of the fun of the majority who will see it. It has been done whimsically, but not without sound reality, too. Here and there, the principar character goes incredibly 'hayseedy' to keep the comedy on its preconceived level, but the picture is the sort of fable in which the occasional caricature will be forgiven. Grosses should be satisfactory and the entertainment please widely.

Genesis of 'Reaching For the Sun' was Wessel Smitter's novel, 'F.O.B. Detroit', a socially significant document of man against machine and the owners of machines against the men who tend them, but the screen story runs wide of this discarded original pattern. The amusing and at times intense film play by W. L. River pivots the action around one of those all-important trivial matters on which lives expand or may be wrecked. In this case it's an outboard motor which Joel McCrea, a clamdigging woodsman of Michigan, craves to lighten his labors and which stands eventually as a symbol of what he regards as his freedom in the open, in the untrammeled wilds where 'everything reaches for the sun.' The motor becomes a hated thing in the mind of his young wife, Ellen Drew, who, when their child comes along, wants to continue to live in Detroit among the machines where the young husband and his buddy, Eddie Bracken, work fitfully, but which to her seems to offer more of what a man should desire as the patrimony for his son.

After much wrangling, which finally reaches the split-up stage when the wife goes back to the dime dance halls, McCrea is seriously injured in a fantastic battle of giant machines, and the wife agrees that the country is best—a cottage on the wood-fringed lake and the purr of the motor, rather than the din and clash of city industrial life. The buddy, Bracken, who can't even sleep where the quiet is so intense, goes back to the auto assembly line, so everyone is happy.

McCrea plays his woodsman who can't be reconciled to the bright lights with broad humor, generally, and here and there a sharply contrasting moment of dramatic intensity. Ellen Drew invests her young wifely role with color and spirit. Bracken is so unaffectedly genuine and naively concerned in the happiness of his friends, rather than himself, that he is most sympathetic and appealing — a notable performance. Albert Dekker is a properly provoking heavy as the woodsman's antagonist on the machines. The battle between the two, one wielding a great steel dinosaurus, the other a wicked python of chains, is a terrific thrill. Billy Gilbert has a walkthrough as the crestfallen father of a huge family. Bodil Ann Rosing has a nice part as the girl's mother; James Burke as shop foreman, and Regis Toomey, Nella Walker and Warren Hymer are briefly seen to advantage.

William Wellman, who is both producer and director, here has a less prodigious job to deal with than most of his recent works, and welcomes the change with apparent relish. He jogs along amusingly with his fable-comedy, works up effectively to his big thrill in the machine shop battle and manages his thin pathos of a man's dream, persisting through all rebuffs, with sympathetic understanding. Pictorially, he manages to create arresting scapes, in collaboration with William C. Mellor's eloquent camera and Farciot Edouart's process stuff. Victor Young's music is commendable.

SILVERSTONE, KELLY TALK OVER UA PRODUCTIONS

proposed UA sales plan that allocates percentages on pictures played according to the amount they corral at the box office.

Reports were current that some of the UA producers were against the proposed group selling idea due to fact that the allocation for pictures in the top or 40% bracket would be limited to two. However, Kelly said last night that nothing had been done on the proposed new plan, as attorneys were going over its various phases for each of the producers, and that he hoped before getting away to have a concrete one acceptable to all the producers who would function under it. Understood that Dave Selznick is only one who did not agree to it, but that the others hoped he might decide to come in.

Silverstone will talk with Mary Pickford this morning, and then will attend meetings with others of the UA producers.

Also during the week Silverstone will talk with John M. Stahl regarding a group-picture deal financed by Stahl and released through UA. He also may discuss a similar proposition with Clarence Brown, whose Metro contract recently expired. In New York he recently turned down the proposition of Bill Shapiro to produce a picture co-starring Mae West and John Barrymore.

F-WC IN DEAL FOR 30 N. CALIFORNIA THEATRES

est. Skouras was accompanied north by George Topper, F-WC treasurer.

Present financial interest of F-WC in Golden State is around 26%, and it is not known at this time whether Skouras Bros. will acquire a controlling interest from the McNeil interests or make an outright purchase. Former deal is considered most likely.

In addition to the Golden State theatres, there also is a strong possibility that the Skouras interests may acquire a controlling interest in the T&D Junior circuit, which operates close to 60 houses in Northern California and a few in Nevada.

Takeover of the Golden State and T&D Junior circuits has been mulled by National Theatres and Fox West Coast execs for a number of months, but parties to the proposed deal could not get together. Now that the government consent decree has been promulgated, which permits a theatre circuit to expand for protective purposes, there seems no logical reason to circuit execs why proposed takeover of the Northern California filmeries cannot be worked out.

Reports seeping in from the east are to the effect that recent expansion and rehabilitation plans of Fox West Coast have come under close scrutiny of the Department of Justice, with its chief, Thurman Arnold, reported anxious to find out just how the Skouras-operated circuit contemplates spending the $1,500,000 to $2,000,000 program already announced.

In line with its protection expansion, F-WC has announced the early construction of at least 10 new theatres in California, and has already taken over the Fifth Avenue in Inglewood from Southside, as well as the Temple and Studio theatres from Cabart in San Bernardino.

Reports are current of other independent acquisitions by F-WC in the Los Angeles area, but these deals have not progressed to a state where any announcement can be made at this time.

Moskowitz Denies Hiding Anything In Schenck Setup

New York, April 7.—The Joseph M. Schenck-Joe Moskowitz trial for income tax evasion before United States District Court Judge Grover Moscowitz and a jury resumed today with Moskowitz still on the stand. He was subjected to a terrific cross examination by U. S. Attorney Mathias Correa who tore savagely and sarcastically into the witness in an effort to shake his testimony. During the morning session Moskowitz testified that he never hid anything, never destroyed anything and that he never discussed Schenck's returns with the latter and he had done nothing that he felt guilty about. He denied any attempt at conspiracy or attempt at fraud. He repeated his previous testimony that he only estimated his figures and did not have complete totals before him.

Moskowitz testified he used percentages based on his knowledge of what money Schenck spent in entertaining and what he spent in traveling on company business.

Under cross-examination Correa intimated that the New York books were inaccurate and disputed Moskowitz's claim that he never owed Schenck any money. Correa placed on the record an item of $71,457 owed Schenck for the purchase of 3,000 shares of 20th-Fox stock which has not yet been paid. He also asked if this was not done to eliminate profits from Schenck's income. It brought out that Moskowitz's brother Martin owed Schenck $20,558 for purchase of stock on a salary of $7,500 yearly. Moskowitz said that Schenck wanted his younger brother to make some money on the deal. He admitted Martin did not have the $40,000 purchase price required for the stock.

Moskowitz also admitted that he had told Correa previously that the loss on this transaction should be deducted from Schenck's earnings.

A battle developed between defense counsel Harold Corbin and Correa, with the U. S. attorney shouting that 'I press my point,' and Corbin answering disgustedly, 'I'll press your pants.'

The 1935 income was then gone into with Correa trying to show that Moskowitz could have secured actual figures on deductions instead of estimates if he so desired.

Cross examination of Moskowitz continues Tuesday, with Robert Kane, 20th-Fox producer from Hollywood and Schenck as the last defense witnesses. At the rate it is going the trial should last from 10 days to two weeks.

ROOSEVELT TO PRESENT PIC FOR UA

With his service in the Marine Corps indefinite, Capt James Roosevelt will not himself produce a picture for the United Artists 1941-42 program. However, he will present one picture for UA release in which Boris Morros will be associated with Alfred Hitchcock. Latter will be producer-director. Deal is practically closed. Film that would be made would be from the book, 'Hunting Tower', which Hitchcock has been anxious to make.

Should Roosevelt get out of the service before the end of 1941, he would then return to production on his own and contribute another picture to UA.

BROADWAY FILM MANAGERS SAY SUNDAY LEGITS AID B.O.

New York, April 8.—Broadway film house managers, after exactly five months of Sunday legits, now believe that Sabbath stage shows actually help the picture grosses. They figure most of the people coming downtown for Sunday legit shows are not film patrons, but may take in pictures if unable to get into the stage offerings, or in some cases are attending a film before or after the theatrical performance.

However, the neighborhood houses may be losing because some of their prospective patrons go downtown for the legit attractions and thus are lost to the film houses near their homes. The fact that most plays giving Sunday shows are dark on Monday nights is also figured helpful to picture grosses on that night of the week.

Hollywood Inside

ALTHOUGH Jock Lawrence is understood to have never been in either the Army or Navy branches of government service, some one has apparently acquainted him with the involved red tape tactics prevalent in these two government arms prior to the recent establishment of the Office of Production Manager, which has gone a long ways towards scissoring straight through to an objective. However Lawrence, with no experience in the art of red tape except that learned in the film industry, has sent studio publicity departments instructions as to the round-about methods that will be employed hereafter whenever a tieup with the defense program is desired. Lawrence's message said in effect that when a studio wishes to set a tieup with any of the national defense industries, the first contact must be with him. He, in turn, will give the matter to the film industry's defense committee, which will then refer subject to Francis Harmon. Latter, in his turn, will then take up the matter directly with the defense branch with which the respective studio is seeking a tieup.

BEING labeled the 'Shirley Temple of England' has worked in reverse in the case of Rae Pollet, 10-year-old English actress, who although having played in a number of British made pictures, as well as having appeared frequently on the stage, is not being given a tumble by any of the Hollywood producers. Rae and her mother, with two other children, came to this country when their English home was bombed, and some time ago the mother and the young player came to the Coast. Efforts to get work in pictures have failed, due, observers believe, to the fact that she has been likened to the former 20th-Fox moppet. Some of the British-made pictures in which she appeared include 'Things to Come,' 'The Man Who Worked Miracles,' 'Rembrandt,' 'The Immortal Swan,' 'When Knights Were Bold,' 'The Ghost Goes West' and 'Night Without Armour.' Player and her mother are virtually stranded here. They were denied permission to take any money out of England, and the father, who is in the British army, is unable to provide for their care.

ONE of the rare instances where a picture is able to start shooting with the first page of a script and continue through to the last in sequence is occurring with 'Abbott and Costello in the Navy' at Universal. After breakdown of the shooting script into scenes for actual camera work it was discovered most logical way to proceed from sequence to sequence would be to follow screen play right through as written. Because of this comedy's 22-day schedule should be hit right on the nose because of natural scene development. Opening day's filming yesterday had Director Arthur Lubin putting Dick Powell through his paces in a broadcast studio, using a total of 156 bit players and extras. Large extra calls are scheduled to continue for many of the filming days.

PUBLICITY head of a studio is reported as conniving with mag photographers to get still gam art into bootlegged layouts without subjecting pictures to the scrutiny of the Hays office. Praiser, when approached by mag bulber for stills which latter wanted to make himself, suggested that studio still cameraman actually shoot the stuff but that studio department would claim the stills were made by the outside lenser, thus avoiding the Hays jurisdiction, in case the matter came to an issue. And that's how it was done. Other department heads are afraid these connivings to evade, will tighten up whole system of art supervision.

WHAT seems to be the first piece of fan mail from a British prisoner of war was received yesterday by Warners. Message, addressed to studio publicity department, and passed by the Nazi censor, read: 'In order to decorate my room and make it more cheerful, I wonder if you would be so kind as to send me some full-length stills of your starlets, etc. I am a British prisoner of war and would be extremely grateful to you if you find this possible. Our life is rather dull.' Writing was on a postal card, which was signed 'C. P. Hulton-Harrop, Pilot Officer.' It was mailed Dec. 28, 1940.

SQUAWKS are already being heard at RKO over the publicity department confining the preview today of 'Citizen Kane' to the regular Hays office list, which was recently sharply trimmed. Figures such as the local man from PM, New York daily, and the head of the Jewish Telegraph Agency, are not on the list for today's showing. 'Kane' screening focuses new attention on the boiling battle (still in its politer stages) between the studios and newspaper correspondents who feel they've been given the run-around on previews.

TWENTIETH-FOX is mulling idea of plugging its film songs, especially Ascap numbers, in pictures preceding the one for which they are designed, in lieu of the radio prohibition on Ascap cleffings. Numbers from 'Cruise' would likely be used in 'Private Nurse' as orchestra or band offerings.

Retakes

By GEORGE E. PHAIR

Once on a time when Springtime sang her song
On greening hillsides and on sprouting flats,
You knew it when the young bucks strode along
In new straw hats.

But now it matters not if Wintry airs
Have changed to Spring or Summertime or Fall.
The young buck strides his heedless way and wears
No hat at all.

Hollywood has been accused, unrighteously, of the ruin of the male skimmer business, but the hatless idea is older than any film studio. It began years ago in the collegiate world, where the average student has a luxuriant thatch and an unluxuriant bankroll. Another check to the hat industry is the hatcheck.

Whether the public likes it or not, 'Obituary' is the last word in screen titles.

Baseball is growing more and more like motion pictures, with general managers and super-general managers trying to tell the ordinary managers how to handle the players on the lot. In the ball yard the customers want a good ball game, and in the film houses they want a good picture. They don't care a whoop who is drawing how much dough in a swivel chair in the front office.

Out came 'Reaching For the Sun' and out came the sun, which had been hanging around behind a cloud, evidently waiting for an invitation. The Hollywood influence.

Hollywood goes up and up in the intellectual scale. Yesterday's gag writer is a comedy constructionist today.

Directors about town have been kicking about the shortage of leading men, and Columbia comes to bat with the answer: 'Three Girls About Town.'

Some doodlers doodle with pencils and some doodle with type machines. Bing Crosby belongs to the type-doodling class. Here is a sample of his doodling, written with one finger while waiting for a Kraft Music Hall huddle:

'Mr. Carroll Carroll of New York City.

'Miss Olga Petrovna of Murmansk—a gay foursome at the Greasy Spoon on Thursday last, listening to the rollicking rhythms of Pancho Polesie and his Abandoned Eight.

'Mr. Harry L. Crosby, fresh from a wet week at Pebble Beach, California, can be heard nightly at the Boyle Heights Rescue Mission.'

If you are a psychoanalyst, maybe you can figure it out.

Demands for Labor Check at Disney To Studio Today

Demands to conduct a checkup of the Walt Disney studio to determine working conditions and survey the number of union members now employed will be presented today to Gunther Lessing, Disney executive and company counsel by representatives of three studio unions.

It was learned that the 15 studio policemen on Disney payroll were taken to the Burbank City Hall early in the week and sworn in as deputized members of that city's police force. It was thought move was made in anticipation of possible strike trouble, although practice of deputizing studio cops is regularly followed by other companies as an emergency adjunct to the regular law forces of each town in which a lot may be situated.

Meeting today at 11 a.m. with Lessing will include L. C. Helm, Studio Utility Workers; William Castle, Studio Carpenters; D. T. Wayne, of the Studio Machinists, and Aubrey Blair, Hollywood organizer for the American Federation of Labor. Group will discuss the Disney labor situation from the respective angles of the three unions and go into matter of the AFofL organizing drive on the lot.

Indications are that an amicable agreement on all points will result from huddles in the near future.

Last week representatives from the Teamsters, Plasterers and Laboratory Workers, headed by Joe Touhy, Ben Martinez and Dave Lorey, respectively, got together with Lessing in preliminary move. Understood that Lessing agreed with the group to cooperate in solving mutual problems that have arisen since AFofL drive was started.

Meeting between George Meany, secretary-treasurer of the AFofL, and Blair took place yesterday morning, at which time a complete report on the film labor situation was given Meany by the Hollywood organizer. Future plans for a continuation of the work already started by Blair will be laid out after Meany returns east.

'Willie' Fattens Gracie's Gag File, Spreads Cheer

'Brother Willie' may be only a mythical character but he's doing a real job for Gracie Allen and the post office department. Started strictly as a gag by the air comedienne, response has been so brisk that mail carriers are getting stoop-shouldered delivering the thousands of letters posted each week in army camps around the country.

It was while Gracie and George (Burns) were doing kilocycle duty for Hormel on NBC that 'Brother Willie' joined the act. Idea originally was to write letters to draftees, imparting a word of cheer here, a gag there. It was addressed 'Dear Soldier' and to every camp in the country a letter went out weekly. In no time the gag began to assume important proportions and as of recent weeks Gracie has been deluged with around 2,000 letters a week from the khaki hordes.

Most of the letters contain gags and situations about 'Brother Willie', coming from high officer and low private alike. The file of jokes about 'Willie' is piling so high that it's a cinch the character will be a definite part of the act when B & A return to the air in the fall. Their writers claim that a large percentage of the many thousands of gags are useable, and more to the point, timely.

Commandant of one camp wrote Gracie that her letters are eagerly looked forward to, and that upon their receipt are posted on the bulletin board, where a long line soon forms. Gracie intends to keep the feature going as long as the boys are in camp.

Monogram Skeds Four Regionals; First at Frisco

Four regional meetings will be staged by Monogram, following its franchise holders' convention of last week. First of these will be staged in San Francisco April 12, with Prexy W. Ray Johnston presiding and Steve Broidy, general sales manager, outlining the sales approach for the coming season.

Second regional is scheduled for Chicago (20), then New York (27) and one for the southern group to follow.

A number of the Monogram franchise holders, who converged upon Hollywood last week for the company's sales powwow, are staying on over this week, mostly sightseeing, and with occasional business chats with studio execs.

Most of the convention delegates have left for their homes but a few will remain over until Sunday night before resuming their film selling.

DENNIS O'KEEFE HAS PACT CONVERTED

Dennis O'Keefe, who was signed to a two-picture deal by RKO several months ago following his appearance in 'You'll Find Out', the Kay Kyser musical, has had pact converted into a straight term deal. O'Keefe has been awaiting his first assignment under the two-picture ticket for some time since 'Hang Out the Moon', in which he was to play with Rosemary Lane, was shelved when actress refused the part. Conversion of his contract gives studio right to make his loanout deals now and his first part under new setup will be 'Lady Scarface'.

Wage-Hour Decision Expected By May 1

Decision on the Wage-Hour classification hearing, conducted here recently by Merle D. Vincent, is expected to come out of Washington by May 1, and will be immediately followed by the opening of the negotiations of the various unions to collect a mythical $3,000,000 retroactive overtime pay, piling up since the Wage-Hour bill became effective. Vincent's report on the classification hearing was forwarded to Col. Philip Fleming in Washington for action.

It is generally believed that there will be few, if any, changes made in the recommendations as originally compiled by Eldred M. Cocking after an extensive film industry survey, and it is entirely likely that studios will generally adopt a policy of the 40-hour, five-day week after Fleming's decision is made known.

WARNERS WATCHING DRAFT PLAYERS

All Warners players who are drafted will be kept in the public eye by studio publicity men during the year they are in service. In spite of the absence of definite film assignments and chance to figure in gossip items, the players' names will be used as frequently as possible in Warners publicity. Emphasis will be placed on appearances of players in films made before the draft call and released after their induction into service. Keith Douglas, who was inducted one day after finishing his role in 'Passage From Hongkong', will be first actor to benefit. John R. Holmes, flack, has been assigned to handle draftee publicity and to be liaison man between studio and players.

Metro Goes Into High Over New Product

Metro, once leisurely in readying its productions, has considerably accelerated its story preparation pact to meet the coming blocks-of-five selling situation. Where formerly material may have been given to numerous writers to find angles, if the jelling process was slow, the tendency today is to give each assignment a reasonable period in which to coagulate, and if it doesn't show promise to shelve it temporarily and proceed with another.

Moskowitz Defends Schenck's Position As Cross-Exam Ends

New York, April 8.—Cross-examination of Joe Moskowitz was concluded by U. S. Attorney Mathias Correa at today's session of the trial of Joe Schenck and the witness before U. S. District Court Judge Grover Moscowitz and a jury.

Moskowitz clung to his story that he never used weekly Coast reports on Schenck's income but drew the estimate from the yearly reports. He declared that Schenck never took an active interest in the reports, his only acquaintanceship with them was their signing by him. The witness defended Schenck's position repeatedly, with Correa declaring he was practically another character witness for his boss.

On redirect examination by Defense Counsel Harold Corbin it was revealed that the Government's accusation of false entries in Moskowitz's books in which the latter was charged with owing Schenck $71,457 was not true, as the money represented a stock deal between William Klein, New York attorney, and Schenck, with Moskowitz holding the stock in his name.

Judge Moscowitz asked Moskowitz if he was a 'dummy', and Corbin squawked over the term, with the court forced to explain the term 'dummy' to the jury that it had no relationship to Moskowitz's intellectual abilities.

Moskowitz will continue on the stand Wednesday under redirect examination.

TAX GROUP ADVOCATES NIP ON ADMISSIONS

Nuisance taxes on theatre admissions and athletic events were proposed to the Los Angeles County Board of Supervisors yesterday by a Citizens Committee on Taxation. Taxes on billboards and electric signs and a levy for business licenses in unincorporated areas also were advocated by the committee. Supervisors appointed the taxpayers' group in September, 1939, and the recommendations were made in a report based on 18 months' study of the county's tax problems.

Recapitulation follows:

1. Reassessment of all land and improvements in the county on a net income basis instead of the present "guesswork" method of valuation.
2. Greater taxation of stocks, bonds, mortgages and other intangible property, and fuller assessment of private property.
3. Return to the tax rolls of an estimated $22,000,000 worth of tax-deeded property which now carries none of the tax burden.
4. Various economies in county operating costs, which it was declared would save $1,000,000 a year without impairing efficiency.
5. New revenues, including "nuisance taxes" and special fees to offset tax reductions on real estate.

Quartet of leading Los Angeles wrestlers have protested a scene in Paramount's 'Road to Zanzibar' in which Bob Hope wrestles a gorilla. So incensed have these grunt-and-groan boys become that they have adopted a resolution, protesting the quips and jibes written and spoken in pictures, and calling upon the industry to refrain in the future from belittling the wrestling profession and otherwise casting aspersions upon its dignity.

Resolution, which has all the earmarks of a Paramount publicity stunt for the forthcoming film release, is signed by George Zaharias, Jim Londos, Hardboiled Haggarty and Golden Terror, all of whom profess they were called to the Par studio to furnish technical advice on the picture.

BOB CROSBY, 20th TALKING DEAL

Bob Crosby and 20th-Fox are talking a deal for the orchestra leader to go into '21 Men and a Girl', formerly titled 'The Band Played On'. Studio also would like to lure Bing Crosby off the Paramount lot for the top role, but that looks unlikely. Harry Joe Brown is associate producer on the picture. Richard English wrote the story and Robert Carson has been working on the screenplay.

ANTICIPATING a heavy demand for tickets to Bob Hawk's 'Take It or Leave It' solo broadcast here Sunday for Eversharp, CBS has gone to the expense of renting the Fiesta Room of the Ambassador hotel and will set up accommodations for 2,000 at each of the airings (repeat for the Coast). Even with 4,000 tickets printed, the network has been caught short three days before broadcast time. Reason for the ducat scramble is the cash bounty handed out at the question bee. Those who correctly answer the set of seven questions tossed at them carry off 64 smackers. Parties to the Q and A frolic are selected from the audience through the drawing of numbers corresponding with the serial on the admission stubs. Sunday's broadcast marks end of the first year for the series, one of the most popular of its type on the network.

COLUMBIA is preparing around 250 feet of film from 'Obituary' showing scenes of Eileen O'Hearn, former Los Angeles Times stenographer, making her camera debut. Footage will be transhipped to the 31 company exchanges around the country to give salesmen a pre-release idea of what studio execs claim is the exceptional talents of Miss O'Hearn. It was first planned to send the test which caused Columbia to sign actress to a term contract, but studio was unable to get a release from Warners, which owns test footage, to send reel around the country. Test was made at the valley lot last November but failed to result in a picture deal until recently when film was brought to the attention of Columbia.

METRO appears to have ambushed Howard Hughes' 'The Outlaw' with its color production of 'Billy The Kid', succeeding, at least, in hitting national release date first. 'Billy The Kid' goes out June 6. 'The Outlaw' is still being edited, with Hughes' demands for perfection in his story of the same character responsible for the delay. Metro's earlier release is blow to hopes of publicity man on 'The Outlaw' who hatched up stories some time ago predicting faster finish for the Hughes picture. Culver City studio will take full advantage of being under the wire first, placing heavy color print order with Technicolor Laboratories which may reach Metro's all-time record of 325, set by 'The Wizard of Oz.'

'JESSE JAMES' and 'The Return of Frank James', both 20th-Fox Technicolor productions, have been combined into one film, making one double-length feature. The combined pictures are being reissued in the middle west under the title of 'Jesse James'. W. E. Scott, district manager for 20th-Fox in the region, launched the idea. Title and credits of 'Frank James' have been cut out and the picture runs 192 minutes, with about six minutes being clipped. 'Jesse James' ended with the title character being shot and 'Frank James' opened on the same scene. Film has been tried out in Coffeyville, Kan., and at Kansas City, playing to good business, and will be booked into all districts.

UNDERSTOOD several of the local wire service correspondents are burning at being temporarily put on the spot by the New York Hays office. Claim is that when newsmen filed story on ban against future garbing of femme film players in sweaters, eastern Hays office quickly issued a denial of such a censorship move and beefed to wire service headquarters in New York at allowing story to hit the public prints. Wire heads queried Coast men on the situation and local boys were able to back up their story with copies of the censorship letter sent to studios, in spite of the New York denials.

Citizen Kane

(Drama)

RKO release of an Orson Welles production (Mercury Theatre). Stars Orson Welles. Supporting cast: Joseph Cotten, Dorothy Comingore, Everett Sloane, Ray Collins, George Coulouris, Agnes Moorehead, Paul Stewart, Ruth Warrick, Erskine Sanford, William Alland, Fortunio Bononova, Gus Schilling, Philip Van Zandt, Georgia Backus, Harry Shannon, Sonny Bupp, Buddy Swan. Produced and directed by Orson Welles. Original screenplay, Herman J. Mankiewicz and Orson Welles. Photography, Gregg Toland. Music composed and conducted by Bernard Herrmann. Special effects, Vernon L. Walker. Art director, Van Nest Polglase; associate, Perry Ferguson. Editing, Robert Wise. Costumes, Edward Stevenson. Previewed at Ambassador theatre, April 9. Running time: 115 mins.

'Citizen Kane' comes to its initial roadshow bookings as one of the most talked-about pictures, prior to release, in years. That means, as the press preview bears out, that it has heat, vitality, relationship to important and timely human concerns and interests; that it flows with the stream of life; that it has great entertainment substance and treatment. 'Citizen Kane' is powerful drama and an engrossing document. It has the merit, the capacity, to do sensational business if it is allowed to run its natural course as screen entertainment. The picture may be an important prestige landmark in RKO's production history. And it adds to the showmanly prowess of Orson Welles, whose screen first-born it is.

The film's pre-release dispute, as has been widely heralded not alone to the trade but to much of the reading public as well, had to do with the contention that its fictive pattern too closely resembled the private life of one of America's foremost newspaper owners and publishers. This allegation, which both Welles and the RKO executives denied, delayed the film's release and was responsible for the word-of-mouth which has kept 'Kane' in the limelight for many weeks. The producers say the fictional figure, Kane, is a composite of numerous personages, with episodes drawn from many sources. This each theatre patron will have to decide for himself, squaring the screen figment with what he may know of American newspaper and political history. There are half a dozen men in the who's who of newspaperdom who might fit into parts of the narrative of the rise and decline of a powerful publisher-tycoon — newspaper men and other prominent public figures.

Whoever it might be, the majority of critics who will comment on 'Kane' and the vast majority of those who will see it only for entertainment, undoubtedly will agree that the picture's central character is not treated with disrespect. Compassionate understanding, from a tragically ironic viewpoint, yes; but not disrespect. Audience sympathy will go out to that 'citizen', a man who had power and lost it; a man who wanted everything on his own terms, and got exactly that; a man who gathered the treasures of the world, but never the one he wanted; a man about whom his butler finally said, 'I felt kinda sorry for him'; the man who stood on the verge of greatest position but came to futility; whose brave 'declaration of principle' at his Metro production and release. Features Robert Cummings, Ruth Hussey, Judith Anderson, C. Aubrey Smith, Reginald Owen, Nigel Bruce, Tom Conway. Supporting cast: Forrester Harvey, Charles Coleman, Theresa Maxwell Conover, Frederic Worlock, Charles Irwin. Directed by George Sidney. Screenplay by Marvin Borowsky, based on play, 'The Truth Game', by Ivor Novello. Photographed by Charles Lawton and George Folsey. Edited by Frank E. Hull. Reviewed at Grauman's Chinese, April 9. Running time: 56 mins.

Competent cast of more or less seasoned players keeps this film version of the former stage play, 'The Truth Game', from being a washout. Everybody concerned has labored hard to provide the picture with the essentials to make it acceptable screen entertainment, but at best 'Free and Easy' is woefully lacking in celluloid value.

Based on the premise that most Britishers—and some Americans, for that matter—are constantly on the search for wealthy marriages, film as released does not live up to the present status of a majority of the British people. The best that can be said for it is that it is a 'filler', produced on a minimum budget, and lacking entirely in draw value.

Marvin Borowsky, in concocting his film play, deviated materially from the stage version, and the result is a trite yarn which most patrons will accept with a yawn. It's a story of a father and son, each on the make for financial security through marriage, with the son falling finally for an American girl, also with visions of wealth through marriage, but who is brought to a realization that, after all, money is not everything.

Nigel Bruce as the father and Robert Cummings as the chip off the old block son are the male leads who seek well-heeled society wives and both do a highly complimentary job, particularly Bruce, whose histrionic ability has rarely been called upon for greater effort. Ruth Hussey is both beautiful and talented as the American girl who wavers between a rich marriage and her love for Cummings, and Judith Anderson does a good piece of work as the wealthy English girl who shows her sportsmanship when she finally learns the truth that it is Hussey, and not she, that Cummings really loves.

Others who contribute value to the film are Reginald Owen as a fussy Englishman with oodles of money, and C. Aubrey Smith, another rich Britisher whose principal affection lies with horses. Supporting cast have small parts, but they handle them satisfactorily.

George Sidney did a satisfactory directorial job, but was severely handicapped by story angles. Photography of Charles Lawton and George Folsey is highly acceptable.

Werthheimer is a presentable chap and attributes his faithful attendance at the Chinese and the fact that he is willing and anxious to stand in line at the box office for upwards of an hour to be the first to enter the theatre on change day to the fact that he 'just loves pictures.' . . . Mistrial in Schenck Case Denied By Presiding Judge

New York, April 9.—Furious battle between Defense Counsel Harold Corbin and Judge Grover Moscowitz developed today in the Joseph M. Schenck-Joseph Moskowitz trial, with Corbin demanding a mistrial and the court curtly rejecting. Fight arose when Robert Kane, former 20th-Fox English production head and now a 20th producer, on the stand was asked a question by Corbin to which he started to give a lengthy explanation. Court interrupted, demanding a yes or no answer. Corbin immediately objected to the tone of anger in the court's voice.

'That is enough, Mr. Corbin,' the judge declared, 'I don't want you to be putting on an act as you have been doing throughout this trial.'

Corbin and the court then shouted at each other, with the attorney demanding a mistrial and the court rejecting the motion. Corbin stated his reasons were 'based not only on what your honor said, but the manner in which you said it.' Attorney also declared, 'I'm not the only one here. My clients are here to be protected and I'm going to do it.'

MOSKOWITZ WINDUP

Other happenings during the day were the finishing of the examination of Moskowitz, with Corbin strengthening weaknesses made by Prosecutor Correa. Kane testified that in 1936-37 Schenck spent much time in London and was always working. While there he signed Annabella, Gracie Fields, Elisabeth Bergner, Robert Donat, Jessie Matthews and George Sanders. He also arranged formation of 20th-Fox Productions, Ltd., went over schedules of production, interviewed prospective talent, addressed sales meetings, etc.

Witness declared executive spent $600 daily which it was later shown was not deducted from his return. Schenck also spent $5,000 trying to sign Dick Merrill and Harry Richman, but failed. Company gave him the money, but he returned it, not wanting to charge 20th-Fox for the unsuccessful effort. The money was not deducted.

SAYS U. S. OWES SCHENCK

Last witness was Myron Fink, accountant, who testified the government owed Schenck $29,546 for 1937, besides $55,442 already owed, as the defense claims.

Defense Counsel Corbin, upset by the happenings, refused to say who would testify tomorrow. Roland West, Lou Anger, Martin Moskowitz and Schenck are all possibilities.

crafts have asked the International for aid in setting new deals with the Producers, while several of them have urged the International to take over their negotiations.

If Browne decides to act for the locals, it is probable that the various business representatives will be called east to discuss their demands. All of them are seeking pay tilts and improved working conditions, with the Producers urging that wage scales remain in status quo until the full effect of war conditions on the industry can be determined. If the deal for the local unions is set in the east, there also is a probability that Browne will take the IATSE back into the Studio Agreement.

The general IATSE situation was discussed by Casey and Joseph A. Padway, general counsel for the American Federation of Labor, before the latter returned to Washington. Padway will go to New York to sit in on the huddles between Casey, Browne and other AFofL tops.

first newspaper's mast-head becomes an 'antique' to his erstwhile friends; the man deserted by those he didn't know how to love—this man becomes a figure of tragic pity, the product of his era (1860 to 1940), representing his times, its political economy, its codes, its private and public morals and fluxes.

There is in Orson Welles' dramatic tale no cantankerous diatribe, no indictment except in the flow of cause and event. The ethics of the newspaper man, his power and the use of it, is kept separated from the awkwardness, the lovelessness, the groping futility of his private life. The tale holds dispassionately to the dramatic level, probing fiercely into an important public man's motives and the ways in which he and the powerful instrument he created reacted upon each other.

The story, in which Herman Mankiewicz shares a screenplay credit, tells in mounting detail and with arresting technique the life of a boy taken from a simple home to become a wielder of great wealth and influence, from the age of 25 to 80 in the Welles' performance. He sets out with certain ideals of private behavior and public conduct in the publication of his chain of newspapers. He zooms up politically. Is a persuasive demagogue. Marries and divorces. Is trapped in a so-called love nest by his wife and his political opponent, so that his hope for high public office crashes in an hour. He takes up the girl with whom a casual evening directed the subsequent course of his days; tries to make her an operatic star; fails, and will not relinquish that final pathetic ambition to achieve love and greatness vicariously when middle age and prestige slip away; dies in his great, richly furnished but emotionally barren castle, after old friends and counselers have dropped away—wanting at the last, as he cryptically says with a final word, only the bobsled he admired in his boyhood.

The tale is told in retrospect, starting with an investigation into the man's life by the compilers of a march-of-time kind of newsreel. In that search to uncover the inwardness of 'Kane', each of the important persons in his life is interviewed by a news reporter. With each additional anecdote and revelation, the compassion for Charlie Kane grows. And in the eloquent and ironic recital, pathos clings in a measure to each of the persons who helped condition the 'boss'.

As the substance of the two-hour fable-document is concentrated and indelibly impressed entertainment, so the technical achievement is masterful. Producing, directing and enacting the chief character, Orson Welles has a triplicate credit which places him, without any of the 'genius' bosh, up among the important craftsmen and creative minds of the business. As the actor he does a job, both in appearance and delivery, which is so good that one never thinks of 'Kane' as Welles. The performance is not mannered. It has vigor, humanness, dramatic proportion. As the director, Welles shows equal vigor and assurance, slashing, probing, marching the narrative, impatient often, short-cutting, holding up the suspense, the sense of importance, the documentary similitude.

Supporting performances are sharply etched. Especially impressive is Joseph Cotten as the uncompromising dramatic critic who refuses to praise an operatic washout because his boss happens to be married to her; Dorothy Comingore, as the plaintive girl whose ambition was cajoled far beyond her capacity, so that life with the man who wanted to make her a great singing star becomes unbearably lonely and barren; Everett Sloane as the tycoon's general manager, who relates much of his life in retrospect. Because all the characterizations are on such a high common level of excellence, no individual stands out beyond the others. Sharing the playing honors are Ray Collins, George Coulouris, Agnes Moorehead, Paul Stewart, Ruth Warrick, Erskine Sanford and William Alland, all of the Mercury Players organization, and new to the screen.

The film is a pictorial masterpiece. Gregg Toland, at the camera helm shares with Welles in a major degree the high excellence of the technical job. Noticeable is the swift way in which passage of time in indicated, with no laborious desolves and fades; noticeable the angles, the compositions, the dramatic effect of camera position. The camera eavesdrops rather than laboriously sets itself up for takes.

The music, composed and conducted by Bernard Herrmann, also is of a kind with picture's other merits—giving tonal dimension to the pictorial frame.

Production is on a lavish scale, having cost a reported million, and looking every dollar of the budget in all its entertainment values.

Story Buys

'Take a Letter, Darling', an original screen story by George Beck, has been bought by Paramount. It is the tale of a modern business woman with a male secretary.

Joel Malone, scripter of 'Nightcap Yarns' and other KNX programs, has sold 'Changed Identity' to Metro. Story was aired on the 'Nightcap' series.

WB Keeps Foulk

Warners has picked up its option on dialog director contract with Robert Foulk. He currently is working on 'Bad Men of Missouri.'

Hollywood Inside

BECAUSE the Mexican government does not want to injure its diplomatic relations with Germany it has refused to allow Orson Welles to film his projected story of a Nazi plot in Mexico. Welles still plans to make the picture, but, at the same time he is being asked by Warners to make 'The Man Who Came to Dinner', and by George Schaefer, at RKO, to make 'How to Meet a Man', the Gene Towne and Graham Baker yarn. Welles' plans are complicated by the Mexican government's action, but it is not believed he will consider doing 'How to Meet a Man.' So far he has turned a deaf ear to the Warners offer. Officials of the Mexican Ministry of the Interior have informed Welles that permission cannot be granted by the government for him to produce his picture there because it would offend the national dignity. Hero of the story is a young American who helps to check a Nazi coup in Mexico. Government officials feel that the story implies that Mexico cannot take care of her own domestic problem, that the picture would make those who saw it believe that a tremendous Nazi group existed below the Rio Grande, and that it would offend Germany. Welles finished the story while he was in New York producing his legiter, 'Native Son.' Richard Baer, his business manager, and Gregg Toland, who was set to serve as cameraman on the picture, both have but recently returned from Mexico City where they went to set some of the details. Word was sent to Welles Sunday that the Mexican government's permission could not be obtained. He is now in Palm Springs, resting. Welles was to have had Dolores Del Rio in the feminine lead and also sought the services of Carmen Amaya, Latin dancer. He would have used Mexican labor in making the picture. Despite the noncooperation of the Mexican government he has not abandoned his plans for producing the film. William Randolph Hearst, it will be recalled, recently was in Mexico City. At a cocktail party given for him there by high government officials Hearst was introduced to Welles' business manager, Baer, but the subject of 'Citizen Kane' was not mentioned.

KNX statisticians declare that no letter campaign, even with sundry giveaways, ever approximated Graham's record.

Kids who are named after notables are dated, definitely. Back in the days when the Cubs were the greatest ball club on earth there was a long-lived left fielder named Jimmy Sheckard who defied all and sundry scribes to guess his age. Presently one of the scribes discovered that the outfielder's complete name was Samuel James Tilden Sheckard, titled after a Presidential candidate back in the early days of the republic.

Grover C. Alexander, a sly old pitcher, was one of the few athletes who could hide his age with a sliding scale. He was named after Grover Cleveland, who ran for President three times, so Old Pete had a leeway of 12 years when you asked him about his birthday.

Shirley was the vogue for girl kids not so long ago, and now Miss Temple is coming back to protect the gals in future years. Along about 1960, when questioners get snoopy about ages, a Shirley won't have to tell whether she was born during the Temple infancy or the Temple renaissance.

Back in the old days it was customary to name a child George, after Washington, or John, after Adams, or Thomas, after Jefferson, and so on down the line until Ulysses S. Grant came along. That was a stopper, even for the most politically-minded parents. On rare occasions there was a Ulysses in the neighborhood but everybody called him Useless, so he changed his name to Joe.

The Great Mr. Nobody

Warners production and release. Features Eddie Albert, Joan Leslie, Alan Hale, William Lundigan, John Litel. Supporting cast: Charles Trowbridge, Paul Hurst, Dickie Moore, John Ridgely, Douglas Kennedy, George Campeau, William Benedict, Helen MacKellar, Joyce Tucker, Mary Field. Directed by Ben Stoloff. Screenplay by Ben Markson and Kenneth Gamet, from a story by Harold Titus. Photographed by Arthur Todd. Edited by Rudi Fehr. Music by Adolph Deutsch. Reviewed at Warners Hollywood theatre April 10. Running time: 70 mins.

Here's a breezy comedy, tailor-made for Eddie Albert, who romps through the title part in his own inimitable style. Unfortunately, the same cannot be said of other members of the cast, although most of them handle their assignments in satisfactory, if not outstanding, fashion.

'The Great Mr. Nobody' is an out-and-out B production, produced by Warner Bros. at a nominal cost and designed for the lower bracket of a twin bill. Despite this it contains plenty of comedy situations which will provide the average screen theatre patron with 70 minutes of mild entertainment. Most of the story falls on young Albert's shoulders and he makes the most of the lines and situations given him.

It's the story of a somewhat bewildered youth who despite a good job as a classified salesman on a newspaper, is constantly dreaming of a yacht with which he can sail to unknown places and at the same time he is head-over-heels in love with Joan Leslie. Albert is torn between his devotion to Alan Hale, a loud-talking roommate who aspires to the sea, and his love for Miss Leslie. In the meantime, he allows others, principally John Litel, to take from him credit for promotional stunts that prove a great aid to the newspaper's circulation.

Albert is forced through a series of predicaments before he clears up the mess, and in the end emerges as the real hero, the man who all his life has been misunderstood.

Aside from Albert, who gives a cleancut, convincing portrayal of the somewhat befuddled salesman, Alan Hale and John Litel turn in best efforts. Joan Leslie is exceptionally pretty in the film but fails to convince. William Lundigan belies the spoken line that he is an ex-football star and his work as the new publisher of the paper is lacking.

Paul Hurst and Dickie Moore make the most of small parts given them, and others in the cast are adequate.

Ben Stoloff did a capable job of directing, although he must have been somewhat handicapped in following the devious paths laid out in the screen play which is credited to Ben Markson and Kenneth Gamet. Camera work of Arthur Todd is flawless and Adolph Deutsch has provided pleasing background music.

Picture will satisfy those patrons who are not too exacting with their film fare and should prove acceptable when paired with heavier type of pictures, such as it is at the Warners house.

The Invisible Ghost

(Melodrama)

Monogram release of a Banner Pictures production. Stars Bela Lugosi. Supporting cast: Polly Ann Young, John McGuire, Clarence Muse, Terry Walker, Betty Compson, Ernie Adams, George Pembroke, Ottola Nesmith, Fred Kelsey, Jack Mulhall. Director, Joseph H. Lewis. Producer, Sam Katzman. Associate producer, Pete Mayer. Story and screenplay, Helen and Al Martin. Photography, Marcel Le Picard. Film editor, Robert Golden. Production manager, Ed W. Rote. Settings, Fred Preble. Recording, Glen Glenn. Musical direction, Lange and Porter. Previewed April 10. Running time: 63 mins.

Boogie man Bela Lugosi stalks again and has been seen to much better advantage than in 'The Invisible Ghost.' Picture tries hard to stir sufficient horror to rate the 'chiller' brand but succeeds only slightly. A so-so production that will meet with a similar success in the minor situations.

Lugosi is a kindly man with a murderous 'M. Hyde' complex who goes around commiting unconscious killings. His seizures are brought on by the ghostly reappearances of his long-lost wife, who had eloped years before with another man. Unaware of his complex, Lugosi aids the police to search out the killer in his home, is finally trapped when the cops bring in his wife, hiding on the estate for a long time. Considerable confusion results from incomplete development of the plot, partly due to writing and partly to production limitations.

Polly Ann Young, the madman's daughter; John McGuire, in a dual role; Clarence Muse, the butler, and Betty Compson, the wife, play the principal roles with Lugosi in average fashion. Ernie Adams contributes a good bit as a victim.

Joseph H. Lewis directed from the story and screen play by Helen and Al Martin, and Sam Katzman and Pete Mayer produced.

Carpenters were especially hard to find, hundreds of them having left the industry recently for steady work on defense projects. Tops in the American Federation of Labor said it was the first time since the defense work started that the studios have felt a real pinch. They expressed the belief that the scarcity of expert workers would increase when the weather improves and more men are put to work on defense programs.

KATHRYN ADAMS, Universal actress, and Hugh Beaumont will be married at 8:30 Easter Sunday morning by the Rev. Allan Hunter at the Mount Hollywood Congregational church. Picture work for both players will postpone their honeymoon. Actors recently were married, before the camera, for a scene in 'Unfinished Business' at Universal. . . . Armond Rynhard, former Dutch and Belgian representative for Max Factor's, arrived here yesterday after a 10-month trip from the occupied countries. . . . Seventh annual Film Exchange Club dance, to be held night of (18), was yesterday shifted to the Elks' Club, due to destruction by fire of the Riverside Drive Breakfast Club, where the event was originally scheduled. Proceeds will as usual be devoted to the relief of film row workers. Music will be furnished by the Rudolf Friml ork. . . . Ronald Colman, Charles Boyer, Herbert Marshall, Brian Aherne, Nigel Bruce, Cary Grant are among film names slated to be present at the benefit show at the Riviera Country Club tomorrow and Sunday. Proceeds go to the British, Canadian, Anzac and Scottish War Relief Associations.

Attempts of the Screen Actors Guild to get Greta Garbo to appear on the Screen Guild-Gulf Oil radio program have met with a firm 'no' from the actress, because, according to the claim, she is afraid of the microphone. Offers to run a wire to Miss Garbo's home where she could do her performance absolutely alone still couldn't remove the 'mike' phobia enough for an acceptance.

AFTER working all night in an artificial rain at the Paramount ranch in 'The Great Man's Lady', Brian Donlevy reported at the studio to do a scene for a picture within a picture being filmed for 'Hold Back the Dawn' . . . Actor donated his day's salary to Bundles for Britain. . . . Frances Farmer lunching at Lucey's. . . . Bob McLaughlin reports for army duty at Fort MacArthur today.

Hank Gerzen, who reports for his army training trick today, last night was given elaborate going-away party by his fellow grips at 20th-Fox. Gerzen has been at studio 12 years.

FRANCES SCULLY, NBC's glamour reporter, will give a preview of what the film stars wear in the Easter parade as guest of 'Little ol' Hollywood', which gets a transcontinental airing tomorrow. . . . From Metro's cartoon department to the U. S. Army have gone Robert Gentle (Fort Ord), Paul Fanning (War College in Washington), Tom Ryan (Ft. Monmouth), Sam Dawson (Ft. Monmouth). . . . Rene Hubert, who usually designed the costumes for Gloria Swanson when she was active in pictures some years back, will again garb the actress, this time with 18 changes in RKO's 'Father Takes a Wife.'

Keep Schenck From Stands in Trial Defense Move

New York, April 10.—In a surprise move today, the defense rested in the Joseph M. Schenck-Joseph Moskowitz trial for income tax evasion before U. S. Judge Grover Moscowitz and a jury, without placing its star witness, Joe Schenck, on the stand.

Reason for failure to call Schenck was not revealed, but Daily Variety learned that the defense counsel argued on the matter and were split on the advisability last night, and finally decided that the Government had not made out a case, hence there was no sense in having Schenck testify when his testimony was not actually needed. Schenck arrived in court this morning fully prepared to go on the witness stand, but after an hour of delay in which attorneys thrashed out the matter again behind scenes, defense counsel Harold Corbin announced he had rested his case.

Just prior to the resting, Corbin placed a letter from the Treasury department in the record, which denied his request for permission to examine Leonard Mulligan, a Government Treasury agent. Corbin also told Judge Moscowitz he regretted his battle with the court on Wednesday, and offered to withdraw his demand for a mistrial. Judge Moscowitz accepted the offer and told the jury to disregard squabbles between counsel and the court or itself, but to accept only just rulings on the law which he would hand down later.

The case resumes Monday when Corbin will make his defense summary to be followed by summary made by U. S. District Attorney Mathias Correa, with Judge Moscowitz then giving his charge. Jury will likely get the case late Tuesday night or Wednesday. Today concluded the sixth week of the trial.

worldwide operations, were held with Mary Pickford and Alexander Korda, owner members, culminating sessions during the past week which included David O. Selznick, Walter Wanger, Edward Small, David Loew, Hal Roach, Ernst Lubitsch, Sol Lesser, James Roosevelt, Arnold Pressberger, Gabriel Pascal, Richard A. Rowland and Dr. William Sekely. Plans for regional sales conferences also were set, the first to start (28).

'In accordance with the prevailing custom and basic foundation of United Artists established by the founders 21 years ago', said Kelly, 'each picture will continue to be sold on its merits, as heretofore.

'Included within the selling policy, and unanimously confirmed, certain formulae for selling individual pictures were agreed upon to apply to a number of situations. For these situations a sliding scale of percentage will apply, going up to 50% of the gross for important pictures, thus making it possible, based on box office results, for each producer to obtain a maximum return on his productions.'

Kelly canvassed the product to be made, details of which are to be disclosed at the regional conventions. The program, he stated, would contain the most impressive product the company has ever made, exceeding even that of last year, which included 'Rebecca', 'Thief of Bagdad', 'Foreign Correspondent', the advance price showings of 'The Great Dictator', 'The Westerner', 'Our Town', and 'My Son, My Son'.

Weather permitting, Kelly leaves today by plane, but Silverstone will remain here several days longer.

Philbrick Reported Being Retained As Central Head

players' were directed at Melniker, particularly in the circulation of petitions on studio sets. They also are said to contend that any reorganizational plans of Philbrick have been tied up by unionization of Central, and that he has not had a full opportunity to show what he can do.

Others are reported opposed to a change on the theory that if the impression gets around that a change was forced by a protest picket line, another picket line will be started every time a group of extras becomes peeved over some action at Central. The Extras Advisory Council also is keeping a strictly hands-off policy with reference to Central, directing its attention entirely to a campaign for a vote for Class B members in the Screen Actors Guild.

Walter Vogler, who is employed by many major studios to handle soldier sequences, said an impartial investigation had convinced him that responsibility for the poor quality of soldier extras being furnished studios rested with the Screen Actors Guild and not with Central Casting Corp. Vogler said he had spent several hours going over the situation with Philbrick and Melniker, and had been advised that the SAG furnishes the lists of members, as to their qualifications, etc. He said there is nothing Central can do but furnish men from these lists, whether or not they can drill, etc.

That is, he can only play the roles for which his character sets him. But in the person of Edmund Gwenn, that belief is shattered. In 'Miss Bishop' you saw him as the kindly old professor, and in 'Foreign Correspondent' you saw him as a villainous cockney murderer, well here in 'The Devil and Miss Jones' he again plays a villain, but, so differently—the villain of the fifth floor shoe department. Federated Amusement Drive Hits All So. Calif. Agents

A drive by the Federated Amusement and Allied Crafts to force all theatrical agents in Southern California to line up under the American Guild of Variety Artists franchise code was disclosed yesterday. The Federation announced appointment of a policy committee composed of Federation Secretary C. J. Hyans, of AGVA; Thomas Meehan, of Los Angeles Bartenders; Eddie Pratt, of Musicians Local 47, and Carl Cooper, of Stage Employes Local 33, to work in cooperation with Federation crafts with whom agents have franchises and to prosecute bookers who are on the unfair list of the Central Labor council.

Secretary Hyans was instructed to send letters to all franchised agents advising them of the position of the Federation, which claims more than 20,000 members in Los Angeles County. These letters going into the mails today advise the agents of the various requirements in the AGVA code, particularly those which make the agent responsible for seeing that a performer is paid for his work. The agents are being advised:

That they may secure employment for and book only AGVA members in good standing, and must see that they remain in good standing during the term of their employment.

DAILY REPORTS

Daily written reports must be made to AGVA headquarters, listing all bookings of employment deals that have been handled by the agency.

The names of all artists booked and the places they are working must be included with the reports, together with a copy of their contract.

The agent also is being advised that he assumes all responsibility and liability on all contracts negotiated for artists.

In announcing the campaign, the Federation stated:

'At the meeting of the Federated Amusement and Allied Crafts held at Long Beach, composed of bartenders, stage employes, Musicians, AGVA and Culinary Workers of Los Angeles and San Bernardino counties, this group went on record as definitely supporting organizations affiliated therein with whom theatrical agents have signed franchises. Many complaints have been registered regarding violations, especially of Section 21, paragraphs A, B, C, D and F (AGVA), which have to do with employment of members in good standing in their respective crafts, sending in lists of people and places they are booking, also sending in contracts and being responsible for same.'

of Mike Naify, general manager of T&D Jr. Enterprises, and E. H. Emmick, president of United California Theatres, joins in the denial that the Northern California circuits, in which Fox West Coast has a minority interest, have any contemplation or intention of disposing of any interest in the theatres they operate and control.

PRAISES INDUSTRY

Before leaving here yesterday, Skouras praised the picture industry for its wholesome support of the Greek War Relief. 'Never in the history of the industry', Skouras stated, 'has the response to an humanitarian cause been as great as in this drive. I cannot praise the industry enough for its share in the undertaking.'

By next Monday Skouras plans to send to Greece $500,000 already collected in American theatres for the relief fund, and later on hopes this sum will be increased to $750,000 from film houses alone. Of the $500,000 to be sent across next week, approximately $150,000 has been raised in California theatres, both circuit and independent.

Skouras stressed that Greece now, more than ever, was entitled to every possible aid on the part of the Democratic nations. 'Just as long as England is in the war; just as long as there is a war with Germany, Greece will be in it, fighting to the end', the National Theatre prexy, who is head of the Greek War Relief in this country, stated.

MAJORS MAY STOP PIX TO ANZAC

New York, April 10.—If the Australian government goes through with its proposed plan to have American distributors release through one central organization, and to all theatres, several of the large major companies have indicated they would stop sending pictures to Anzac territory.

With the likelihood that the amount of money remittance to the United States for all of the eight majors will be shaved $1,000,000 by the new coin freeze pact, few American distribs see any business sense in continuing to operate Down Under, and would step out of that market.

represented by Aubrey Blair, AF of L international representative; Herbert Sorrell, business representative of Moving Picture Painters Local 644, and Attorney George E. Bodle.

The major demand to be handed Lessing calls for recognition of the SCG as collective bargaining representative for all cartoon workers. The Guilders claim the Disney Federation is a 'company union', and insist that it represents only a small portion of the workers. Demands for agreements have already been submitted by the Teamsters and other AF of L crafts, but the outcome of negotiations hinges largely on the SCG demand for recognition.

Members have already instructed their leaders to take any action they deem necessary, and pledges of full support have been received from the International of the Brotherhood of Painters, with whom the Cartoonists are affiliated.

Lincoln, Neb., April 13. — Nebraska's anti-Ascap law, legally enmeshed since its enactment in 1937, and at present under an unconstitutional ban from the U. S. Attorney general's office here has been tipped to be ready for an hour's presentation of the state's side, which will probably be handled by William J. Mexico City, April 13.—When the 63 people in the Hollywood party attending the Mexico City Motion Picture Festival struck Mexico City, the crowds in the streets, the cheering, laughter and happy tears of the people, the good will, were greater than at any time in the history of the relations between the United States and Mexico.

Even that occasion in 1910 when President William Howard Taft and President Porfirio Diaz stood on the border at El Paso, each in his own country, and shook hands, was eclipsed by the reception given the representatives of the American film

AN APPEAL for a united front labor drive to defeat anti-labor legislation pending in the State Assembly was sounded Friday night by J. K. (Spike) Wallace, prexy of the Musicians Local 47. Speaking to representatives of various film unions and guilds at the Roosevelt Hotel, Wallace stated that the situation facing labor was critical. He said some of the pending bills would destroy the labor movement, and pleaded that the 'prestige and power of Hollywood' be thrown behind a movement to bring about their defeat. Wallace said that the Musicians were going on the air weekly over KFWB with an appeal for moral and financial support for the program. The first musical show is scheduled for Thursday night (17). Senator Robert Kenny also spoke on the situation at Sacramento and the necessity for a combined drive by labor. It was agreed that a permanent committee of one from each union and guild be formed. Delegates were to return to their organizations for approval and another meeting was called for Friday (18). Among those represented at the meeting were painters, cartoonists, laboratory technicians, machinists, set designers, film editors, publicists, readers, writers, actors and clerical workers.

SINCE the press preview of 'Citizen Kane' and plans of RKO to release the film, mysterious efforts to 'invade his privacy' are reported by Orson Welles, writer-actor-director-producer of the much-discussed picture which was protested by friends of a publisher on the ground that the fiction too closely paralleled certain episodes in his career. Welles' draft board was solicited, without acquiescence because of the local prohibition, by a persistent inquirer to give intimate information about Welles' status, his affairs, his address. Persons representing themselves as real estate men (and who may have been just that) began making similar inquiries at Palm Springs where Welles stopped off on way back from setting his play, 'Native Son', in New York. While Welles and Dolores Del Rio were strolling in Palm Springs home grounds of Dr. Maurice Bernstein, who adopted Welles as a young lad, a news photographer dashed up in an auto and made pictures. Other approaches of similar nature have been reported by Welles within the past few days. The attempt to get information on Welles' army questionnaire were checked by his business manager, who learned the source of the inquiry.

PARAMOUNT, which bought Dalton Trumbo's 'Remarkable Andrew' for $27,500, shelved it because the studio assumed that its somewhat anti-British flavor and its anti-war attitude would offend the English market and would be unpopular in many sections of this country, as well. Interesting commentary on that assumption is the fact that a London publishing house, Bodley Head Company, has bought the British rights and will issue the novel there immediately. 'Andrew' was bought here for pictures before publication, on strength of the first 10 chapters and an outline of the remaining chapters. Same London publishing company also has option to issue 'Johnny Got His Gun' after conclusion of the war.

WARNERS is sending photos of 100 stock girls, small feature part players and femme extras to all U. S. Navy bases in connection with the picture, 'Navy Blues', from which the gobs are expected to select the six most beautiful glamees. The selected beauts will then be called the Navy Sextette and will be exploited and popularized by Warners in an effort to have the gals approximate the distinction of the old Floradora Sextette. Sailors will be asked to pick ten, and out of these the six finalists will be named. They will be featured in the picture, given important billing and sustained exploitation. Studio is trying to find one of the original Floradoras to act as 'chaperon' for the Navy's choice.

BIDS for loan of Dorothy Comingore, who scored with an outstanding performance as the singer-protege of the publisher in RKO's 'Citizen Kane', have been renewed by Paramount and Metro. Both these studios had made her offers after 'Kane', but RKO took up its option and is canvassing roles in forthcoming pictures which will be commensurate with actress' marked talents. Miss Comingore was previously at Warners and at Columbia, having terminated at latter studio on amiable settlement of stock contract because desired roles were not forthcoming. She is currently vacationing at Carmel with her husband.

A SHOWDOWN in the American Federation of Labor drive to unionize the Walt Disney Studio has been postponed until this week. The decision is reported to still hinge on the attitude of executves toward the independent guild, which AF of L leaders have branded as a 'company union.' It is probable that the first get together meeting will be held tomorrow.

DR. ORLANDO E. MILLER, who served a prison sentence in connection with a film stock fraud, is not the father of Patsy Ruth Miller, former film star, as was erroneously reported in a recent issue of Daily Variety. Father of the actress, Oscar W. Miller, died in June, 1939. Similarity of names coupled with the fact that Dr. Miller has a daughter named Ruth, also formerly in pictures, was responsible for the inadvertence.

Film Review

Wildcat of Tucson

(Western)

Columbia production. Stars Bill Elliott. Features Evelyn Young, Stanley Brown, Dub Taylor. Supporting players: Kenneth MacDonald, Ben Taggart, Edmund Cobb, George Lloyd, Sammy Stein. Director, Lambert Hillyer. Associate producer, Leon Barsha. Original screen play, Fred Myton. Photography, George Meehan. Film editor, Charles Nelson. Reviewed at the Hitching Post, April 11. Running time: 59 mins.

Columbia's series of Wild Bill Hickok westerns have hit a steady pace for out-of-doors entertainment, and 'Wildcat of Tucson' is no exception. Starring Bill Elliott, series' latest entry is a neat package of better-than-average western formula aimed straight at satisfying those Saturday matinee and night audiences who find particular delight in the doings of sagebrush heroes. Elliott is an extremely likeable crusader against desert wrongdoing and hits the mark with his followers for solid, all-around satisfaction in the field of two-gun Gallahads.

Wild Bill is absent, leaving his younger brother in the doubtful caretaking hands of Dub Taylor, a clumsy, comical film cowpoke. Dave Hickok, incensed at the conniving of law and order with a slick confidence man to steal the Arizona ranches of old established settlers, gets himself jailed by trying to fight the settlers' battles. Taylor rides for Wild Bill and the latter works with a deadly smoothness to right all wrongs and round up the bad men. Elliott's Wild Bill character, in addition to the usual riding and shooting ability of such leads, has also a feeling of reality and depth that is without exception among our flock of screen gunwearers.

In addition to the Elliott talents, Columbia has gifted this oater with Stanley Brown, a young man whose personality indicates the ability to leap from straight prairie ballad to the feature production class with only a bit more training. Evelyn Young is the heroine, Kenneth MacDonald the chief villain. Both are more than eligible in their assignments. Dub Taylor's corny concertino playing and even more corny warbling are a refreshing relief from the accepted practice of stopping a gunfight for the crooning of some nostalgic ditty about the range. His comedy is broad and perfect for his audience. Ben Taggart, Edmund Cobb, George Lloyd and Sammy Stein lend the best of support.

Lambert Hillyer's direction never sluffs a scene in the original script by Fred Myton. George Meehan's camera is good, and Leon Barsha's production is all that could be asked in the western field.

Theodor Sparkuhl has been assigned to head cameraman spot on 'Among the Living' at Paramount. Haldane Douglas will be art director and Joe Youngerman assistant director.

Weiss Gives Decish On Ascap Washup As He Goes East

Little likelihood of any definite decisions on resumption of relations between broadcasters and American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers can be expected before annual meeting of National Association of Broadcasters in St. Louis, May 12-15, it was indicated by Lewis Allen Weiss, headman of the Don Lee network, on the eve of his departure today for New York. He was summoned to New York by directors of the Mutual network for another parley with the Ascap committee.

Weiss said that the Mutual board is still exploring formulae for a basis on which to proceed toward settlement of the music controversy and that all developing from this week's meeting would be the framing of recommendations for submission to the group of stockholders.

Through a gracious gesture by Gene Buck, Ascap prexy, the Don Lee network was enabled to use religious music, controlled by the Society, on its Easter and pre-Easter broadcasts from Forest Lawn and Hollywood Bowl, Weiss declared.

Committee representing CBS in the music scrap met with Ascap last Friday in New York to set up a basis of procedure.

submitted its original demand that the minimum ceiling be lifted from 55 cents per hour to 75 cents, with an increase of approximately 10 cents per hour in the higher classifications.

The walkout started at 7 a.m. Friday, after the deadline had been shoved back 24 hours in the hope that Conciliator Fitzgerald would be able to arrange an amicable settlement. It is reported that an agreement had been reached between the local management and the union, but that the home offices at Bridgeport, Conn., turned thumbs down on the deal.

The call for a stoppage of work was then sounded, and the employes marched out 100%, according to union officers. This claim was not denied by company executives, who admitted that an agreement had been made that they would not even attempt to use their offices during the duration of the strike. The union said that 85 employes were affected.

A picket line was immediately established, with both male and femme workers marching. A sound truck was on hand to furnish music for the pickets. Strike headquarters were opened at 1030 N. Seward. It also was announced that flash picket lines would move in front of Columbia Broadcasting Co. from time to time unless the strike is quickly ended, the first having been staged Saturday. It was reported last night that CBS executives would enter the negotiations today.

Columbia services the record business for the 11 Western states, handling a big portion of the radio transcription. The Bridgeport local of the union had advised union tops here that it will refuse to accept any transcriptions from west of the Rockies during the duration of the strike.

Robert Kennedy is chairman of the union negotiating committee, with William B. Elconin sitting in as international representative for the union, which is affiliated with the Congress of Industrial Organizations. Original negotiations for the company were handled by James Hunter and James Murray, vice-presidents, with Paul Crowley, plant manager, finally taking over.

MEXICO GOES WILD OVER H'D GOODWILL GROUP

industry. Taft and Diaz met on a bridge to exchange greetings. This time the bridge was crossed, and it was truly a national holiday.

As a personal appearance tour the junket was a terrific success. As a noble experiment in building good will the trip left little to be desired. As a stimulant to the already huge interest in American motion pictures it was tremendous.

Fully 250,000 people greeted the Americanos. Each of the quarter of a million expressed the greatest hero worship and adoration those in the junketing group had ever seen. Ambassador Josephus Daniels, who gave a reception for the group, said the visit of the picture crowd was 'the greatest single gesture of good will' ever made by America.

Jock Whitney, director of the Motion Picture Division of the Office of Coordination of Commercial and Cultural Relations Between the Americas, said that 'Hollywood just doesn't know what it is.'

On Saturday night the stars made personal appearances at four theatres, the Chino, which seats 4,200; Alameda, 3,500; Olympia, 2,220; Magerit, 1,700. On Sunday they visited the Rex, 1,200 seats; Palacio, 2,200; Iris, 3,300, and repeated at the Olympia and the Alameda. There were 600 Mexican police used Saturday night to fight back the crowds. On Sunday the Mexican officials fully realized the popularity of the stars and 1,200 police were used. The police work was magnificent, for three buses, loaded with the troupe, had to inch along heavily packed streets between each appearance.

Tops in popularity were Norma Shearer, more her beauty than for her acting; Mickey Rooney, because he represents the true boy; Laurel and Hardy, who are almost national heroes; Joe E. Brown, because he is 'sympatico' (genuine and sincere), and Kay Francis because she is charming, sophisticated, and well groomed in her films. Frank Morgan was especially well liked as were Sabu, Patricia Morison, Johnny Weissmuller, Lucille Ball, Desi Arnaz, Mischa Auer, Susan Hayward, William Holden, Brenda Marshall, Brenda Joyce, Mary Gordon and Wallace Beery. Esther Fernandez, Mexican star of 'Rancho Grande' who is studying English at Paramount where she is under contract, had a special kind of reception. Laurel and Hardy are called 'Gordo and Flaco' (fat and thin), and they probably have a greater audience appeal than any in the group, because they have made their pictures in Spanish, delivering the lines themselves.

SELZNICK RECEPTION

David O. Selznick because of his production 'Rebecca' and 'Gone With the Wind'. Frank Capra was also given a rousing welcome when he stepped onto the stages of the houses visited.

Entire trip was a tremendous experience for those in the party. Newspaper correspondents that have covered many events of international importance were overwhelmed. The stars on the trip said they had never been so passionately greeted before.

There was a little 10-year-old boy standing at the station when the train bearing some of these stars came in. He saw Johnny Weissmuller. 'Atrza Tarzan' he thrilled. Then as if afraid those around him would not understand how important it was for him to be the first one in all Mexico City to spot Weissmuller he threw back his head, beat his tiny fists upon his breast and shrieked 'Tarzan' again and again.

There was the policeman at the Hotel Reforma entrance (one among the many) who was overwhelmed by the crowd. He pleaded: 'Please. Why don't you be sociable? Be sociable and go away.' These two incidents cannot demonstrate the dynamics of the crowd. Words are impossible, save such words as terrific, colossal, stupendous and unequaled.

Among those on the committee to arrange details of the personal appearances and the showing of the pictures were Joe Mullins, Mullen and Oscar Brooks, Warners; Exchange Heads Bob Graham, Paramount; Charles Niblo, Metro; Rafael Sevilla, Columbia; James Urbina, United Artists, and Enrique Zeniert, attorney of the Major Exchange and representative of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors Association in Mexico City. Theatre owners who joined in the program were Luis Castor, who owns the Chino and 10 other houses; Emilio Azacarraga, owner of the Alameda; George Noonan, of the Olympia, and Fernando Garcia, manager of the Iris. The Iris is one of 11 houses operated by Echevarria & Co. Noonan is a brother of Sally O'Neill and Molly O'Day.

PICTURES SHOWN

Some of the pictures shown at the several theatres were given advance premieres and will not actually be booked until one or two months from now. Others were opening. Advance premieres were 'The Letter', Warners; 'Victory', Paramount; 'This Thing Called Love', RKO; 'Pot o' Gold', Globe; 'Mr. and Mrs.', RKO. 'Chad Hanna', 20th-Fox, and 'The Invisible Woman', Universal, were those opening. 'Pride and Prejudice', Metro, had a repeat showing. A Mexican film, 'Creo En Dios', independently produced by Fernando De Fuentes, and released through Grovas & Co., starring Fernando Soler and Isabella Corona, also was premiered.

Brenda Joyce, Les Peterson and Carl Schaefer were stranded at Zacatecas when the train pulled out 15 minutes ahead of schedule. They commandeered a broken down car. Galloped some 10 or 15 miles across gopher mounds and threw cactus to a water stop where they haled the train and climber aboard. The car owners refused to accept money when it was proferred, stating in broken English that it was 'too much of an honor to assist a distressed picture star who also is a blonde.' Money was finally forced upon the reluctant driver.

The plane party had no large difficulties save at the overnight stop at Mazatlan. There, during the summer season hotels are packed and it was almost impossible to get rooms. Finally, all were quartered in one hostelry with such gentlemen as Selznick, Whitney, Capra and the actors sleeping in a dormitory on cots while the femmes doubled up in private bedrooms. The plane party had to stop at Mazatlan Friday night when head winds prevented arrival at Guadalajara.

President Avila Camacho so far has not appeared at any of the functions. Tomorrow will be taken up with visiting governmental departments, shopping, and squeezing in a few moments for visiting, which has been impossible because of the full program.

LA Civic Opera Co. Enters Season Big Pledge

Seeking to overcome past season deficits which have necessitated a last-minute call on sponsors to make up, Los Angeles Civic Light Opera association is entering upon its 1941 season at the Philharmonic Auditorium with a $20,000 guarantee against losses already pledged.

Under the new setup David R. Faries, president of the association; Edwin Lester, its general manager and stager; Homer Curran and Louis Lurie have each pledged $5,000 as a guarantee against the current season's productions dipping deeply in the red, as has been the case during the past two seasons.

Last year the light opera festival dropped around $16,000, and the year previous about $12,000 loss was reported on the season. This, in spite of a high budget set up at the start of each season, and the hefty grosses garnered during the short seasons here and in San Francisco.

Civic Opera association opens its 1941 season at the Philharmonic here May 19, with production again entrusted to Edwin Lester. Emulating the plan adopted last year, the San Francisco opening will likely be a week later, with the various operettas and productions alternating between the northern and southern California metropolises.

Association has reached a decision to call off its production of 'Porgy and Bess', and instead will wind up its season with a lavish production of 'Cabin In the Sky'. 'Cabin' is to be brought to the Coast intact, with Tod Duncan and Rex Ingram in the lead roles and the Katherine Dunham dancers featured.

IA LOCALS VETO TAKEOVER; WANT HAND IN NEW DEAL

requests contained in their demands.

The union heads pointed out that in all of their communications to the International they made it plain that they had no desire for the International to take over the negotiations. They said the IATSE constitution provided that the International extend them every aid in reaching an agreement with the employers, and that this was the only request that had been made.

Several of the business representatives and board members have been meeting two or three times weekly, and it is understood the consensus of opinion is that no eastern deal will be okayed unless the membership has a hand in negotiating it. They said the workers are still burned over their conditions demands being sidetracked last year when they were handed a 10% wage boost, which they claim resulted in a decrease in their annual earnings.

A showdown in the situation is expected within the next 10 days. Pat Casey, Producer labor contact, now is in New York for conferences with unions in the Studio Basic Agreement, as well as with George E. Browne, prexy of the IATSE. The opening conferences have been delayed in the hope that decisions will be handed down by the Wage-Hour Administration on disputed classifications. These, however, are expected before May 1.

Motion Picture Film Technicians Local 683 has made no request of the International, and is proceeding to handle its own negotiations. International Sound Technicians Local 695 also has been proceeding on its own, as has Studio Laborers and Utility Workers Local 727, and others. Many of the crafts, however, have been sitting back and awaiting developments.

The situation may be solved by the International calling the business representatives east to discuss their demands and secure their tentative approval before going into a huddle with company executives.

RKO, Disney Sign New Pact For Two Features

Contracts have been signed between RKO and Walt Disney Productions, giving the former distribution rights to two additional Disney animated features. Already holding releasing contracts for 'The Reluctant Dragon' and 'Bambi', newcomers are 'Dumbo' and the first feature-length Mickey Mouse cartoon, untitled.

RKO and Disney have also extended releasing deal for the Disney short subjects.

'The Reluctant Dragon' now is nearing preview date and is slated for release next month. Picture is a combination of live action, starring Robert Benchley, and animation. 'Dumbo' likely will hit release around August and will be followed during the winter months by 'Bambi'. Mexico City, April 14.—Hollywood's good will expedition to Mexico left here today after the most frantic and exciting two and one-half day demonstration this country's capital has seen since Zapata took the land away from the rich rancheros and started giving it back to the Indians.

'Fantasia' Sound Plan Gets Simplification

SWITCHES BASE

The Producer-Screen Actors Guild Standing Committee which recommended elimination of all casual extras who worked 10 days or less in 1939 has switched its base to 1940, it was learned yesterday. The work of compiling statistics on the earnings of extras in the independent field, etc., will be completed within two weeks, and the names of several thousand atmosphere players will be removed from the list of those available to accept studio calls.

The plan has already been approved by the extras themselves. Committee members are said to have felt that it would be better to take 1940 as a base from which to begin eliminating, since 1939 figures were more or less out of date. It is understood that records at Central Casting Corp. show that 7,000 extras were given work out of that bureau during the past year.

Hollywood Inside

RECENT purchase of 'Drivin' Woman', unpublished novel by Elizabeth Pickett Chevalier, by Metro is reported to have had some curious circumstances behind the buy. Miss Chevalier is understood to have had an idea for the story and to have submitted a 90-page outline to MacMillan's Publishing Company in New York for possible okay to go ahead with the yarn. Idea leaked to the studios, who immediately requested copies of the outline from publishing concern and the bidding started. Metro's top price is reported to have been $25,000 cash as an advance payment and another $25,000 to be paid as soon as work is written, plus 25 cents per copy up to a total purchase price of $100,000. With $25,000 now in the bank Miss Chevalier is now busy writing her book, both for delivery to Metro and to MacMillan's, which will publish it in 1942.

METRO commissary patrons are doing a burn over the change in policy since the departure of Frances Edwards, claiming said switch in policy included a hike in prices, as high as 50% on certain food items. A top flight director recently put on an indignation act when he was handed a 90 cent ticket for a sandwich, pie and coffee. The smaller fry are giving the Culver City hamburger joints a play, claiming the 25-cent minimum in the dining room and upped prices are out of their class. Four hostesses are now employed in the dining room. Is reported that commissary, which is operated as a convenience for employes, has not been doing anything like paying its way, and that management feels new prices are not high for the class of foods served. Commissary is now operated by a former employe of Brittingham Catering Co.

ACTRESS who recently finished the femme lead in a picture for an independent company, didn't make many friends while fulfilling the assignment according to studio rumors. Femme is understood to have finished the picture without posing for special portrait stills, using one excuse or another to dodge the duty, causing company to be forced to dig up old portraits taken during the time a couple of years ago when it was helping her to get re-established. At time actress signed to do the picture she made the provision that studio was to plant no local publicity on her assignment, apparently preferring that her Hollywood contacts know nothing of her association with the small company, in spite of the fact that it was this same outfit that played a big part in bringing her name before the ticket-buying public a few years ago.

'Navy Blues' and 'King's Row' will swell the extra call by double the number now at work.

Mickey Mouse was all swelled up as he read the glad tidings from the animation factory. He was about to be starred in a full-length feature, and he felt bigger and bigger every time he read the news.

In the midst of his inflation he was interrupted by a familiar greeting from his old pal, Donald Duck.

'Hya, Mickey,' quacked Donald, who was repulsed by a quick brush-off.

'Listen, jerk,' said Mickey snootily. 'From now on, you will address me as Mr. Michael Rodent.'

Film Previews

Model Wife

(Comedy)

Universal production. Stars Joan Blondell and Dick Powell. Supporting cast: Charlie Ruggles, Lee Bowman, Lucile Watson, Ruth Donnelly, Billy Gilbert, John Qualen, Lorraine Krueger and Glen Turnbull. Produced and directed by Leigh Jason. Screenplay, Charles Kaufman, Horace Jackson and Grant Garrett, from original story by Leigh Jason. Photography, Norbert Brodine. Art director, Jack Otterson; associate, Harold H. MacArthur. Film editor, Arthur Hilton. Musical director, H. J. Salter. Previewed at Alexander, Glendale, April 14. Running time: 78 mins.

Dependable audience entertainment is generated in this well-knit, amusing and showmanly production which has the quality and substance to hold its own amongst fast competition in the regular runs. Comedy is right down the alley for the great mass of customers and the playing and direction exploits every diverting element worked up in the original story and screenplay.

Of special interest to the trade is the fact that 'Model Wife' is the first package deal in which the profit-sharing arrangements of participants is so widespread. The stars, Joan Blondell and Dick Powell; the director, Leigh Jason, who also wrote the original yarn, and the script writers, Charles Kaufman, Horace Jackson and Grant Garrett, got no immediate coin for their effort, but will share in percentage of the returns.

They were assembled by Charles Feldman, who functioned as producer of the picture, sharing that responsibility, as credited, with Leigh Jason. It reflects directly and impressively on Feldman's showmanly ability that each member of the package deal so well justifies his hitch in the prearranged alignment as it came to Universal for the making of the film and its release. It goes far also in displaying some peculiar merits of the coordination of talent effected in this comparatively new type of talent delivery.

Joan Blondell is at her best, turning in a spirited comedy performance on the distaff side of a bickering marital comedy based on plans to prepare for an heir and the husband's efforts to get his smart wife out of the business world in readiness for the blessed event. Dick Powell takes another marked stride forward in establishing himself amongst the ablest light comedians in a mature and engaging role as an employe of a hard-boiled femme proprietor of a modiste salon. Charlie Ruggles contributes one of his inimitable prissified characterizations as the oldest of the employes who finally turns on his tormenting boss in rebellion with Powell.

Lucile Watson is the proprietor and does an excellent job in giving the kind of resistance which develops comic friction in the romantic involvements. Her son, very ably played by Lee Bowman, is a deter-

Footlight Fever

(Comedy)

A rather horrid example is held up to youngsters bitten by the acting bug in 'Footlight Fever', but, as it's all in fun there is a modicum of laughs in store for family audiences who happen to view this slapstick, much-to-do-about-nothing entry from RKO. There is no sensible recommendation to be made to exhibitors who might play it other than, because of its senselessness, feature will serve as adequate supporting material in the smaller situations.

Two prime muggers, Alan Mowbray and Donald MacBride, hit an extremely broad interpretation of the main characters, an impoverished stage director and an equally penniless legit producer, respectively. The scramble that the two boys put up to stage the latest brain child of Mowbray's is stretched a bit thin in spots and piled on too thick in others, but in-between a spot of dialog or situation helps to carry the load along its over-long 70-minute distance.

Pair make several bad stabs at coin raising, but are finally successful when they tackle Elisabeth Risdon, a wealthy recluse who forsakes her self-imposed exile to again tackle life and forget her mourning for a long-lost sailor. Miss Risdon puts up the cash, not without handicaps; the show's a hit; her niece, Elyse Knox, gets her romance with Lee Bonnell, the play's lead; the villain, Bradley Page, is foiled, and etc.

Howard Benedict's production did not have much budget leeway to work with but the mounting is satisfactorily handled. Irving Reis, in directing, overcomes the noticeably jerky pace in the first few reels when he begins to let things run wild, come what may, and garners the laughs. Ian Hunter and Bert Granet crammed the script with a great deal of material, some of which would be best dropped to allow full play to the surefire gags. Robert DeGrasse photographed ably and other technical aides are okay.

The Screen Actors Guild is still holding the lid tight on the admittance of new extras, an announcement yesterday disclosing that only 13 Class B applications were approved during the past month. Those given a favorable nod are June Atwell, Joseph Diskay, Loretta Fought, Josefina Fuentes, Helene Hindin, Charlotte Hunter, Claire Laub, Rudy M. McIntosh, Edwin G. Marty, Dolores E. Navarro, Beverly Ray, Maury Roberts, Marie Steadman. Class B approvals in New York were Alma Brock, Pat Dee, Hazel H. Kempf, Hildred Price, Joanne Marshall, Gudrun Hansen, Jane Wickersham.

Applications of Class B members are now passed on by a committee composed entirely of Class A members. Approval was taken out of the hands of Class B members when the Producers threatened to insist the books be thrown open to all extras because requests for cards for certain players were denied by a committee named by the former SAG Council.

Assembly Request

A request that the General Assembly adopt a resolution authorizing appointment of a committee to investigate Central Casting Corp. was made in a communication sent to Speaker Gordon Garland last night by Ed Dahlen, sponsor of a picket line at the extra bureau. Dahlen stated Gov. Culbert Olson also was being asked to keep his hands out of the film industry. Dahlen is demanding that the 'old-time extra players' be given a better shake in distribution of extra jobs.

ROSTEN GIVES OPINION

Film actors think that Producers should eliminate propaganda pictures and feel that 'too many pictures have trifling plots', according to opinions voiced by Class A members of the Screen Actors Guild in a survey conducted by Dr. Leo C. Rosten of the Motion Picture Research Project. The actors were evenly divided upon the influence of the box office.

Most of them criticized the kind of story in which they were asked to perform, it was disclosed by the SAG yesterday. 'Too much gag humor and not enough real humor', is an example of their criticism. Another was 'the great weakness is material and inability to develop writers for this medium. We are still rehearsing plays and stories instead of creating for the screen.'

Other comment was 'pictures this year seem to be getting down to earth and telling about things that matter'. 'Writing has become more adult in the past three years'. 'Each year our pictures are improving from story standpoint'. Others, however, were not so hopeful, commenting: 'Our pictures lack the overtone and thoughtfulness of many foreign made pictures'. 'Too much talk and not enough action'. 'Too little care in points of plain good taste'. 'Too much standardization'. 'Too many typical movies'. 'Pretty shoddy, well-worn stuff.'

Some felt that Producers by improving the calibre of pictures would meet boxoffice tastes. Others expressed the belief that the American films had been directed below the intelligence of the American box office.

In commenting on the star system, a small percentage felt 'too much footage is devoted to drama personality', and 'too many stories are made to fit the personality of contract stars.' Quantity production, especially of B pictures was criticized. Many recommended elimination of B pictures while others merely commented on the sacrifice of quality in B productions. Some felt double features were like an extra pair of trousers with a cut-rate suit, immediately branding the product as second rate.

mined suitor of Miss Blondell who is trying to keep her marriage to Powell a secret so she can continue to work when Bowman takes charge for his mother. John Qualen has good scenes as the janitor, and Billy Gilbert does his customary amusing stuff as the proprietor of a music shop to which the frugal folk of the neighborhood come for free concerts. Ruth Donnelly, Lorraine Krueger and Glen Turnbull also show well in support.

Leigh Jason has a canny eye on the widest and most dependable audience for this kind of farce comedy in his able direction. He socks his laughs. His characters remain genuine, to make their problems all the more amusing. He gets in a few moments of moving emotion to vary the mood, and tells his tale with appropriate tempo.

Screenplay by Horace Jackson, Charles Kaufman and Grant Garrett is a neat and excellently crafted piece of fun for any audience, giving the players rich opportunity and the director sound substance to deal with.

H'D GOODWILL TROUPE FADES FROM MEXICO CITY

ture fans yank out their knives and slash their seats to ribbons if they don't like a show there hasn't been a single instance of theatre seat mutilation since the gang arrived.

Junketeers have taken it big every minute of the long 60-hour riot. Sightseeing was out. Shopping was almost impossible to sandwich in between events. Mexico's bosom is broad and warm and the picture people have been given an example of hospitality they cannot forget. Mexico won't forget it either.

There have been some mild complaints from the local press, but so far there has not been a press conference with the Mexican press, although some of the more enterprising, on a catch-as-catch-can basis, have snagged interviews from individuals in the party.

Government officials, although hospitable and sporting to a fault, have expressed some displeasure over the fact that the junketeers are not remaining here four full days. The Motion Picture Industry Festival, decreed by President Avila Camacho, was to have lasted that long, but Hollywood cut it short.

Entertainment has been of a kind few of the group have ever seen before. Official government receptions have been stiff, hot and crowded, but the night spots, a fiesta, savage frenzied dances by native Indians, a superb riding exhibition by gentlemen riders and a ball last night at the Theatre of Fine Arts, one of the most beautiful and expensive houses in the world, have all brought gasps from the picture people.

Mrs. Oliver Hardy, so far, is the only casualty. Last night, at the brilliant ball, she slipped on some steps and sprained her ankle. She had to be returned to the hotel for medical attention. Today she was hobbling painfully.

Ball, attended by more than 2,000 persons, with the women charming in decollete and the men all in dinner clothes, save for the high ranking army and navy officers in their gold-braided, lavish uniforms, was a brilliant affair. The music was splendid and the stars really gave out with expressions of awe when they saw the great solid glass curtain, which it took Tiffany two years to make, in the Theatre of Fine Arts.

President Avila Camacho showed today as the party left for the airport. He held a brief reception and expressed regrets that he had not been present during most of the fiesta.

Vic Connors in H'wood For Conferences On AFRA Setup

Vic Connors, newly appointed national organizer for the American Federation of Radio Artists, arrived yesterday from San Francisco to confer with local AFRA officials. He is scheduled to return to San Francisco tonight to wind up his affairs there and will then go to New York to establish headquarters.

Connors resigned as executive secretary of the Bay City American Guild of Variety Artists to accept his new post.

Moral Lament

Sacramento, April 14.—It is now legal to take virtually everything else from an entertainer, excepting wardrobe, and the typewriter of a newspaper reporter, under a bill just signed by Gov. Olson. Measure declares them exempt from attachment or execution along with a chiropodist's instruments, waiters' uniforms and a cook's implements.

'Gas Light' Tour Of Canada In Shafer's Book

George Shafer, now presenting 'Gas Light' at the Hollywood Playhouse, is planning a tour of Canada with the company shortly after closing of the local run Saturday. Local troupe, which will be held intact for tour, will probably open in Vancouver. After a tour of the Dominion, Shafer then plans hitting New York in the late summer or early fall for a run there.

Because of the small operating nut and play's English background, Shafer figures Canadian tour will give him a reasonable profit for the jaunt. 'Gas Light' run at the Playhouse the past six weeks has yet to dip into the red. Small nut is also a factor in Shafer's New York plans, where he believes that by using the cut-rate houses and selling English angle a profit can be shown.

Schenck, Moskowitz Case May Go To Jury Tomorrow

New York, April 14. — Federal Judge Grover Moscowitz today refused to dismiss the income tax evasion charges against Joseph M. Schenck and Joseph Moskowitz. In making his plea for dismissal in the chambers of Judge Moscowitz, Harold H. Corbin, defense counsel, insisted the government had failed to make a case and that improper evidence had been admitted. He said one avenue of defense had been blocked by refusal of the Treasury Department to permit him to question agents.

U. S. Attorney Mathias Correa said he had advised the local office of the Treasury to give Corbin any information he desired. He said several agents were called, but that the court rejected their testimony as immaterial.

The jury will be recalled tomorrow when Attorney Corbin starts his summation. He will be followed by the prosecutor Wednesday morning, with probability that the case will be given to the jury late Wednesday.

'Scarface' Rolling

'Lady Scarface' went into production yesterday at RKO with Judith Anderson in the title role, replacing Marjorie Rambeau, who failed to complete another assignment in time for the new part. Added to the cast yesterday were Arthur Shields, Marion Martin, Mildred Coles, who reports as soon as she recovers from recent appendectomy; Eddie Conrad and Horace MacMahon.

U's Featuret Starts

NLRB Is Preparing To Press Disney Unfair Charges

Motion Picture Film Editors accusing Disney of 'sponsoring a company union'.

Walter Spreckels, NLRB regional director, declined to state whether Washington had been asked to set a date for a hearing in the Disney case, but other board attaches hinted that sufficient evidence had been uncovered to warrant action. They expressed the belief an early hearing would be ordered unless an amicable agreement was reached with the unions demanding recognition as collective bargaining representatives for the workers.

Aubrey Blair, AFofL international representative; Herbert Sorrell, business representative of Moving Picture Painters Local 644, and George E. Bodle, counsel for the SCG, are scheduled to confer with Lessing this afternoon. It is understood that both union tops and the rank and file workers are clamoring for drastic action if company executives persist in their refusal to talk agreements. Lot stewards have been meeting with the Cartoonists daily to get a consensus of opinion as to their views on what action should be taken.

The SCG claims to represent a majority of the 700 Disney workers, while the Teamsters, Film Editors and other groups also are demanding agreements.

Bercovici Sues Chaplin—

Konrad Bercovici, novelist, yesterday filed $5,000,000 plagiarism suit against Charles Chaplin in New York Supreme court, charging the comedian-producer had used the plaintiff's idea in 'The Great Dictator' without having received either credit or payment. Bercovici also specified in his suit that he had a contract with Chaplin since 1937 to write originals for the defendant, for which he was to receive 15% of gross plus screen credit. Part of the damages asked were for alleged work on 'The Haymarket Riot' and 'The Cry of the Wolf', screenplays he says were ordered by Chaplin and Paulette Goddard.

JAMES ROOSEVELT TAKES BRIDE IN RITES HERE

Exchanging vows in a double ring rite before a bower-altar in a private home in Beverly Hills yesterday afternoon, Captain James Roosevelt, eldest son of the President, and Miss Romelle Theresa Schneider, his former nurse, were married in a civil ceremony. In the presence of the groom's mother, Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, who planed here for the occasion; intimate friends of his, the bride's mother, Mrs. Jerome M. Schneider, and other relatives, the service was read by Municipal Judge Arthur S. Guerin in the home of Mr. and Mrs. George P. Converse at 1029 Hanover drive.

Just prior to the ceremony, Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, bestowing the President's as well as her own blessing, took the 25-year-old Wisconsin girl who was soon to become the bride, in her arms and expressed her happiness. Grouped about the wedding bower, decorated with Easter lilies, aside from Captain Roosevelt's mother and the bride's mother, were the groom's sister, Mrs. Anna Boettiger and her husband, John Boettiger, Seattle publisher; the bride's sister, Miss Phyllis Schneider, and Mrs. Lon F. Tubbs, and among guests in a limited list of 25, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Henigson, Mr. and Mrs. Reeves Espy, George Cohen of Loeb, Walker and Loeb, and his wife; Mr. and Mrs. Robert Howard, Arthur Ungar, editor of Daily Variety, and Mrs. Ungar; Miss Helen McKenzie and James Benjamin, and the hosts, Mr. and Mrs. George Converse (the former Anita Stewart).

The bride was given in marriage by her brother, George Schneider, a student at Notre Dame. Matron of honor was Mrs. Maurice Benjamin, whose husband, close friend of Captain Roosevelt, was best man.

Captain Roosevelt, on short leave from his post with the U. S. Marines, was not in uniform. The bride wore an heirloom brought for her by Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt—a diamond pin—which had belonged to the latter's mother, and also on her simple traveling dress the diamond clip sent to her by the President. The groom's gift was a diamond and ruby bracelet.

The nuptials were followed by a patio luncheon. Jan Rubini's string orchestra furnished the music, with Salvatore Sanatella at the piano.

The bridal pair departed shortly afterward on a brief honeymoon to an undisclosed destination. Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt planed east to keep a speaking engagement in Charlotte, N. C. The Boettigers motored to San Simeon.

Captain Roosevelt leaves on foreign duty Friday.

THE TIME OF YOUR LIFE

A first night turnout of city swells went slumming last night through William Saroyan's double prize winner of last year. Theatre Guild's comedy-drama of life that passes through a waterfront saloon at the foot of Frisco's Embarcadero left most of the sitters as confounded as those who voted it the prize stage piece of the year—not once, but twice.

Being a Saroyan play, the action must take place where liquor is poured and every man spouts philosophy, most of it either deeply significant or just plain daffy—take your choice. 'We're all nuts', lets go a minion of the law, and some of the payees must have agreed with him, or what were they doing there?

What's the play about? Those who know their Saroyan can give the answer fast, 'What difference does it make? You'll have the time of your life trying to figure out what the Fresno Armenian is driving at unless deep in the folds of the play you can detect a fluttering clue. It's fun though, like trying to put together a jigsaw puzzle with a dozen pieces missing.

Eddie Dowling, who shares in the presentation and directed, with Saroyan, has the meatiest role as the spendthrift who drowns something or other in drink and takes up with every prostie that frequents the dive. He gives the role a colorful touch and an even, restrained performance. Julie Haydon, Hollywood's own, isn't overburdened with work as one of the soiled doves who rests her insteps at Nick's Pacific Street Saloon, Restaurant and Entertainment Palace.

Good bits are sprinkled throughout the three acts, five scenes, with a drunk, a cop, a hoofer, an Indian fighter, a barkeep and a lovesick Elmer drawing ovations for their contributions, extraneous and detached from the main theme (?) as they are.

Cast is one of the largest to trod the Biltmore boards in some time. Supporting Dowling and Miss Haydon are Blackie Shackner, Housley Stevens, Sr., John Farrell, Leo Chalzel, Ross Bagdasarian, Edward Andrews, Henry Jones, Fred Kelly, Reginald Beane, Nene Vibber, Grover Burgess, Hene Damur, William Bendix, Charles Kane, Arthur Hunnicutt, Ann Brody, Howard Barnhart, Marilyn Monk, Evelyn Geller, Carmel White, Eva Leonard-Boyne, Ainsworth Arnold, Tony Albert.

'Time of Your Life' will be on view at the Biltmore for two weeks. It's worth seeing if for no other reason than to try to savvy how the voting goes back east on what constitutes the best stagecraft of a year of plays.

Block Columbia Plant Reopening This Forenoon

line, although only a few are union members. They declined to say whether this move was part of a plan to try to reopen.

Negotiations between the company and the union apparently had bogged down yesterday, but it was stated they would be resumed at 9:30 a.m. today when another attempt will be made to reach an agreement. Edward Fitzgerald, U. S. labor conciliator, is expected to sit in on the session. While hoping that an amicable settlement would be reached, unionists said they were going ahead with plans for a monster demonstration in front of Columbia Broadcasting Co. Saturday night.

Officials of the union said letters were being sent to retail outlets of Columbia warning them they would face a secondary picket line if they stocked any records handled by Columbia. They said it also was possible that a permanent picket line would be established at CBS, which they claim is the parent company of Columbia. Studios who secure air trailers from Columbia also have been requested to suspend business with the company pending outcome of the strike.

Officers of the UERMW of A said the new deal with Allied called for a minimum scale of 72½ cents per hour, with an average throughout the plant of 84½ cents per hour. They said contract also calls for vacations with pay, closed shop, and blazes the way for severance pay for workers called into the military service.

The strike at Columbia was called at 7 a.m. Friday (11) when the company was reported to have refused to negotiate the union's demand that the minimum ceiling be tilted from 55 cents per hour to 75 cents. The union had offered to compromise these demands, but withdrew their offer after the walkout had started. About 85 workers responded to the strike call, completely suspending operations at the plant which handles the bulk of the transcription business west of the Rockies. Strike headquarters have been opened at 1030 N. Seward.

Robert Kennedy is chairman of the union negotiating committee, working in cooperation with William B. Elconin, international representative of the Congress of Industrial Organizations. Paul Crowley is local manager of Columbia, which has its home offices in Bridgeport, Conn.

Mexican Festival Party Gleeful Over Pix As U. S. Defense Weapon

By CHARLES DAGGETT

That motion pictures are the United States' greatest weapon in defense of America against totalitarianism and that film stars are the most powerful of plenipotentiaries was the collective opinion expressed yesterday by those who returned via Guadalajara in three plane loads from the Mexican Motion Picture Festival at Mexico City.

Already plans are hatching for junkets to other Latin-American capitals. High United States government officials believed, and are now convinced, after what happened in

MAJORS FOREIGN RECEIPTS 56% OF AMOUNT YEAR AGO

New York, April 15.—Despite increased revenue from such lesser markets as China, the Philippines and Cuba, major film company income from foreign sources generally is only 56% of what it was a year ago. Ten to 20% boost from the smaller territories, representing only about one per cent of the foreign total, is insufficient to compensate for the loss of the principal markets.

Because of coin export restrictions the income from Great Britain is only about two-thirds of that received a year ago. Latin-America is up about 10%, while the revenue from other countries is about follow-

Hollywood Inside

LOYALTY carries a higher value to Jim and Marian Jordan than a few extra thousand dollars a week. Finishing off six years on the air for Johnson wax yesterday, the Jordans (Fibber McGee and Molly) were baited with twice the coin they're getting to swing over to Swan soap for Lever Bros. after their current sponsorship expires. The Jordans gave the proposal a polite turndown with the explanation, 'they (Johnsons) gave us our big chance and stuck with us and we're not leaving them for any consideration'. The 'Fibber' program reposes in top position in the Hooper ratings and holds third spot in the latest Crossley release.

THE only hitch in seven hour visit here of Mrs. Franklin D. Soon call came from GC airport Mrs. Roosevelt was waiting patiently there for the ship. Plane immediately hopped over, picked up their last passenger and winged out a half hour late.

INHIBITIONS by officials of Douglas Aircraft Corp. and British Purchasing Commission against disclosure by 20th-Fox company of locations where shots with bombers are being made for 'A Yank in the R.A.F.' were not, as had been surmised, to keep the plane scenes secret from the public eye, but because scenes would attract crowds which might get out of hand and interfere with regular plane operations. So Director Henry King and his crew are working at secret airport.

FOLLOWING success of Universal's Abbott and Costello service number, 'Buck Privates', which was especially relished by the lads in uniform, studio is getting avalanche of letters from other branches of the U. Studio has scripts in preliminary work which may take Abbott and Costello through every branch of the service. Intended as numbers from which a selection of an official song for recruits of the Naval Training Station at San Diego were to be selected within the next few days, 'Bring On the Navy' and 'They're Off to See the World' were submitted to Commander Schulten and base station committee by Universal studio. Songs are by Don Raye and Gene de Paul, cleffed for Universal's new Abbott and Costello feature, 'In the Navy.'

A hat is a medium designed for the expression of individuality, chiefly among femmes. A male skimmer is largely conventional, fashioned by somebody in a Connecticut hat factory and chosen by the wearer's wife. Now and then a bachelor wears a hat until it becomes an antique. In 'Ziegfeld Girl' Metro has produced a worthy cinematic echo of that stage institution through which a show world genius helped publicly to glorify the American girl and was himself glorified by her, as she came in waves to grace his salon of follies.

The picture fills its frame with girls as beautiful, decor as lavish, song and dance and clowning as beguiling as anything Florenz Ziegfeld ever assembled behind his footlights and under his battery of spots. It also tells a compelling story of the backstage legend of this assembly of beauty for entertainment — how the girls were picked, where they came from, how they behaved, what happened to some of them and the men who courted them and pampered them, left them or married them.

They have made a dazzling presentation and a strong drama of their legend—Pandro S. Berman, the producer; Robert Z. Leonard, the director; the screen playwrights, Marguerite Roberts and Sonya Levien, working from the original story line by the late William Anthony McGuire, friend and associate of Ziegfeld; Busby Berkeley, director of the musical numbers, and a combination of playing and technical talent capable of lofting the grosses to the ceiling.

James Stewart, Judy Garland, Hedy Lamarr, Lana Turner are a combination of names to spin the turnstiles and entrench for runs even in the most decadent theatres. In the secondary bracket are Tony Martin, Jackie Cooper, Ian Hunter, Charles Winninger, Edward Everett Horton, Paul Kelly and Philip Dorn to head a strong and select support.

The showy numbers and the fetching songs bedizen the eye and ear, but balancing these lighter diversions is a drama mounting gradually to a tragic note, which gives the principal players deeply moving scenes of genuine emotion and dominate the more than two-hour show. The specialties, the comedy with which Ziegfeld relieved his parades of gorgeous fleshlings, are also worked in to round out the pattern and to give the mood variety and the staging contrast.

'Kane' Preems at El Capitan May 8; Day-Dates with RKO

'Citizen Kane', the Orson Welles-RKO picture, will be premiered here at El Capitan theatre night of May 8, at a $2.20 top. Thereafter, opus will be day-dated at the boulevard legit house and the RKO Hillstreet, downtown, on a two-a-day policy for El Capitan and three-a-day at the Hillstreet.

Deal for the acquisition of the El Capitan was closed yesterday, and house, for the first time in its career will be devoted to road showing of a motion picture. Policy mapped out calls for unreserved seats at matinee performances, at a top admission price of 75c, and one nightly performance at each theatre, all seats reserved at $1.10 and $1.65.

Day-dating of El Capitan with the RKO Hillstreet, for first time in history, has occasioned some comment in industry circles, as deal leaves out the Pantages theatre, regular daydater with RKO. Under the setup, regular run of film attractions ordinarily played day-date at the two houses, will be screened solo at the Pantages during the run of 'Kane' at the downtown theatre.

El Capitan, which has a seating capacity of 1571, is scaled for a possible $1,862 at the single night performance and slightly better than $20,000 per week. Hillstreet, with a capacity of 2872 and its two matinees and one night show could do as high as $40,000 per week if playing to absolute capacity.

Next For O'Keefe

Dennis O'Keefe, who was recently signed to a term contract at RKO, is scheduled for one of two pictures as his next assignment following the current 'Lady Scarface.' Studio has lined up either 'Journey Into Fear' or 'Weekend For Three' as his next, depending on which faces the cameras first.

He claims 13 brought him bad luck over a period of many years.

Anti-Consent Bill's Opposition Mounts In Minnesota

Minneapolis, April 15. — Last-minute outside opposition to Northwest Allied's anti-Consent Decree bill continues to mount and the Minnesota State Senate is delaying its vote on the measure. State Federation of Women's Clubs, and the Minnesota division of the American Association of University Women have joined the Minneapolis Parent-Teachers Associations, Fifth Federation of Women's Clubs and the Federal Motion Picture Council in writing every senator asking for defeat of the bill on the grounds that it makes block booking mandatory in the state and would place the state's stamp of approval on such a policy.

Measure passed the lower house 103 to 3 the week before last and was expected to breeze through the senate. Now it is admitted that many senators have changed their minds and will be on the negative side. Although it will come before the senate with a favorable committee recommendation, vote is likely to be much closer than previously expected.

Metro, Warners, 20th-Fox and United Artists have been fighting the measure, which, contravening the decree's groups-of-five selling plan for product, would allow regular practice of selling with a minimum 20 per cent cancellation and no forced selling of any films.

In fighting back in the senate, Northwest Allied is distributing circulars denying that block booking is abolished under the decree and would be perpetuated by the proposed law. Circulars claim the legislators are being 'misled' by untruths and that the organizations represented as opposing the bill never have been actually polled.

If the bill passes, film companies are expected to seek a restraining order and fight its constitutionality in the courts.

conference with NBC delegation on a basis of a licensing agreement at the Society's headquarters today.

Formulas which Mutual committee will consider calls for payment of fees on one of two bases. Network has the choice of paying a larger percentage on programs using Ascap music and a much smaller one if it prefers to pay a fee on all commercial business. Censensus of opinion in both music and broadcasting circles is that NBC, Columbia discussions with Ascap will drag on long after the convention of the National Association of Broadcasters in St. Louis week of May 12, and the only way these two networks will be precipitated into an earlier settlement is the sudden signing of the Mutual contract. Mutual management feels that if Ascap terms are right this can be effected before opening of the NAB conclave.

Schenck Defense Ends Pleading In NY Trial

New York, April 15.—The defense in the Joseph M. Schenck-Joseph Moskowitz income tax trial ended today, with Defense Counsel Harold Corbin spending six hours pleading with the jury to acquit the defendants. Corbin ran the gauntlet of emotions, from snarls and sneers at the government case, to almost weepy emotion, as he begged and hammered at the jury.

The attorney reviewed the entire case from start to finish, going over every point in an effort to prove the government had failed to make out a case. He pointed out to the jury the responsibility was theirs, and that the decision rested on their shoulders. The main issue is 'what kind of a man is Joe Schenck?' he shouted.

Corbin reviewed the testimony of character witnesses for both defendants, and told the jury that they could legally disregard all other evidence and take the word of character witnesses alone, for the decency of the men. He went into the Wertheimer and Bioff transactions, explaining details on these deals, and also the stock transactions. He attacked the government furiously for insinuations regarding Grace Poggi, and said he hoped that it would not affect her married life.

He charged there was a deliberate attempt to smear and destroy the character of Schenck by the government without any proof, and declared the government hides behind rules and regulations when questioned itself. He was referring to refusal of the Treasury Department to let its agents testify.

Corbin stated, 'I'm not saying Schenck is as clean as the driven snow. But if you take any man, no matter whether it be the clergy or anyone else, you can always find something in his life not quite up to snuff. You'd never forgive yourselves in a thousand years if you let these men go to jail. These men have lived right. Give them the benefit of every doubt. Make allowances. Take into consideration the good they have done as evidenced by the testimony here.'

The attorney continued, 'Here two men's fate rests in your hands. I ask you to do the right thing by your government and by them. I know that if you send them back to their friends, their families, and their businesses, you won't be doing anything wrong. I am not going to jail, it will be these men who have done no wrong. I don't want sympathy or compassion, but I want justice. No one will blame you for setting these men free on charges so poor and insufficiently proven.'

Prosecutor Mathias Correa sums up tomorrow, Judge Grover Moscowitz charges the jury, and the fate of Schenck and Moskowitz goes to the jury tomorrow night.

Errol Sanders Upped

Errol Sanders, for the past seven years head of the RKO studio personnel service, is being promoted to district salesman in company's Denver exchange, effective May 1. He is also president of the Studio Club. No successor for either post has been named as yet.

PRODUCERS WILL AIR SWG SQUAWKS FRIDAY

The Producers will voice their objections to certain clauses in the proposed Screen Writers Guild contract Friday night (18) at a meeting between the two groups at the Producers Association. The first meeting between the two negotiating committees was devoted entirely to a presentation of demands by the Guilders. Company executives will have their say at this session, and probably will make counter proposals.

The SWG is seeking a minimum wage scale for scriveners, elimination of all speculative writing, guaranteed terms of employment, abolition of flat deals under $5,000, and notification of all writers employed on a story. The SWG also wants control of assignment of screenplay credits.

Felts Busted

Laurence Clyde Felts, projectionist at the Regina theatre on Wilshire boulevard, has filed voluntary petition in bankruptcy. He lists liabilities of $5,413.39, and assets of $7,000, all but $50 of which is claimed exempt. Among creditors is Projectionists local, 150, International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes, on a personal note for $100. Felts in his petition claims he earned as salary last month approximately $29.

New Trial Denied

Motion for a new trial of the breach of contract action of J. N. Ermolieff vs. George Schaefer, prexy, and RKO Radio Pictures, has been denied by U. S. District Court Judge J. F. T. O'Connor. Ermolieff won a judgment of $7,000 in his suit for $100,000, and new trial application was the customary formality.

Disney Truce Reached In AF of L Drive To Unionize

A temporary truce was reached yesterday in the American Federation of Labor drive to unionize the Walt Disney Studio. Following a conference between Gunther Lessing, company attorney, Herbert Lamb, production manager, and AF of L tops, it was agreed the situation would be permitted to remain in status quo until the first of the week when the two groups would get together again.

It is understood that the company asked more time in which to consider demands of the various unions. The Screen Cartoonists Guild, which claims to represent a majority of approximately 700 employes, was represented by Aubrey Blair, AF of L international representative; Herbert Sorrell, business representative of the Moving Picture Painters Local 644, and George E. Bodle, attorney for the Cartoonists.

Blair heads north today for business conferences in San Francisco and Sacramento. He will return the end of the week, and another meeting with Disney executives will be arranged Monday.

UNION BOLTS COLUMBIA PARLEY; SAY BAD FAITH

president in charge of Coast operations for Columbia Broadcasting Co., having advised the union that any differences with CBS would have to be taken up with New York headquarters. As the unionists filed out, Elconin stated:

'The management still refuses to negotiate. They are making no effort to reach an agreement or solve this situation. They are stooping to the tactics of the most anti-labor corporations in an effort to starve their employes into submission and break our union. We believe this to be a deliberately fomented situation conceived in the profit-mad minds of the eastern executives and put into practice by their subservient yes men in the local management.'

Elconin and Robert Kennedy, chairman of the union negotiating committee, said arrangements were being completed for a monster picket demonstration in front of CBS Saturday night (19), and for a benefit show that same night at Carpenters Hall on Santa Monica. They said efforts were being made to secure top recording artists to appear on the benefit program. The affair is sponsored by the Filmtown Club, an affiliate of the Democratic Youth Federation of California. The unionists said a citizens' committee also was calling upon CBS to intercede and bring about an amicable settlement.

The company management declined to discuss the situation other than to state that another negotiations meeting was being called for today in the hopes of reaching an agreement. The strike of 85 employes was called Friday (11), when the management turned down the union's demand that the minimum wage ceiling be tilted from 55 cents per hour to 75 cents, with a raise of approximately 10 cents per hour in the higher pay brackets. The clerical workers were called in by the company but refused to cross the picket lines. Operations have been completely suspended since the walkout. The company handles the bulk of the transcription business west of the Rockies, making air trailers for many of the major studios.

Gerald Griffin Report Arouses AGVA Membership

The general membership of the American Guild of Variety Artists here and elsewhere throughout the country was aroused last night over reports from New York that Gerald Griffin had been named national executive secretary of AGVA or voted a salary as acting head of the group. It was reported that a meeting of the Mid-west AGVA locals had been called for the end of the week in Cincinnati, with a possibility that Coast locals would hold similar sessions.

Performers took the position that even if Griffin had been voted a salary and not actually appointed it was a violation in principle of the promise of the Associated Actors and Artistes of America that the post would remain vacant until the national election this month. The variety performers said their censure was not aimed at Griffin but that they did not feel anybody should be placed in the job before the election.

The AGVA situation has been simmering for months, and many leaders admitted that if the Griffin action was not rescinded it might result in another AAAA internal fight such as when the charter of the Ralph Whitehead Association was jerked. Griffin has been acting as national administrative head of AGVA without pay since Hoyt Haddock resigned as executive secretary.

Kenneth Thomson, vice-prexy of the AAAA's said he had not been advised of any action being taken in the Griffin situation in the east.

gend supplied by William Anthony McGuire, the scripters, Sonya Levien and Marguerite Roberts, build a fascinating tale of several girls who are recruited for the fabulous Ziegfeld ensemble; how boy friend and husband and fiance react to this 'theft' of their girls for the public service of beauty, and how the complicated problems of career and affection are solved, backstage, at home and in the unaccustomed estate to which the 'ziggy' selectees are recruited.

Lana Turner is a department store elevator operator from a good Irish family in Flatbush, in love with James Stewart, a truck driver, and trying later in a bewildered way to keep that love alive and in eventual-hope-of-marriage order when the spendthrift gallants storm the stage door after her elevation to follies stardom. Miss Turner, well handled and advised to confirm her own intuitions and ambitions, is forging ahead by leaps in her climb to importance as an actress of genuine talent. She does this role with distinguished success, relying very little upon physical charms but knowing how to use her smouldering appeal.

James Stewart handles a role of a kind to which he is thoroughly accustomed, with plenty of latitude for his special talent, especially effective in his scenes of hurt pride when his girl's head is turned by the suave devotions of Ian Hunter, and in the reconciliation just before the girl from Flatbush collapses and dies in the theatre as she watches a new line of beauties on stage.

Judy Garland, a few yesterdays from little girlhood, shows her amazing growth to outstanding ability as an emotional actress to supplement her fine singing voice. She is very appealing in the part of the young vaudeville performer, daughter of a vet with whom she sings and dances, Charles Winninger. In the picture she is a pony dancer, when she finally makes the Ziegfeld stage. Some of the film's finest scenes are hers.

Hedy Lamarr is cast as the wife of a penniless violinist, Philip Dorn, for whom her love never really falters, despite the flattering attentions of Tony Martin, singer, when she also comes to front rank for sheer decorative beauty in the follies. Upon her, even more than Miss Turner, are lavished the gorgeous Adrian-designed costumes.

Charles Winninger tugs at the audience heart as the assured father and outmoded vaude performer who tries to teach his daughter to follow his footsteps. He and Al Shean also score in the original 'Mr. Gallagher and Mr. Shean' number.

Tony Martin is a romantic figure in pursuit of Miss Lamarr and sings in fine voice. Jackie Cooper is the brother of Lana, and has several effective scenes. Ian Hunter plays his role with restraint and sympathetic note in his subtle campaign with Miss Turner. Edward Everett Horton sneaks in not a few laughs as the bustling, wise and almost paternal factotum for Ziegfeld in getting new girls and advising the veterans. Paul Kelly does his job of backstage chaperonage with skill and persuasiveness. Philip Dorn is effective in the few scenes with Miss Lamarr as his wife. Eve Arden shows up strikingly amongst the support, as do Renie Riano, Felix Bressart, Al Shean, Fay Holden, Dan Dailey, Jr., Rose Hobart, and Sergio Orta as a native dancer of Trinidad.

Robert Z. Leonard turns in an imposing and highly skillful work of direction in this follow-up to his previous Academy award show, the musical spectacle, 'The Great Ziegfeld'. Leonard's collation of the dramatic, the musical, the spectacular elements in the present instance is an amazing demonstration of his craftsmanship of his craftsmanship and his unerring showmanship.

Producer Pandro S. Berman and Director Leonard saw eye to eye and worked hand and glove in organizing and presenting this magnificent show, and every foot of it attests that effective entertainment coordination.

Busby Berkeley handles his musical number direction with his practiced eye for masses and movement and the spectacular, carrying on the screen technique on musicals he originated.

Ray June's cameras give the drama large pictorial grace and fascinating photographic detail and design.

Nacio Herb Brown and Gus Kahn, composers of hit songs for years, and Roger Edens score with principal production numbers, 'You Stepped Out of a Dream', 'Minnie From Trinidad' (Edens), while Harry Carroll's and Joseph McCarthy's 'I'm Always Chasing Rainbows' is sung most effectively by Judy Garland. Music score by Herbert Stothart is up to his high standard of melodic excellence, and Georgie Stoll complements with noteworthy music direction. Vocals and orchestrations are by Leo Arnaud, George Bassman and Conrad Salinger. Merrill Pye does the musical presentation.

Producers Publicity Group Plans Move On Previews

An ultimatum giving the Producers Publicity Directors Committee two weeks in which to meet demands of top Hollywood correspondents that they be given an opportunity to preview pictures before they are screened in the east was drafted yesterday at a meeting of the newspaper writers at the Brown Derby. The correspondents stated that if the situation is not cleared up before their next meeting, Tuesday (29), they will 'take steps'.

The correspondents are reported to have been in a militant mood, and to have expressed dissatisfaction with the Committee's promise to try to fix things up as fast as possible. Several pointed out that 'Ziegfeld Girl', previewed here yesterday, is already playing in Chicago, and that 'Penny Serenade', which will be screened here tonight, has already been shown in New York.

The newspaper writers also are asking that dates of previews also be advanced so they can be previewed two to three weeks ahead of their release. Correspondents take position the current situation is 'absurd' and makes it difficult for them to properly represent their publications.

Hollywood Inside

TROUBLE brewing between Judy Canova and Republic for the past three weeks over her next production, 'Puddin' Head', broke into the open yesterday with announcement by the studio that actress had been suspended. Last night suspension was denied by Miss Canova's agent, Arthur Lyons, who stated she was not under weekly contract to the studio, and so could not be suspended until the day the picture is due to start, and only then if she refuses to work. Lyons declared there had been a disagreement between Miss Canova and studio executives yesterday but no suspension resulted. Studio, in announcing actress' claimed suspension stated Miss Canova had insisted on story supervision and directorial choice. Republic also asserted that she had insisted that her brother, Pete Canova, also one of her representatives, be given the authority to pass on scripts, casting, directors, etc., before final production start. Republic stated it was willing to listen to suggestions but would not amend Miss Canova's contract to give her the power she assertedly is seeking. Suspension would mean actress could not carry out her future commitments at Paramount until ban is lifted, according to Republic spokesmen. 'Puddin' Head' is scheduled to go into production Monday (21) as the third picture for Miss Canova under a three-picture a year contract. Ticket, carrying yearly options, runs five years and second term for another trio of features was recently optioned by Republic.

PICTURE unions and guilds take to the air tonight over KFWB in a drive to combat passage of anti-labor legislation pending in the State Assembly. The first 15-minute program, sponsored by J. K. A big feature will be the appearance of Leon Leonardi with a 45-piece orchestra. Others on the entertainment program include Davey Forester, with a swing band, and Ollie Ponitz, soprano with the San Francisco opera. Wallace and Senator Robert Kenny will make short talks on the danger to labor if the pending measures are enacted into law. Plans to make the program permanent pending action on the bills will be discussed Friday night (18) at a meeting of representatives from a score of studio guilds and unions at the Roosevelt hotel. A general committee is being set up, composed of one member from each craft.

OTHER newsreel companies are understood to be doing a burn at Universal for banning all but its own outfit from the Deanna Durbin-Vaughn Paul wedding tomorrow. Universal is said to take the position that actress is its biggest property and that any shots naturally belong exclusively to the Universal newsreel outfit. It is also understood that other newsreels weren't so anxious to obtain footage of the star during her recent tour around the country, although Universal left the field wide open, so that now studio reportedly feels there is particular reason why it shouldn't lower all barriers at the wedding. Regular news photog syndicates and magazine bulb-pressers who have given studio cooperation in the past will be out in full force to grab pictures of the affair.

FILM extras doing soldiering in the many military sequences being shot in the major studios these days claim the directors are just as exacting as the most hardboiled top kick in the regular Army. The latest to give the boys a working over for failure to put out their best efforts is Jack Sullivan, assistant director on 'Sergeant York.' When he decided some of the 125 film soldiers working at Warners Ranch yesterday were not snapping to it as they should, Sullivan herded them into a bunch and threatened to cancel them all out and call for a new army today. Not until 4 p.m. yesterday were the 'soldiers' certain that they would be called back when reveille sounded today.

SEATTLE and Portland are divulged as two of the few remaining exchange territories in the United States that are still called upon by exhibitors to supply slides for forthcoming pictures. Penny Serenade

(Drama)

Columbia release of a George Stevens production. Stars Irene Dunne and Cary Grant. Features Beulah Bondi and Edgar Buchanan. Supporting cast: Ann Doran, Eva Lee Kuney, Leonard Willey, Wallis Clark, Walter Soderling and Baby Biffle. Produced and directed by George Stevens. Screenplay, Morris Ryskind. Story, Martha Cheavens. Associate producer, Fred Guiol. Photography, Joseph Walker. Film editor, Otto Meyer. Art director, Lionel Banks. Music, W. Franke Harling. Musical director, M. W. Stoloff. Previewed at the Alexander, Glendale, April 16. Running time: 120 mins.

This will come as a strange variation in role for Cary Grant to those who are accustomed to him in the sophisticated, sardonic assignments over the past few years. It is straight, and tragically dramatic, although leavened by much comedy growing out of the happy if not exactly peaceful period in the domestic life of a newspaperman and a former salesgirl in a music shop.

The change is good for Grant, and the picture contains his best enactment in a great emotional scene where, as a young publisher without income, he pleads to retain the child he and his wife, Irene Dunne, have provisionally adopted when the court threatens to restore the babe to an orphanage.

Picture is a heart-tugger, and because of the name draw as well as its merits as sentimental drama, played and directed in spots with unabashed hokum, is capable of getting important coin.

With top talent at his command, and the simple, fundamental domestic concerns of rearing a child and the stunning effect upon the foster parents when the girl dies at the age of nine, as his story material, George Stevens as producer-director creates an arresting film. There is exceptional singleness of mood and unity in the story, and it reaches rare depth of feeling in its careful unfoldment. The awkwardness of young parents in dealing with the needs of an infant they adopt at the age of five weeks, abetted by the practical experience of the husband's print shop foreman, is good for much genuine laughter. These scenes are developed at length and in ludicrous detail as the heart of the picture's entertainment. Preview audience ate them up and laughed for more, only to be saddened at the untimely and unpredicted death of the attractive young girl.

Story by Martha Cheavens is related in the now monotonously employed device of starting the narrative at the end and telling it backward, completing the circle with a return to the conclusion. Aside from this cliche it is commendably scripted by Morris Ryskind, rich in detail and episode and emotional power.

Wife and husband are about to separate, shocked into apathy by the death of the child. Irene Dunne is Metro production. Features Frank Morgan. Supporting cast: Ann Rutherford, Kent Taylor, Dan Dailey, Jr., Lee Bowman, Fay Holden, Virginia Grey, Anne Gwynne, Sara Haden, Olaf Hytten, Douglass Dumbrille, Clif Clark, Hal K. Dawson, Thurston Hall, Joseph Crehan, Frederick Burton, Howard Hickman, Virginia Brissac. Director, S. Sylvan Simon. Producer, Edgar Selwyn. Screenplay, Marion Parsonnet, Roy Chanslor, from play by L. du Rocher MacPherson. Photography, Harold Rosson. Art director, Cedric Gibbons. Water ballet, Lottie Horner. Dances, Sammy Lee. Music, David Snell. Previewed April 16. Running time: 78 mins.

Although 'Washington Melodrama' falls into a certain formula classification, it is neatly gyved, misses being stereotyped and has some high and lively moments of drama that should make it adequate supporting material in the better situations. Excellent direction by S. Sylvan Simon and good playing lifts the picture above the quality of those produced with similar limited means and time.

Frank Morgan, a kindly old Washington millionaire who is trying to get a bill through Congress to feed the starving peoples of war-torn Europe, is accidentally involved in the murder of a pretty chorine, Anne Gwynne. Morgan, lonely because his wife, Fay Holden, and daughter, Ann Rutherford, are always away on world tours, has given innocent attention to the chorus girl. He writes a note to her and gives her some money. Dan Dailey, Jr., nitery emcee, demands some of the cash. When she tells him she is going to send it back to Morgan he socks her, hard, and she dies. (That punch is one of the roughest ever filmed of a man striking a woman.)

Kent Taylor, publisher of a tabloid, who loves Morgan's daughter, bitterly opposes passage of the millionaire's bill. Later, when Dailey blackmails Morgan, Taylor helps him out by hiding a clew left at the scene of the crime. Miss Rutherford, realizing her father is in danger, pretends to be a rich French refugee, charms Dailey and wangles the key to his apartment. Virginia Grey, Dailey's girl friend, jealously threatens to turn him in to the cops and he shoots her. Taylor and his star reporter, Lee Bowman, arrive just in time to capture Dailey, and Miss Grey fingers him on her deathbed.

Morgan does a good job as the affable millionaire. Miss Rutherford is charming in the masquerade that fools Dailey. Latter makes a splendid killer, merciless, slimy and smooth. Miss Gwynne has the right mixture of hard sweetness as the chorine, and Taylor gives his usual brisk, competent job. Bowman is a standout.

Edgar Selwyn keeps production values well rounded. Water ballet scenes, beautifully staged by Lottie Horner, gives an extensive air to the picture. Harold Rosson's photography was up to his usual standard.

Wild Man of Borneo

(Comedy)

Metro production and release. Cast: Frank Morgan, Mary Howard, Billie Burke, Donald Meek, Marjorie Main, Connie Gilchrist, Bonita Granville, Dan Dailey, Jr., Andrew Tombes, Walter Catlett, Joseph J. Green, Phil Silvers. Directed by Robert Sinclair. Screenplay, Waldo Salt and John McClain, based on play by Marc Connelly and Herman J. Mankiewicz. Photographed by Oliver T. Marsh. Musical score, David Snell. Film editor, Frank Sullivan. Reviewed at the Orpheum theatre, April 16. Running time: 79 mins.

Metro has concocted a breezy little comedy from this stage play produced 'way back in 1927, and with Frank Morgan in the principal role supplies the market with a moderate-cost picture that is well suited for its secondary place on a twin bill. It's a story of that part of show business with which the public is little familiar, the medicine show and the actors' boarding house, with the time and locale laid back in the days when Theodore Roosevelt was president and Admiral Dewey ruled the roost at Manila Bay.

Critical observers may be prone to find numerous faults with the film, and the fact that it was completed nearly six months ago, without being given a release, is indication that Metro was somewhat chary about foisting it upon an unsuspecting public. Comedy, however, will find favor with the not-too-discriminating film fan, and as such probably will return its cost with something to spare.

Morgan is cast as the medicine show spieler, 'as gifted a grifter as ever milked a sucker', and gives an outstanding portrayal of the somewhat difficult role. As a confirmed liar and a braggart his better nature reveals itself when he is brought face to face with his daughter whom he has not seen since her babyhood, and patrons will be quite willing to overlook his shortcomings as a father in his evident desire to do right 'by Mary', the daughter, played sympathetically by Mary Howard.

Quitting the medicine show where he is associated with Andrew Tombes, Morgan, always putting up a front despite the absence of coin from his pockets, takes his daughter to a theatrical boarding house presided over by Billie Burke, a former stock leading lady and a devotee and idolistic admirer of Richard Mansfield.

Donald Meek, playing a bird-man, is adept at whistling, but possesses a suspicious nature, and he suspects Morgan right from the start. He ferrets out Morgan's soap-making at home, and just when the grifter is about to be exposed for playing a wild man in a former crony's museum, operated by Walter Catlett, he wins new confidence by saying the whole thing was a wager, cooked up by his 'pal', Mansfield.

Schenck, Moskowitz Found Guilty In New York

New York, April 16.—Joseph M. Schenck and Joseph Moskowitz were found guilty of income tax evasion by a Federal court jury here which had deliberated for 10 hours and five minutes. Schenck, found guilty on two counts of the indictment, faces a possible sentence of five years and a $10,000 fine on each count, while Moskowitz, convicted on only one count, faces a maximum of five years and $10,000 fine.

Judge Grover Moscowitz set April 24 as the date to hear a motion to set aside the verdict and for sentence if the motion is denied. The case was given to the jury at 4:25 in the afternoon and the verdict was returned at 2:31 a.m. The jury had returned to the courtroom at 10:40 and asked that Judge Moscowitz's charge be re-read. This occupied one hour and the jury then resumed its deliberations.

Schenck was found guilty on the first count in the indictment which charged fraud and evasion of $189,495 in Schenck's 1935 tax. Both Schenck and Moskowitz were found guilty on the second count of the indictment, which charged evasion of $64,197 in Schenck's 1936 tax. Both were acquitted on the third count which charged evasion of $158,353 in Schenck's 1937 tax, and on the fourth count, which charged conspiracy to defraud.

Moskowitz was found not guilty on the first count, as well as the third and fourth counts.

The case went to the jury's hands at 4:25 p.m., after a two-hour charge by Judge Moscowitz. In the morning session Prosecutor Mathias Correa reviewed the entire case for three and a half hours. He declared the government had proved the defendants' guilt beyond the shadow of a doubt.

The prosecutor declared the character witnesses were not important, and intimated they would not have testified if they knew all the facts. Correa declared the prominent position of the defendants should not influence the jury, as they were no better nor worse than anyone else. He declared the dividend return due Schenck on 1937 tax has no bearing on the case, claiming the attempt to defraud came before examination of returns by agents and their approval, and that it was not binding as agents allegedly fail to see everything.

Books and records were hidden, Correa complained. The prosecutor declared the defendants depended upon a transcontinental system of bookkeeping, and intimated they got away with returns in other years. Correa insisted estimates are not allowable under the law when actual figures are available. He stated certain items deducted were 'outrageous'. He characterized the defense as an 'attempt to glamorize the trial by use of household film names'.

Correa declared he entertains lawyers and does not deduct anything from his income tax returns. He said most of the government witnesses were unfriendly and under Schenck's domination. He demanded to know why Lou Anger and butlers and servants at Schenck's home were not called by the defense. He charged the jury with the sole responsibility to see that justice is done, and said he did not fear their decision.

JUDGE REPEATS INDICTMENT

Judge Moscowitz then repeated the entire indictment, and stated that the defendants are to be considered innocent until they are proven guilty. He said the burden of proof was entirely on the government, but that the government does not have to prove absolute guilt, just beyond a reasonable doubt, and told the jurors they must not flinch from performing an unpleasant duty. He said the main decision of the jury must be whether the evasions were deliberate or the result of carelessness. If the first, he said the defendants were guilty; if the second, they were not guilty.

The judge said no inference must be drawn from the failure of Schenck to take the stand, and that Moskowitz's testimony must be considered as interested testimony. He said that good reputation prior to a crime was no excuse for leniency on the part of the jury. He said that guilt can be established on any of the four counts, that all don't have to be proven, and that circumstantial evidence can convict.

He told the jury that if it was undecided between innocence and guilt, the defendants must be given the benefit of the doubt. He said they could convict on the $100,000 Bioff deal alone, if the jury decides the money was received as income. He stated that where estimates are made, they are allowable under the law only if definite work sheets are not available. He said the jury must determine whether the estimates were carelessness or deliberate.

On stock sales to Roland West and William Goetz, Judge Moscowitz said the jury must decide whether they were real or a faked sale. He said the fact that Schenck gave the money back meant nothing unless it was a deliberate attempt to cheat.

CORBIN'S EXCEPTIONS

Defense Counsel Harold Corbin then took 75 exceptions to the court's charge, some of which were that Moskowitz was an interested witness and the fact that no reference was made to interested government witnesses, failure to mention Schenck's business expenses were normally more than ordinary, the remarks on character testimony, to statements on estimates, etc.

The courtroom was crowded with friends and well-wishers of Schenck and Moskowitz. Besides Sid Grauman, Nick Schenck, who have been daily attendants, executives and wives of Metro and 20th-Fox were present, with others including David Bernstein, Charles Moskowitz, Gene Fowler, Ruth Nolander, Kathryn Sullivan, Walter Reade, William Phillips, Ed Churchill, president of Donahue & Co.; Jack Pegler, of Lord & Thomas; Aubrey Schenck, Joe Pincus, etc.

RADIO CALLED BY U. S. TO BALLY BONDS, ARMY LIFE

Radio and those sponsoring programs on the network will be pressed into service by the government to make the nation Baby Bond-conscious, and to impress the next contingent of draftees with the attractiveness of army life. Reports from the east indicate that the Treasury Department is preparing a notification to all stations and commercial users of the air to pitch in and help along both projects.

Each sponsor, it is understood, will be asked to devote one complete program to the Baby Bonds, to be placed on sale next month, and to weave as much material as possible into scripts on the happy lot of draftees. Idea is being sold to advertisers on the basis of a patriotic gesture, with the government's recently organized radio department to collaborate on the campaign copy.

Tay Garnett Resuming Own Production Setup August 1

Tay Garnett will resume his own production company activities after Aug. 1, and his first picture will be 'Three Sheets In the Wind', using his 'World Cruise' backgrounds. Plan is to produce and direct four, for whose release negotiations now are on the fire. Ken Englund has completed screenplay for the initialer.

Garnett has signed Brian Donlevy for the male star role. Donlevy has commitments at Paramount for 'The Birth of the Blues', starting Friday, and an option on a second before he can mark his slate for the Garnett film. that inasmuch as the Parsons and Carroll daily roundups do not carry any mention of RKO pictures or personalities, due to the Hearst-'Citizen Kane' tiff, their comments do not reflect a true coverage of the film front.

Wilson was backed up by the sheet's publisher on the toss-out when he declared that he couldn't edit the facts from a pre-selected fraction of picture news. Hearst attack on the CBS Sunday sustaining feature, 'The Free Company', is not being transmitted on his INS wire but filed 'overhead'. Welles, against whom the attack is inferentially directed, appeared in only one 'Free Company' broadcast. Program, it is understood, has government support.

Attempt to draw Hollywood Legion Post of the American Legion into the 'Free Company' controversy failed yesterday when the resolutions committee refused to take any action on a proposal to force the show off the air. Committee stated that it would take no action until ample proof of Welles' alleged radical tendencies is submitted.

nent picket lines might be extended to CBS next week unless the company makes a 'sincere effort to get together with the union'. A benefit entertainment show for the strikers is scheduled for Carpenters Hall Saturday night after the demonstration in front of CBS.

After the unionists claimed the company had refused to meet with them, James Dougherty, of the Los Angeles Industrial Council, with which the United is affiliated, stated:

'We feel that this offer of the management is a stalling move. However, if they are willing to sit down and negotiate in good faith then the union will be only too glad to comply. It is our hope that the management has reconsidered its foolish policy of trying to starve the men out and thereby break the union.'

William Elconin, international representative of the union, said the workers had made every effort to get together with the company, but that the company had not been acting in good faith. He said the workers were determined to remain out until their demands are recognized, and claimed the record business is completely tied up so far as Columbia is concerned.

Representatives of the union said the sponsors of several transcribed air programs were threatening to bring suit unless the producers deliver the programs. In the meantime, pickets continued to march in front of the plant, and no effort was made to resume operations, the office workers having refused to cross the picket lines.

The union is demanding the wage minimum be tilted from 55 to 75 cents per hour, with a 10 cents per hour raise in the higher pay brackets. The company offered a flat increase of 1.7 cents per hour, which was promptly vetoed by the union.

Burke menage, and her brat of a daughter, Bonita Granville, maintain their suspicions of Morgan to the end, but when the former finally has her ex-hubby, Catlett, arrested for making away with her funds, and induces him to re-marry her, they are finally softened.

Miss Howard, meanwhile, has a romance with Dan Dailey, Jr., a former acrobat and motion picture inventor, and the fadeout has Dailey's invention accepted, an offer made him to produce pictures, and Morgan and Miss Howard as his leading characters.

Aside from Morgan and Meek, who give outstanding performances, and Billie Burke, who, as always, romps through her comedy part, Bonita Granville turns in an excellent portrayal of a part for which she was long noted before her advancement to bigger and better roles.

Catlett is his own inimitable self as the museum operator, and Dan Dailey gives a somewhat stilted performance of the youthful inventor, who is hep to Morgan all the time. Marjorie Main sort of overacts her part as a domestic, while Connie Gilchrist is well suited for the deserted wife role. Others are adequate.

Robert B. Sinclair's direction is excellent, and the screenplay by Waldo Salt and John McClain is as good an adaptation of the former Broadway play as could be looked for. Oliver Marsh has turned in a capable job of photography and background music by David Snell is flawless.

Penny Serenade

packing her belongings. She comes across their book of musical records, starts to play them, is reminded by each of an episode in their life. These episodes are chapters in the continuity. In the end there is reconciliation and a plan to adopt another child, since she is incapable of motherhood because of injuries received in an earthquake.

Love story and parenthood tribulations and joys are very movingly done by Miss Dunne and Grant, and in support Edgar Buchanan as the sympathetic friend and shop foreman, and Beulah Bondi as the orphanage matron, give memorable performances. Ann Doran is the nine-year-old in a most appealing enactment of genuine skill. Wallis Clark impresses in the role of judge.

Camera work by Joseph Walker, music by Franke Harling and music direction by M. W. Stoloff are of a quality commensurate with the fine tone of the production. Fred Guiol is credited as associate producer. Some of the sentimental scenes, particularly a Christmas entertainment by children, are held too long. Aside from this over-footage, the sincerity of treatment, the homely content, the excellent playing and the penetrating direction combine to give 'Penny Serenade' an assurance of widest appeal.

Hollywood Inside

HEARST newspaper campaign against the CBS airshow, 'The Free Company', coinciding with the attack on Orson Welles, yesterday suffered its second setback in two days when the Beverly Hills Post of the American Legion refused to consider a resolution condemning the program. Previously the Hollywood Legion Post took identical action. Understood that matter will come before the State Legion at its Santa Barbara session Sunday with the likelihood that the state body will go on record as opposing any participation in the Hearst campaign against the CBS program. Columbia took 'The Free Company' show at the suggestion of James Boyd, dollar-a-year man and officer overseas in the last World War, now in charge of the exploitation of hostile propaganda under Solicitor General Francis Biddle. Department of Justice is definitely tied up with the airshow and has been giving it every cooperation. Louis B. Mayer has had an official communique from Washington asking his cooperation in furthering the success of the program. Copy was submitted and turned down by the two Hearst Los Angeles newspapers on 'Citizen Kane', which will have its local road show preem at El Capitan theatre in Hollywood night of May 8, and begins a day-date road show run the following day with the RKO Hillstreet theatre. Charles Koerner, RKO theatre chief for this area, submitted eighth inch ad to both the Examiner and the Herald-Express, to run April 24, along with similar copy furnished the other Los Angeles dailies. Both Hearst newspapers declined the copy, giving no explanation for their stand. It was predicted that such action would result, but an opportunity to run the advertising was given each publication.

DR. LEO C. ROSTEN, of the Motion Picture Research Project, in giving a breakdown of his recent survey of the motion picture industry explained yesterday that only two of the many actors queried had expressed a desire for elimination of propaganda pictures. He said that because figures were not cited the impression had been given that a substantial number of players favored abolition of propaganda pictures. In his breakdown of the survey, Dr. Rosten stated: 'The questionnaires upon which we reported to the Screen Actors Guild contained 189 comments on the content of pictures today. Out of these 189, only two actors mentioned ''propaganda films.'' Twenty-five actors asserted that too many pictures were being made ''from formula.'' Ten actors specifically asked for pictures which dealt with contemporary, economic and social problems, e.g. ''more pictures with educational and social value''; ''make more pictures like 'Dr. Ehrlich','' ''Grapes of Wrath'', etc.; ''deal with social problems honestly''; ''indulge in more much-needed American propaganda.'' ''Dr. Ehrlich'', ''The Grapes of Wrath'', ''Abe Lincoln in Illinois'', ''The Informer'', and ''Ninotchka'' were mentioned by name and praised. Thirty-five actors praised the films for having improved, ''daring to be honest and free'', possessing ''a growing maturity of approach'', etc. There was far more criticism of ''run of the mill pictures'', ''mass production'', ''gangster films'', ''B Pictures'', ''Escapist themes'', etc., than of propaganda film.'

SAM GOLDWYN couple weeks ago told John Chapman of New York Daily News that he thought Orson Welles was a 'genius.' This happened during a discussion at a dinner party which both attended in the home of Edgar Selwyn. Chapman printed it in his column. Then Goldwyn was questioned about the statement by Hearst newspaper representatives who did not approve of Welles being dubbed a 'genius' by Goldwyn. Chapman was called in by Goldwyn who wanted to clarify or qualify the yarn that had been printed through some sort of retraction. However, the columnist nixed the idea and as far as the record goes with the NY Daily News Welles is still a 'genius' so far as Goldwyn is concerned.

Film Previews

This is another of Columbia's problem pictures—the one of disreputable auto camps and the vice traps concealed behind the respectable front of hospitality. 'Under Age' draws a strong example and ably makes its point to prove acceptable exploitation material for the smaller houses. There is also another exploitation angle—picture is probably the last of the 'sweater' productions to slip by before the Hays office decreed there is to be no further emphasis placed on maidenly charm and grace by the dubious concealment of knitted garments.

Story tells of two sisters, forced to become camp hostesses after failing to find legitimate employment when freed from a reformatory after serving vagrancy sentences. The younger sister, lured by the easy money and flattering male eye becomes deeply involved in the ring; is killed, brutally, when she threatens to expose operations to the police after her sister is badly beaten for keeping an out-of-bounds rendezvous with one of the ring's victims. Gang is finally rounded up and jailed through a novel story twist when the other girls rebel at the murder.

Nan Grey and Mary Anderson, the sisters, older and younger respectively, handle their chores capably. Tom Neal serves well the part of the young victim who falls for Miss Grey. Alan Baxter brings his usual menace to the killer spot. Leona Maricle is particularly able as the operator of the nefarious enterprise. Don Beddoe takes care of the few comedy bits. Yolande Mollot, Patti McCarty, Wilma Francis, Barbara Kent, Gwen Kenyon, Billie Roy and Nancy Worth are the discerningly cast sweater wearers. Edward Dmytryk marches the direction along without a lag in interpreting Robert D. Andrews' script of the Stanley Roberts original story. Ralph Cohn's production values do well by the budget allocation and John Stumar's camera displays considerable agility in photographing the players.

Castings For 'Landing'

John Miljan, Thornton Edwards, Harold Goodwin and Robert O. Davis have joined the cast of 'Forced Landing', Pine-Thomas production for Paramount release. Picture rolls today under the direction of Gordon Wiles at Fine Arts studio. Richard Arlen, Eva Gabor, Nils Asther, J. Carrol Naish, Evelyn Brent and Victor Varconi head the cast.

Rep 'Lady' Release (27)

Republic will release 'Lady From Louisiana', with John Wayne and Ona Munson, on April 27. 'The Singing Hill', Gene Autry starrer, goes into release April 26.

The Cowboy and the Blonde

20th-Fox production. Features Mary Beth Hughes and George Montgomery. Supporting cast: Alan Mowbray, Robert Conway, John Miljan, Richard Lane, Robert Emmett Keane, Minerva Urecal, Fuzzy Knight, George O'Hara, Monica Bannister, William Halligan. Directed by Ray McCarey. Associate producers, Ralph Dietrich and Walter Morosco. Screenplay by Walter Bullock, from original by Walter Bullock and William Brent. Photography, Charles Clarke. Art direction, Richard Day, Lewis Creber. Film editor, Harry Reynolds. Set decorations, Thomas Little. Musical direction, Cyril J. Mockridge. Previewed April 17. Running time: 68 mins.

A light, breezy brand of entertainment is rounded up for program service in this dalliance of a rodeo cowboy and a bit of blonde dynamite which combines the background of Hollywood film studios and the great open spaces. The picture smacks of the western, in that it has riding and the duds of the dude vaquero, but it is essentially a romantic comedy centered on the charms and the temperamental tantrums of a spoiled film star, who is finally tamed by the big lummox of the ranch who takes her away from the top studio executive.

George Montgomery parades his wares for the first time in a top role, opposite Mary Beth Hughes. Cowboy actor works well, handles himself with ease, has an excellent voice and rides to-the-saddle-born. He came to the studios from Great Falls, Ida., and did some professional box-fighting before landing a film contract. Lean, rangy, personable and with a manner, looks like he's got something that'll go well in semi-westerns and perhaps something more exacting later on.

Miss Hughes is very sirenic in her role as the screen star who kicks everyone around until the boy from the ranges booms into her life.

In Walter Bullock's screenplay, from an original shared by William Brent, the action shifts from studio backstage stuff, with plenty of chuckles, to the ranch where the blonde finally runs down and lands the stubborn waddy—a neatly fashioned tale, whipping up a tasty romantic hash from old ingredients. Alan Mowbray, as the picture mogul; Fuzzy Knight, Robert Conway, John Miljan, Richard Lane, Robert Emmett Keane, Minerva Urecal, George O'Hara, Monica Bannister and William Halligan add up effective support.

Ray McCarey directed capably for laughs and the kind of romantic didoes implied in the attractive title, capturing every bit of amusement suggested in the script.

Ralph Dietrich and Walter Morosco give good account of their coproducership in organizing a sound piece of film merchandise for the program support spot.

Charlie Clark gets grade-A lensing to give his people the best advantage and his locations attractive quality. Rest of the technical support exceeds the standard usually found in modest budgeters.

Final Org Tonight On Group To Battle Bills

Plans for organization of a general committee of studio guild and union tops to combat passage of anti-labor legislation at Sacramento will be completed tonight at a meeting of union representatives at the Roosevelt hotel. J. K. (Spike) Wallace, head of Musicians Local 47, will preside. Each union and guild has been invited to appoint a delegate to sit on the committee, which plans to contact Assemblymen and other State leaders to urge defeat of measures which Wallace and State Senator Robert Kenny claim would virtually destroy the labor movement.

The first move against the bills was taken last night when the workers took to the air over KFWB, with a program headed by Edward Arnold, prexy of the Screen Actors Guild. This program probably will be continued until all the measures have been acted upon.

Morgan, LeRoy Head To Par Studio

Oscar A. Morgan, Paramount shorts sales manager, and Fred LeRoy, in charge of exchange operations, are heading to the Coast as part of a nationwide tour they are making. Sales policies and quotas for new season's crop of shorts will be discussed, with Morgan probably holding a general confab here of all Par Coast exchange heads and sales personnel.

New York Pic Haunts Gloomy Over Schenck Decish

New York, April 17.—Midtown haunts of film and other business executives were a composite picture of gloom today as a result of the convictions of Joseph M. Schenck and Joseph Moskowitz on income tax evasion charges. Everything being relative, and while London's blitz and the Balkan setbacks are vaster world ills, the popularity of both Joes with the show bunch brought it just a shade closer to them.

Both were flooded with wires and phone calls. The major note of negative decision is the sorrowful manner in which Nick Schenck took it. Both Joe Schenck and Attorney Harold Corbin were bolstering Nick after the decision, rather than feeling sorry for themselves.

McGuire, Cashman Plane to Texas

David Butler, who will produce and direct Kyser's next film at RKO, is making the jaunt with band leader to talk over story plans. Butler and Kyser have been having difficulty lining up the proper yarn but hope to settle on an idea during the seven-day air swing of the west.

FOREIGN MANAGERS STUDY NAZI SEIZURES IN PARIS

New York, April 17.—Foreign managers of major companies huddled here today regarding Nazi seizure of the Paris headquarters of American distributors. Meeting expressed concern over properties and coin still due them in France. Film distribs probably will work through the United States foreign funds control commission to obtain certain French-owned properties and money due this country in payment for funds due them for nearly a year.

It is estimated that there is much more French property here than the funds due the U. S. distributors in France.

PAR RESHUFFLES RELEASES

Paramount has reshuffled its release schedule for the fourth quarter of the current season considerably to take advantage of two holidays and stagger distribution of its more important product. Shuffle affects 11 features, two of which will hit the holiday trade of the Fourth of July and Memorial Day.

'I Wanted Wings', formerly set for July 18, now goes out May 30, and 'Caught In the Draft' draws release on July 4 because of its service theme instead of May 30. Others include 'Border Vigilantes', (18); 'Power Dive', (25) instead of May 23; 'Reaching For the Sun', May 2; 'There's Magic In Music', May 16—was May 9; 'Pirates On Horseback', May 23; 'One Night In Lisbon', June 13 instead of May 16; 'West Point Widow', June 30, was July 25; 'The Parson of Panamint', June 27; 'The Shepherd of the Hills', July 18 instead of June 13; 'Forced Landing', July 25 instead of June 20; 'Kiss the Boys Goodbye', Aug. 1 instead of July 4; 'Wide Open Town', Aug. 8 instead of Aug. 1; 'Aloma of the South Seas', Aug. 15, and 'Flying Blind', Aug. 22. first quarter of the 1941-42 program is well under way.

Both B. G. DeSylva, production chief, and himself a writer, and Dozier, who helped spot new writing talent in the studios while heading the story and writer branch of the Berg-Allenberg agency, favor a drive to build Paramount's list of contract writers to a maximum to assure proper vehicles for the players on the studio roster.

Deal now pending for story talent will bring at least four more top writing names to the studio under exclusive term pacts as result of the decision to augment Paramount's already heavy scrivener list. Currently studio has 41 writers at work on 28 screenplays. Recent term tickets handed out include Harry Tugend, Dalton Trumbo, Kenneth Earl, Curtis Kenyon, Joseph Fields, Jerome Chodorov and Walter De Leon, swelling number of term writers such as Preston Sturges, Charles Brackett, Billy Wilder, Frank Butler, Don Hartman and Virginia Van Upp.

During his trip east Dozier will look over the field of magazine writers, newspaper writers and younger playwrights to select fresh writing talent for the new list studio plans to build.

Hope Turns Airplane Pilot for Goldwyn Production

Bob Hope's one-picture commitment to Samuel Goldwyn will be a musical with a South American background with comedian playing a Pan-American airplane pilot. Because of Paramount's production rush to get a backlog of Hope pictures for future release, the untitled Goldwyn production will have to wait until fall unless it can be sandwiched in somewhere between Hope's home lot schedule.

Goldwyn also is understood to want Paramount to loan Dorothy Lamour for the top femme role in his picture, and deal may go through if both she and Hope can be cleared at the same time.

When Hope and Goldwyn originally made their one-picture deal, comedian was supposed to do the film during June or July. He will receive $100,000 for the outside feature, which Paramount agreed he could do at time his new contract was negotiated some months ago in lieu of the higher salary Hope had asked.

Reason for the heavy Hope schedule at Paramount is to prevent situation that arose after he had completed 'The Ghost Breakers' and went out on a personal appearance tour. Comic's success on the jaunt caught studio without a picture to shove into release after 'Ghost Breakers' for a nine-month period. Since his return, Hope has made 'Road to Singapore', 'Road to Zanzibar', 'Caught In the Draft', and now is playing in 'Nothing But the Truth'. His next will either be one with Madeleine Carroll or the forthcoming 'Road to Moscow', and may possibly be able to squeeze in the Goldwyn musical after 'Truth'.

Goldwyn's present plans call for the Hope opus to be fourth on his schedule, but with the four pictures overlapping. He starts shortly on 'The Little Foxes', has an untitled Gary Cooper starrer down as second and then will start work on his part of the Hans Christian Andersen feature he will co-produce with Walt Disney.

In a letter read to the opening meeting of the society's annual convention, Mr. Roosevelt said that 'those who disagree with what is being done, and with the manner in which it is being done, are free to use their freedom of speech.' The letter was read by Tom Wallace, retiring president of the society and editor of the Louisville Times. Wallace said it 'may become a very historic document.'

Four Tom Keene Pix Replace Tune Oaters Planned for Ritter

Four of the new Tom Keene westerns to be produced by Monogram will replace the quartet of musical oaters on the company's program for 1940-41 which were to have starred Tex Ritter before he moved over to Columbia. Pictures, to be produced by Robert Tansey, will be filmed at the studio in Prescott, Ariz., which is equipped with two stages and a western street.

Advance crew leaves next week for Prescott to begin preparations for the first, 'Wanderers of the West', slated to roll the following week. Robert Emmet, Tansey's scribbling handle, has completed scenarios on the four initialers.

Col Musical Dept. Sked Heavy

Columbia's musical department under Morris Stoloff is running under heavy pressure currently with six musicals on its schedule and musical sequences in four other pictures, in addition to regular background scoring work to be done. Extra burden of the unexpected sequences in straight dramatic films include Penny Singleton and the St. Brendan's Choir singing 'Trees' in 'Blondie In Society', three tunes for 'Girls From Panama', a saxophone sequence in 'Heaven Can Wait' with Robert Montgomery, and a trumpet playing episode with Melvyn Douglas in 'Our Wife'. Straight musicals on the program which are making the heaviest demands on the department are 'You'll Never Get Rich', the Fred Astaire-Rita Hayworth costarrer for which pre-recording is under way, and 'Betty Co-ed', with music by Ozzie Nelson and his band and vocals by Harriett Hilliard.

Producers To Mull $500,000 Guild Boost Monday

the half million mark. There is a possibility it will go even higher if the current peak of production is maintained.

Actor groups that would be directly affected are the extras, small freelancers and bit players. The increase for extras would result from the reclassification of extra pay brackets. These probably would call for elimination of the $8.25 and $11 calls, and adoption of a $10 bracket to replace them. The use of $5.50 extras also would be limited, with no wardrobe or age specifications permitted. There has been some discussion of limiting $5.50 calls to the use of 50 or more extras at a time.

The position is taken that a limitation on $5.50 calls and abolition of the $8.25 and $11 calls would eliminate hundreds of adjustments, which up the studio bookkeeping costs in addition to the necessity for larger pay. It also is claimed that it has been difficult to set a line of demarcation between $8.25 and $11 calls.

Happy Days Again

Extras are singing 'Happy Days Are Here Again'. With the Screen Actors Guild reporting approximately 1,800 job calls yesterday, several waivers had to be issued because of the demands for youngsters 18 to 25 years of age. Because all of the studios were demanding 18-year-olds at the same time, both the SAG and Central Casting Corp. experienced difficulty in getting the players. As fast as one group of youngsters was turned loose, another studio was demanding their services. While calls this week have been the heaviest in months, practically all of them have been for extras 25 and under.

The Producers also are expected to discuss the recommendation for abolition of the Producer-SAG Standing Committee. Maintenance of this committee last year was approximately $36,000, exclusive of the thousands in fees paid attorneys for appearing before the committee in adjustment cases. A similar recommendation has been made to the SAG, but no official action has been taken on it.

RKO Will Hold Its Sales Convention In NY June 16-19

New York, April 17.—RKO will hold its sales convention at the Waldorf-Astoria hotel from June 16 to 19, inclusive, according to announcement made today by Ned Depinet, vice president in charge of distribution, in speaking before the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers. Depinet, addressing group on a survey of the effect of the consent decree, stated that RKO would screen its first group of five pictures at the sales convention and shortly after hold its first trade showing of the films as called for under the decree. Pictures will be selected from those now in production on the Coast.

Depinet, in remarking on the showings, said, 'In other words all our people will see the first group in June—two and one-half to four months before release date—to have ample time for proper selling, advertising, exploitation and pre-selling to the public.'

Shortly after the trade showings RKO will start licensing the films for distribution in September, the start of the 1941-42 season. Depinet said he feels the screening of these features so far in advance is a step forward in the industry. Sales convention will be attended by all U. S. and Canadian district and branch managers and salesmen, Depinet said, in addition to home office and studio officials and delegates from a number of the foreign offices.

Depinet emphasized the fact that the consent decree will improve the quality of pictures because it will put the spotlight on the pictures which should not have been made. Producers, naturally, will be more careful as to what stories and casts they put into production, he concluded.

'The new system will shake us out of a groove and we face a grand chance to take off our coats and go to work to raise the standard of entertainment and to find ways and means of attracting a larger percentage of the public to motion pictures,' he stated, in speaking of the forthcoming selling season.

'Since early December, facts and figures concerning every theatre in the United States have been compiled. We have more complete records than we ever had before. We are in better shape, therefore, to deal with exhibitors everywhere under the consent decree.

'Naturally, we will do much more selling out in the field and we feel that under this plan there will be much closer and more intimate relations between exhibitors and ourselves.'

Columbia Recording Workers Claim Victory in Strike Break

beat this by shipping bulk to Kansas City with the idea of filling western orders there.

The Bridgeport union was notified, and word is said to have been received that no western orders would be filled. The United also has made arrangements with RCA-Victor and Allied not to accept any Columbia work until the walkout is settled.

William Elconin, international representative of the United, said plans would be completed today for a monster picket demonstration Saturday night (19) in front of the Columbia Broadcasting Co. studio. A benefit entertainment show will be held after the demonstration at the Belmont Studio, 121½ S. Vermont. The new hall was selected when the Studio Carpenters canceled rental of their hall because the United is affiliated with the Congress of Industrial Organizations.

Union officials stated Ray Thomas, Columbia distributor for California, Arizona, New Mexico, would be notified today that his establishment would be picketed if he makes any move to distribute stock on hand, regardless of whether it was received before the walkout. They also said pledges of support had been received from several American Federation of Labor studio crafts and independent guilds, including the Moving Picture Painters Local 644, the Screen Publicists Guild and the Screen Office Employes Guild.

Company officials have promised to submit a new contract offer to the strikers Monday (21), but Unionists have branded this as a 'stalling move'. A previous offer of a flat 1.7 cents per hour increase was turned down. The union is asking the minimum be increased from 55 cents per hour to 75, with 10 cents per hour increase in the higher pay brackets.

THAT GRITTY SILENCE

It was rehearsal time for Screen Guild Theatre in studio C at KNX last Friday. Melvyn Douglas and Joan Blondell were going over their script with Producer Harry Ackerman. They looked up in stony silence as a familiar figure came through the door. It was LifeBO's first lady, Louella O. Parsons.

'Hello, everybody', she greeted one and all cheerily, with a wave of her paw. 'Is Kate Smith here'? (She must've known her old studio C was taken over by Screen Guild). She was told quite properly by Ackerman that Miss Smith could be found in another studio down the hall, that what she was now observing was Screen Guild Theatre in rehearsal.

'Oh, that free show', she sputtered and got out of there, but fast.

The gritty silence that followed was so thunderous one could hear an option, four weeks off, drop.

Hollywood Inside

PROFESSIONAL actors here, seeking an opportunity to entertain at the various Army and Navy training camps, are doing a burnup for alleged buckpassing, and the apparent designation of the National Theatre Conference, of Western Reserve University, as clearing house for this type of performance. Charlotte Lillard of Los Angeles made application for bookings for her act in the recently setup soldier camps, only to have her application referred to Paul Green, president of the executive committee of NTC, who advises that plans for a recreational and entertainment program for the soldiers are going ahead as rapidly as possible. 'But since the war department', Green states, 'has ruled that entertainment in the different camps is a matter entirely under the control of the different commandments, I'm afraid there is little we can do to help you.' Green suggests that Miss Lillard get in touch with the commandant in her region as 'it might be you have something to offer which would fit in with his plans.' What is particularly objectionable to the local professionals is that the camp entertainment setup, they insist, is heading for a duplication of the defunct Federal Theatre Project, with its amateurs having the high hand and their inexperience leading the professionals by the nose. Included as a member of the executive committee of the NTC is Gilmor Brown of the Pasadena Playhouse, and numerous university execs and small-theatre heads.

YOUNG stock players at Paramount will be given minor roles in the Lux airshow by C. B. DeMille as part of their training for bigger parts to come. DeMille is of the opinion that radio work offers a technique valuable in film acting. Inculcated with the thought that once before the mike there can be only one 'take', young players will be more thoughtful in handling their lines while the cameras turn and imbue others with that knowledge, thereby reducing shooting time on pictures. First of the group to be given radio training are Eleanor Stewart and Suzanne Kaaren, appearing in support of Bette Davis and Herbert Marshall on tonight's Lux airing of 'The Letter.'

SAN FRANCISCO business leaders, 500 strong, representing Downtown Assn. gave the Bay City radio industry a reverberating salute at a luncheon, marking the first time the group took official cognizance of the kilocycle crowd. Sparking the get-together was NBC's Al Nelson, who got a rousing civic sendoff for the network's new million-dollar studio soon to rise. Cavalcade of radio from its crystal set infancy was staged for the assemblage and broadcast over KGO. Radio execs in attendance included John Brunton, Phil Lasky, S. H. Patterson, William Pabst, Haan Tyler, Harold Meyer, Ralph Brunton and A. T. Harris.

Halpern's cameraman is Sergt. John Rogers, who was trained by March of Time. Halpern, who was also in the 22nd Battalion was transferred east for the express purpose of making Marine motion pictures.

Quiz Kids Take Hollywood With Bunch of Lockets

such squeals of uncoached delight as staid radio crowds haven't heard in some time. The Kids were still twisting the watches admiringly as they boarded the train for home.

Blase Hollywood shared another mutual thrill when Mary Livingstone gave her party Saturday afternoon for the wise youngsters and as many children of film and radio families as could come to romp with the Quizzers. There was a huge cake, made like a map, with candy antennae and other delectables arranged like radio gadgets. Little Joanie Benny, Jack and Mary's daughter, was hostess.

And don't think the Kids didn't have to do their stuff, even between mouthfuls of ice cream and cake. The young Hollywoodian's didn't believe the Kids from Chicago were so much better than the local paragons. Carolyn Lee, Paramount's prodigy, looking very profound, submitted a terrific mathematical question. It took the Quizzers all of 20 minutes to get the answer. 'Is that right?' they asked the starlet. 'How should I know?' she parried, 'I'm no Quiz Kid.' Well, the Kids from Chicago knew the answer for that kidding, too. They simply laughed.

A breath of Spring pervades the picture lot.
The flowers bloom, the noonday sun is hot,
And sturdy actors labor in the glade
On football films for early Autumn trade.

Film Review

In Old Cheyenne

(Western with Songs)

Republic production. Stars Roy Rogers, George Hayes. Features Joan Woodbury, J. Farrell MacDonald, William Haade, George Rosener, Sally Payne. Supporting players: Hal Taliaferro, Jack Kirk, Chuck Baldra, Slim Harkey, Spade Cooley. Producer-director, Joseph Kane. Original screen play, Olive Cooper. Photography, William Nobles. Film editor, Les Orlebeck. Reviewed at the Hitching Post, April 18. Running time: 59 mins.

Roy Rogers and his bearded sidekick, George Hayes, again prove their mettle as ride 'em and shoot 'em up western heroes in 'In Old Cheyenne', a tale of the early days when cattlemen warred on the farmer-settlers. Rogers croons three tunes pleasingly and slings his fists and guns handily to thoroughly satisfy the Saturday juvenile trade. Hayes as the slick old leader of the settlers capably takes care of his assignment.

Rogers, a New York reporter (born in Wyoming), is sent west to do feature stories on that country's growth. He runs afoul of a bunch of terrorists, apparently led by William Haade, who acts for a higher-up. And he meets a charming dancer, Joan Woodbury, returning to the frontier town to join her father, J. Farrell MacDonald, the town's editor and dupe of the real criminal who is the leading citizen, George Rosener.

Latter's gang is committing raids and blaming the settlers. Rogers stumbles on the truth, frames a cleanup and wins Miss Woodbury's hand, all to the tune of roaring guns and strumming guitars.

Miss Woodbury, with an assumed accent, makes the femme spot count in filling a part that usually has hard going in westerns. Sally Payne gets in a few comedy licks as the rough-and-ready daughter of Hayes. William Haade manages a breezy performance as the chief henchman of George Rosener. MacDonald is good as the editor and the balance of the cast lend the proper support.

Joseph Kane, producer-director, accounts for the brisk pace and nicely spotted tunes. Olive Cooper's original screenplay is parred above the legel of a few recent Rogers entries and William Nobles' camera captures the necessary scenic backgrounds.

Only Two Receive Their Fairbanks Estate Bequests

New York, April 20.—Only two of the beneficiaries named in the will of Douglas Fairbanks, Sr., including neither his widow, the former Lady Sylvia Ashley, nor his son, Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., have received their bequests in the more than $1,500,000 estate. This was revealed in an accounting of the estate filed here, together with a petition for transfer of eastern assets to California. Trust funds totaling $1,407,000 were held in New York and Pittsburgh banks from 1926 until the time of Fairbanks' death. These sums, according to the legal papers, were the only ones which are liquid and covered only his eastern assets.

Disclosed as having received their share of the Fairbanks estate are the Motion Picture Relief Fund and Charles L. Lewis, the actor's physical trainer and personal friend, each bequeathed $10,000.

Other legatees, including the widow and Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., the actor's brother, Robert Fairbanks, and a half-brother, Norris Wilcox, now office manager of United Artists in New York, are expected to get their devisements this fall. Next steps in disposition of the estate are contingent upon New York court's approval of transfer of the cash assets to the Coast and the request of the trustee, the Guaranty Trust Company, that it be allowed to renounce its trust in favor of the Bank of America in California.

Principal among number of English creditors listed in the accounting is Hugh Richard Arthur, Duke of Westminster, from whom Fairbanks leased a Park Lane house, London, until 1999. Mortgage was given him on this property by Hugh Selwyn Walford and Geoffrey Hugh Walford for 2,700 pounds. Other creditors are servants.

Robert Fairbanks and Norris Wilcox both are reported as having assigned portions of their legacies to the Guaranty Trust for advances, the former having obtained $16,000 in this manner, Wilcox $2,000.

Inheritance taxes paid on the estate in California amounted to $131,069.32.

'Ice-Capades' Tops For Pine-Board Extravagas

In many respects, 'Ice-Capades of 1941' tops any of the frapped extravaganzas that have been around since the frost was on the pine boards at Pan-Pacific. It has speed, novelty, comedy, flash and precision, plus a troupe of performers who must be rated with the ultras of the refrigerated set. Booked in for three weeks, the auditorium's 4,800 seats shouldn't go begging for tenants. After the run is over, Republic takes over to make a full length feature with the gay blades.

Partitioned off into 24 acts, the three-hour chilled thriller touches ever facet of the rink art. Revue even has its own music, topped by the lilting 'Somewhere'. Belita, a slender slip of femininity, is top billed, but hard pressed for the payee plaudits by such stellar performers as Serge Flash, Lois Dworshak (The Rhythm Girl), 'Red' McCarthy, Eric Waite, Phil and Megan Taylor, McGowan and Mack, Joe Jackson, Jr., Vera Hruba, Jackson and Lynam and Al Surette. They're all masters of the runners, but more important, showmanly in their performance.

Comedy is abundant, and apparently to the crowd's liking. In this section there's Joe Jackson, Jr., doing the same tramp-with-a-bicycle act that endeared his father to vaude patrons of another generation. His bit, in pantomime, was a show-stopper and a cameo of mimicry. There are few better trick comedy skaters around than Waite nor speedier than McCarthy, a flash in bronze.

As in previous engagements, Lois Dworshak is a favorite with the mob. Her routine with the jitterbugs and a jive shake left the general admish gang begging. The other gals are first rate skimmers and highly proficient at whirling and leg-in-the-air pirouettes. Distaffers confine their gliding to graceful and rhythmic swaying while the males perform the more spectacular feats.

Flash production numbers by Russell Markert's precision chorus of 20 Ice-Capets and 15 'gentlemen of the ensemble' are colorful and eye-filling. Striking are the two chorus drills done in phosphorescence. Line is well trained, works in flawless unison and is richly costumed. Markert directed and Jerry Mayhall batons the music. George Byron is vocalist and announces the turns.

Discontinued

VARIETY is discontinuing its Radio Directory, thereby eliminating the edition for this year. There have been four annual issues. No secret as to the reason—just too much red. The mass of information compiled in Directory files will, of course, be retained and departments deemed of value will appear in the weekly edition of VARIETY from time to time. Possible, though highly improbable, is that the Radio Directory may be revived at some future date.

GEORGE TOPPER, Fox-West Coast treasurer, believes in efficiency, even if it involves a traffic ticket for him. Topper was coming in from his Encino home late last week when he was stopped by a prowl car and charged with running past a red light and doing 50 miles in a 25 mile zone. After the traffic cop had painstakingly written out the citation he inadvertently put the book and summons back in his pocket and started away. Topper waited for three or four minutes, finally blew his horn to attract the cop's attention. When the latter asked in a gruff voice, 'Well, what do you want now'? the F-WC coin guardian meekly asked if it was not customary to give a ticket to an alleged traffic law violator, whereupon the officer, all apologies, handed him the summons. . . . Deanna Durbin, Paul On Honeymoon After Friday Wedding

Deanna Durbin and Vaughn Paul today were on a month's honeymoon after a wedding ceremony Friday night at the Wilshire Methodist Episcopal church and a reception at the Beverly Wilshire hotel.

Although this was a great 'state wedding', on a par with that of Rod LaRocque and Vilma Banky several years ago and, more recently, with that of Jeanette MacDonald and Gene Raymond, it was carried out with simplicity and good taste. There were no lights, no loudspeakers.

There were no celebrities among the guests save those with whom either the bride or bridegroom had worked. Instead the pews were packed (850 guests) with friends of the families, with grips, electricians, wardrobe girls, artists, flacks, bit players and other Universal studio attaches.

Actress planned the entire ceremony. Some 5,000 fans lined Wilshire boulevard. No photographs were taken inside the church as the ceremony was performed by Dr. Willsie Martin. Shots were made when the bridal couple emerged from the church and, later, at the reception.

Best man was Elwood Bredell, Paul's half-brother, who is employed at Universal. Mrs. Clarence Heckman, sister of the actress, was matron of honor. Bridesmaids included Gene Read, Helen Parrish, Anne Gwynne, Anne Shirley, Mrs. Marvin Bradley and Mrs. Thomas King. Ushers were John Rogers, Thomas King, Reed Gattman, Robert Ross, Claude Fisher, Howard Christie and Joseph McDonough.

James Durbin, her father, took the actress down the aisle for the double-ring ceremony. There was a full male choir and solos were sung before the wedding by Mary Tock and Glenn Bard.

First Exhibitor Arbitration Complaints Filed with AAA By Geo. Bromley, O. W. Lewis

up by leading distributors, and the defendants in each instance are major distributing organizations.

Bromley-Bounce complaint, on behalf of their Campus theatre, was filed by Attorney Ezra E. Stern, and names as defendants Paramount Pictures, Inc.; Paramount Film Distributing Corp., Loew's, Inc.; RKO-Radio Pictures, Inc.; Vitagraph, Inc., and 20th-Fox Film Corp.

Complaint is against what Bromley and Bounce charge is unreasonable clearance and availability of pictures, whereby they are prevented from increasing the Campus admission from 15c to 20c, due to their being forced to play films following the Sunset, Clinton and Hunley's theatres. Contention is that Campus, by virtue of clearance set up by distributors, is forced to accept 'unreasonable' clearance, in violation of consent decree, and that house is compelled to follow other theatres on availability of films.

Principal complaint is leveled against the Sunset, a 540-seat 15c house, at 1508 N. Western avenue (cor. of Sunset), operated by E. D. Patterson. Other theatres complained against are the Clinton, at 526 N. Western avenue, a 20c house, and Hunley's, a 750-seater at 5115 Hollywood blvd., operated by Bob Whitson at 25c.

It is contended by the complainants that while the Sunset is theoretically in the same zone as the Campus, the Sunset in a strict sense, is not a competitive house.

Contention is made that the unfairness of clearance and availability of product on the part of the defendants is in direct violation of Sec. 8 of the consent decree entered into by the government with the bulk of the major companies.

Bromley and Bounce ask for an award compelling the distributors to eliminate the 'unfairness of clearance' in order that the Campus can raise its admission to 20c and obtain film from the various defendants in accordance with the seating capacity and investment of their Campus theatre. Further, that 'the said theatres are not competitive even though in the same zone', because of natural barriers.

Lewis' complaint, filed shortly after that of Bromley and Bounce, through Attorney Rufus Bailey, is directed at Paramount, Warners, Vitagraph, 20th-Fox, Loew's and Metro. It asks a general reclassification of clearance in San Gabriel, Alhambra and surrounding territory. Specifically it requests that pictures be licensed for Alhambra seven days after Pasadena first run closing, and that all pictures be available to theatres in San Gabriel and Monterey Park 28 days after Pasadena first run closing at 25c admission.

Further, that pictures be made available to the Rosemead, Garvey and Temple theatres seven days after San Gabriel first run closing at 25c, and 21 days after first run closing at 20c in San Gabriel.

Theatres involved the the Mission Playhouse, San Gabriel; El Rey, Alhambra, Granada and Garfield, Alhambra; Monterey, Monterey Park; Rosemead, at Rosemead; Garvey, Wilmar; Temple, Temple City, and the Edwards Theatrical circuit of Alhambra.

Both complaints will be set for arbitration within the next 30 days. Los Angeles offices of the AAA were opened by Elliott on Feb. 1, last, and more than two and a half months elapsed before first exhibitor complaints were filed.

FILM COMPANIES MAP COURT CAMPAIGN

Minneapolis, April 21. — Northwest Allied's anti-consent decree bill, having previously received the lower house's approval, virtually became law today with passage by the Minnesota state senate, 60 to 8. It now needs only the governor's signature which is certain to be forthcoming.

Film companies opposing the measure will fight its constitutionality in the courts and will seek a restraining order. Some distributors will refuse to service Minnesota accounts.

The law contravenes the consent decree's groups-of-five selling plan, requiring companies to offer for sale entire season's product, same as at present, and to grant minimum of 20% cancellation and refrain from forced selling of any films.

THE BEAUTIFUL PEOPLE

New York, April 21.—William Saroyan came forward as a producer of his latest play, 'The Beautiful People', at the Lyceum theatre tonight. He said several days ago that he had spent all his money on the play. It isn't costly, but chances of getting the investment back seems a long shot.

'People' is similar to author's 'My Heart In Highlands', which won critical acclaim here, but no coin. That was a short play and this one is slightly longer, though plenty wordy. No doubt first-nighters were

Hollywood Inside

NEWSPAPER editors and wire service heads in the east have been summoned to a meeting in New York today by Department of Justice to hear from James Boyd of the Solicitor's General's office the real purpose of Columbia's 'The Free Company' air series. Charles Vanda, producer here of several of the 'Free Company' programs, said yesterday that the series ends with the broadcast of May 4, with one less program than originally planned. One in which George M. Cohan was to appear was cancelled due to network ban on music identified with Cohan on account of the Ascap controversy. Sunday's broadcast features Paul Muni in Maxwell Anderson's 'Miracle of the Danube.' Finale the following Sabbath will be an unfinished story by the late Sherwood Anderson. Both will be done from here with Vanda producing.

WHILE heretofore reported Hearstian attack on RKO and Orson Welles' 'Citizen Kane' has been largely in the talk stage, company now is understood to have concrete evidence that ban on things RKO'ian and Wellesian is in full force. Having appropriated a large sum for newspaper advertising on the picture in advance of its three openings between now and May 9, RKO approached various Hearst papers, along with others, with juicy advertising contracts. Advertising was refused by sheets in the Hearst string. Campaign allegedly will begin its initial blast when film opens New York, Chicago and Los Angeles first special runs.

DEMANDS for a senority rating for Class B extras on the Central Casting rolls were presented to Fred Beetson yesterday by J. Edward Dahlen, who has been protest-picketing Central's offices for the past four weeks. Dahlen's demands also asked for establishment of a Class B representative at Central to insure following out of such a senority rating if granted by the Producers. Rating would give first preference to extra of 10 years or more standing, with ranks graduating down to one year or less. He also seeks banning of giving character extra calls to those who usually do dress extra work.

Film Previews

(Comedy Melodrama)

Fine acting by Wallace Ford in a newspaper story that has a fresh slant and plenty of action ought to give 'Roar of the Press' a good chance at first run bookings and, most certainly, a warm reception by fans in the secondary spots. Scott R. Dunlap, who produced, and Phil Rosen, who directed, rate cheers for their effective work.

Ford, a star newspaper reporter, marries a country girl, Jean Parker, and brings her back to New York for the honeymoon. Before they can share any nuptial bliss Ford accidentally stumbles across a murder and Jed Prouty, his managing editor, puts him to work on the news story. Ford, tracking down clues, finds another dead man. Both were connected with a Guard America committee. Ford scoops the town on the yarn, but his honeymoon is delayed when the cops get him.

Ford's inside information worries Robert Frazer and John Holland, subversive agents who caused both deaths. They hire Matty Fain, a gunman, to take care of Ford. Fain goes to Paul Fix, a numbers racketeer, for help. Fix, who sees that a sabotage of defense industries is at the bottom of the plot, tips off Ford. When the gangsters kidnap the reporter and later, to make him talk, also snatch his wife, Fix and his lieutenant, Eddie Foster, come to the rescue. Miss Parker, while captive, pretends to faint, goes to a window for air and drops out a note, written in lipstick, that brings the cops to the scene.

Story is liberally larded with laughs. Newspaper background is well handled, made to look authentic every foot of the way. Ford carries the heaviest acting load and fits extremely well into the role of a reporter torn between his bride and keeping after a big story. Prouty is admirable as a tough managing editor. Miss Parker, with less footage than Ford, does a splendid job in the femme lead as the frustrated but loyal bride. Fix is excellent as the patriotic racketeer. Harlan Tucker, Frazer, Holland, Foster, Fain, Betty Compson, Dorothy Lee, Evalyn Knapp, Donald Kerr, Willie Costello, Maxine Leslie, Wilbur Mack and Bob Pittard are well cast in supporting roles.

Al Block's original and Albert Duffy's screenplay avoids stupidities usually connected with newspaper stories and the plot is never awkward. Edward Kay's music is excellent.

The Devil Commands

(Melodrama)

Columbia production and release. Stars Boris Karloff. Features Richard Fiske and Amanda Duff. Cast: Anne Revere, Ralph Penney, Dorothy Adams, Walter Baldwin, Kenneth MacDonald, Shirley Warde. Director, Edward Dmytryk. Screenplay, Robert D. Andrews, Milton Gunzburg. Story, William Sloane. Photography, Allen G. Siegler. Art director, Lionel Banks. Musical director, M. W. Stoloff. Sound, Phil Faulkner. Previewed April 21. Running time: 66 mins.

'The Devil Commands' is not for the kiddies. For almost an hour a mood of expectancy, of something terrifying and cosmically important that is about to happen, is created by the sustained suspense of this Boris Karloff gooseflesher. Of its kind, the picture qualifies as adequate entertainment.

Story is the usual one of a mad scientist who thinks he has discovered means to communicate with the dead. He becomes non compos when his wife dies in an auto crash, hooks up with Anne Revere, a medium whose interest in him is intrigued by the idea that he will be all-powerful if he can contact spirits. He leaves his young daughter, Amanda Duff, sets up housekeeping on a lonely stretch of New England coast, installs electrical gadgets of every description and begins to experiment. Corpses are needed for the ghoulish business. So Karloff and the medium dig 'em up from their graves. After the cadavers are rigged up to Karloff's maze of instruments they become people with light coming out of them. His village neighbors begin talking about the weird house. A maid, asked by the sheriff to peek into the lab, is electrocuted. Authorities think she has fallen over a cliff. Nevertheless, the sheriff decides that fun's fun and all that, but, and sends for Karloff's daughter, who arrives with Richard Fiske. Miss Revere is killed in one more experiment before the pair arrives. Karloff is helped by Ralph Penney, giant janitor who has been made into a human robot by the electrical gadgets. In one last experiment with his daughter in the hot seat, the scientist's machinery explodes and kills him shortly before a lynch mob is about to batter down the lab door.

In the telling 'The Devil Commands' copies 'Rebecca', opening and closing on the great storm-lashed house of mystery above the sea cliffs. Here Miss Duff's eloquence is compelling, as her voice describes the house, her father and his insanity. Karloff fans will find nothing wrong with his work as the mad doctor. Miss Revere is perfectly cast as the brooding, plotting spiritualist. Fiske is convincing as the younger scientist. Penney is good as the robot and Dorothy Adams turns in a grand performance as the frightened, curious maid. Walter Baldwin, Kenneth MacDonald and Shirley Warde give capable support.

Acting, direction by Edward Dmytryk, art direction by Lionel Banks, photography by Allen G. Siegler, musical direction by M. W. Stoloff and weird noises created by Phil Faulkner almost make up for the weak story, which is about as convincing as a souvenir half dollar.

Cartoonists Strike At Pal Unless Scale Okehed

Membership of Screen Cartoonists Guild last night empowered Guild board to call a strike at the George Pal studio unless agreement was reached on a new wage scale. Members voted 100% on the strike move and a committee headed by George Bodle, William Littlejohn, Fred Horvath, Robert Larsen and Laurie Hollings, board representatives from the Pal unit, will frame wage demands for presentation to the Paramount producer.

SCG strike vote was taken after membership was given Pal's counter wage scale proposal, which would call for a rate of about half Guild's demands and considerably less than paid at other cartoon plants signatory to Guild agreements.

U. S. Aide Presents Compromise Plan In Strike

is understood to have stated that compromises put forth by Columbia indicated its offer could not be considered as a settlement of the labor dispute and that a fair and reasonable offer would be raises of five, seven and a half, and 10 cents per hour to those now employed, with a 65c minimum. Union is asking for 75c minimum, or an increase of 20c over the present 55c per hour.

Fitzgerald's proposal also provided for the granting of six paid holidays per year and that agreement run until June 30, this year, at which time either side could reopen negotiations. At present no paid holidays are granted Columbia Recording employes. Fitzgerald asked that both sides take the proposal back with favorable recommendations.

Yesterday's meeting had Homer I. Mitchell stepping in as attorney for Columbia Recording and offering for consideration the written contract proposed by the company when negotiations were broken off last Wednesday. Pact would scrap seniority ratings that had accrued during the past two years, and departmental seniority, covering transfer of an employe from one department to another, would be lost. Seniority ratings would be up to company executives who would decide on all promotions. Pact's offer of a 65c hourly rate and an increase of one and seven-tenths of a cent per hour had previously been rejected by the union.

William B. Elconin, union international field organizer, blasted Mitchell's offer, saying, 'This is complete proof to us that the company has no other desire than to smash organized labor in its plant. They are ignoring all legal proceedings for the settlement of a labor dispute.'

The union's negotiating committee, headed by Robert Kennedy, indicated that it would recommend Fitzgerald's compromise proposal to the membership. Mitchell also will make a favorable recommendation on the Fitzgerald proposal to Columbia Recording. However, Paul Crowley, general manager of the recording plant, indicated he would refuse to concur with Mitchell.

In meantime distribution of records made in the company's Bridgeport plant continued to hit snags. Charles Lindholm, general manager of the Ray Thomas Distributors, Inc., handling Columbia discs, is understood to have made an agreement yesterday with the union that his company would not attempt to receive shipments from Bridgeport, or attempt to distribute any recent shipment, to dealers in this territory, if picketing of the Thomas company was stopped.

Serial radio programs are likely to be running off schedule in the near future, due to lack of processing facilities for new episodes, unless the strike reaches a settlement soon.

Radio execs from New York and Chicago have been bidden to the affair and it is estimated that around 200 will make the trip here. In the New York NBC delegation will be Trammell, Sidney Strotz, v.p. in charge of programs; Bertha Brainard, head of program and talent sales division, and John Royal, headman of television and short wave. Trammell arrives here May 6 and following the dinner flies to St. Louis for annual convention of National Association of Broadcasters.

ignation as regional director for the National Labor Relations Board in Los Angeles had been accepted.

Spreckels falls heir to the many problems tied up with the organization drive under way at the Disney studio and will attempt to bring about agreements for both sides that will forestall strike talk that has been in the air because of what the unions assert was a failure on the part of Disney representatives to negotiate problems.

Spreckels' deal with Disney also permits him to handle other clients in a labor relations consultant capacity and he will open offices shortly downtown to service other fields than the motion picture industry. Understood that Spreckels has had an offer to handle the labor relations of a group of 25 aircraft parts manufacturers as well as other companies and individuals.

It is expected that William Walsh, NLRB regional attorney here, will assume Spreckels' duty in the local office temporarily until Washington names a successor to the vacated post.

Wallace Milam 100G Trial Skeded Today Against WB

Damages amounting to $100,000 are sought by Wallace Milam from Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc., in suit scheduled for trial in Superior court here starting today. Action asks an accounting, as well as damages, plaintiff contending that following submission of a manuscript entitled 'For Their's Is the Kingdom', a story dealing with Boys' Day or Boys' Week, Warners produced a motion picture titled 'Angels Wash Their Faces', and that the film appropriates plaintiff's literary material.

Defense of producing company is that its picture was based upon an original story entitled 'Battle of City Hall', by Jonathan Finn, and secondly, that even though there was limited access to plaintiff's story material, nothing was taken from plaintiff's story.

Case probably will require five or six days to try, with John P. McGinley, of the legal firm of Freston and Files, appearing for the defendants.

Boy never had schooling, but thinks he is a poet, also that he writes books containing one word. Girl finally comes upon a youth whom she likes and then all people are beautiful. Understandable is the coming of romance to the girl because she looks after little rodents and believes they bring her flowers. Author indicates faith in mice is rather a sort of religion and understanding.

New to Broadway is Eugene Loring playing the son. Also speaking her first part is comely Betsy Blair out of the 'Panama Hattie' chorus. Known are Curtis Cooksey as the father and Edward Nannary as the priest.

WHEN I DANCE, MOM, I SIMPLY CAN'T SKATE

There is an asserted shortage of chorus boys and chorines in Hollywood. For second time in a week on the same production, 20th-Fox has hit a snag in trying to get required number of routine skaters for 'Sun Valley' ensembles. Most of the proficient skaters listed also are chorus dancers, and these currently are at a premium because of production on number of elaborate musical pictures.

20th casters expected scores of skaters to show in answer to calls, from which 24 boys and equal number of girls finally would be culled. Instead only nine boys and eight girls showed as the only regulars available out of the 180 registered as skaters at Central Casting. A few days previous, Director H. Bruce Humberstone drew a blank when he put through a call for six chorines to do a straight dance number with Sonja Henie. Shooting of the number had to be postponed until some of the dancers working elsewhere are at liberty.

Plan is being worked out to ease asserted shortage of skaters by scouting various local rinks. Screen Actors Guild has issued waivers for several men skaters who haven't cards, and same may be done for femmes as well. One hundred and ninety dancer-skaters are working at Metro and Warners this week.

Obituary

HAROLD B. FRANKLIN

Harold B. Franklin, 52, died yesterday morning of a heart attack in Mexico City. Former theatre operator and film producer had been in Mexico about a month, accompanied by his son, Elbert, and was dressing preparatory to catching a plane to fly him to Los Angeles when stricken. Besides the son, the widow, Anna, and two brothers, Charles, a New York attorney, and John J. Franklin, operator of an independent film theatre in San Francisco, survive.

Franklin, who was widely known as a chain theatre operator, was born in New York city, and operated theatres since 1914. It was he who organized Paramount Theatres into a nationwide chain, becoming vice-president of Paramount-Publix in the new setup.

About 1927 he was made president of West Coast Theatres, spot he held until about 1930. His next theatre operation job was with the Hughes-Franklin circuit, which he formed with Howard Hughes.

Leaving the Hughes-Franklin company, he joined RKO-Radio Pictures in an advisory capacity and soon thereafter was named president of the RKO and Keith-Albee-Orpheum circuit. In 1933 he former Frankwyn Productions, with Arch Selwyn, to produce stage plays. Later he became prexy of Standard Theatres. In 1935 he joined Columbia Pictures' production staff, and in 1938 he was manager of the 'Motion Pictures Greatest Year' campaign.

Franklin was the author of several books on motion picture theatre management, and during 1939 and 1940 produced two films, one, 'The Gambler', in New York, and the second and last, 'The Villain Still Pursued Her', for RKO release last year. Adolph Ramish, theatre tycoon, is understood to have financed 'Villain'.

Franklin went to Mexico City about a month ago, accompanied by his son, and Theodore (Ted) Gildred, former San Diego theatre builder, who in appreciation of favors extended to him by the former West Coast prexy at the time the circuit's Fox theatre there was erected, had completed plans to finance Franklin in a Mexican theatre circuit.

First of these theatres, a 1,000-seater, was to be located in Gildred's Mexico City subdivision, Tepeyac Insuguentes, with others in and about the Mexican capital contemplated. Plans for the initial theatre have been virtually completed by Architect S. Charles Lee of this city, who met Franklin in Mexico about three weeks ago.

Owing to the possibility that the high altitude of Mexico City might be detrimental to Franklin's health, he made the trip to Acaculpo by boat. Lee met him there two weeks ago, driving from Mexico City. A couple of days later they drove to Cuernavaca, Mex., where Franklin was assured by a physician that his heart was okay, but that he had a bad liver condition. Satisfied as to his physical condition, Franklin made the trip to Mexico City, accompanied by Lee, who then returned here to start work on the first of the new theatre plans.

Due to international complications, it was virtually decided late yesterday to have Franklin's remains cremated in Mexico City. A telegram was received late yesterday afternoon advising that the son, Elbert, would reach Los Angeles some time today.

The Franklin home here is at 616 North Maple drive, Beverly Hills. Purpose of the projected trip to Los Angeles by Franklin was to close up his home here and move his family to Mexico, where it was planned to start work on the nucleus of his new theatre chain at once.

Poole, executive secretary, comprise the program committee. PCCITO will act as hosts for the annual convention of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, to be held here simultaneously.

Bulletin giving details of the 21st annual convention of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, to be held here at the Ambassador hotel June 9-12, has just been issued by Ed Kuykendall, prexy. He states that gathering, at which the Pacific Coast Conference of Independent Theatre Owners will function as hosts, will be 'an all industry congress and national goodwill convention of showmen.'

New York, April 22.—RKO's earnings for 1940, first year in which the company has operated almost entirely out of 77-B, are expected to be less than $500,000, although the foreign figures are still coming in. This Wall Street estimate allows for uniformly good income shown in recent reports by RKO and Keith-Albee-Orpheum, two theatre subsidiaries, and improved earnings by RKO-Radio Pictures, the picture company producer-distributor subsidiary of the parent organization.

Hollywood Inside

REPORT that Sol Lesser would head RKO-Radio studios got around town 10 days after Murray Silverstone, United Artists head, had told George Schaefer that it was no soap. Silverstone was called upon by Schaefer for release of Lesser from the latter's personal exclusive contract to produce from one to three pictures a year for UA until Sept. 30, 1945, and also to deliver one production produced and directed by Ernst Lubitsch. The UA chief informed Schaefer that Lesser has a contract that must be fulfilled and its provisions did not permit Lesser to do any other production chore or picture operations outside of UA. Lesser was recommended to Schaefer for the RKO job by Ed Weisl, personal attorney for Floyd Odlum, with Schaefer talking a five-year deal to Lesser until it hit a snag with Silverstone refusing to grant the producer his release. Lesser starts his next UA picture 'Strange Victory' shortly. Lubitsch is expected to begin his final picture on the UA schedule early this summer.

WITHOUT singling out any pictures for attack, Al Williams, Scripps-Howard aviation columnist, recently took a crack at the picture industry for not being objective in the treatment of flying yarns. 'Writing the dramatics of the air as dramatics in Hollywood's job', Williams said, 'and I think it is not being very well done. Hollywood insists on writing drama into aviation, instead of realizing that aviation of this period IS dramatic and devoting talent to interpreting that drama. Hollywood kills or crashes every hero. It doesn't hesitate a second to crack up the hero's plane, though it carefully avoided killing Tom Mix's horse, thus interpreting the true drama of Tom's horsemanship. Crash pictures and stories are for the oldsters—those who don't understand aviation and never will.'

IF ENGINEERING complications can be ironed out either Gargantua or Toto, two gorilla attractions of the Ringling Brothers-Barnum & Bailey circus, will appear in David Hempstead's RKO production, 'Journey Into Fear.' Talk has been going on between Hempstead and John Ringling North, circus head, on possibility of one of the gorillas appearing in a sequence where such an animal gets loose on a boat while being transported from the African jungles to a zoo. Conclusion of a deal hinges entirely on whether studio will be able to cope with the problem of providing the proper air-conditioning for Gargantua or his mate during stay on the Coast. Another problem is the Gargantua disposition, which bars direct handling by keepers.

HOW to separate the Loew's State and Grauman's Chinese newspaper adver-tising for the current week and still give each theatre equal play, was finally solved by George Watters of the Fox-West Coast first run publicity department. Both houses have long been identified as day-daters, but for current week Carmen Miranda and her ork is playing a solo engagement at the Chinese. 'Topper Returns' will be on the screen of each theatre, with 'The Penalty' added for the downtown house. By simply using dividing rules between the two ads each house is individualized for the week and the possibility of any confusion is removed.

New contract will allow Miss Rogers to take advantage of a number of picture deals at other studios each year and her representatives, Hayward-Deverich, Inc. are now handling negotiations from two lots on commitments for 1941-42 season.

Retakes

By GEORGE E. PHAIR

Education is swell. Now you learn something you didn't even mention to your best friends when you were a young squirt. You are a subject of sexappealometry. You are measured scientifically by a unit of manpower, figured out by Dr. Joseph W. Catton, up San Francisco way, to determine your reactions to feminine heat on the screen. You can learn, with the air of a scientific gadget on your wrist, how you react to Marlene Dietrich, Lana Turner, Ann Sheridan, Betty Grable and the rest of the high-blood-pressure gals.

Twenty selected students, according to the good Doctor, wore glorified wrist watches, known as psychometers, to register their heart beats as they glanced at pictures. Highest batting averages were registered by gals working on the Warners lot, which has nothing to do with a scientific treatise.

Higher education is higher than it was in your old man's student days when he considered himself lucky to save up enough dough for a couple of steins at the Blue Goose on a Saturday night. Now the scholar is asked about his reactions in the following scientific situations:

'Think of Miss X. You are picnicking together. You are riding along together in the moonlight. You are holding her in your arms, dancing to seductive music. You are kissing her good night.

'Units of credit should be given for "no reaction", "mild reaction" and "strong reaction".'

And so the educators go on, finding out about things that nobody ever suspected. Some day they will learn why there were livery stables around college towns in the horse-and-buggy days.

Mickey Rooney and Sidney Miller have dashed off another song, 'Of All People, Fancy Meeting You Here.' One of these days the boys will dash off a song that somebody sings.

Republic is delving into the past to revive the thrillers your old man paid 10c-20c-30c to see, 'From Rags to Riches', 'Nellie, the Beautiful Cloak Model', 'The Black Crook' and 'Ten Nights in a Barroom', all in modern versions, whittled to suit conditions in 1941. 'Ten Nights' probably will be changed to 'Ten Afternoons in a Cocktail Bar' and the theme song will be 'Grandma, Dear Grandma, Come Home With Me Now.'

A human little drama of teen-aged girls and their romantic leanings which will be recognized by all parents with such a youngster in their home. 'A Very Young Lady' gives 20th-Fox an opportunity to further advance Jane Withers along her maturing career and jump from the tomboyish stage into the 'growing up' phase. Withers fans and their families will find this to their liking in spite of some talky spots and over-long running time, both of minor consequence.

Hoydenish Miss Withers is packed off to a young lady's finishing school to acquire some drawing room polish. Higher manners are having little effect until she imagines a romance with the school principal, John Sutton. Collecting a multitude of love hints from all sources, the young lady pours out her heart in secret letters, never meant for perusal. When a stern teacher accidentally stumbles on one of the missives an investigation and near scandal results, permitting some genuine dramatic portions. A renunciation scene in which Miss Withers turns her secret love over to one of her favored instructors, Nancy Kelly, and her first kiss, with Richard Clayton, are handled delicately and with humor.

Jane Withers romps off with her assignment, taking care of the humorous phases in her acceptable style and treading the more dramatic sequences with considerable sureness. Top ranking aid is lent by Nancy Kelly and John Sutton, both of whom faultlessly bring to life characters that could easily have been wooden. Janet Beecher the teacher who starts the trouble, Charles Halton, another old-school exponent of learning, Richard Clayton, a juvenile suitor for Miss Withers' hand, June Carlson, a student, and Cecil Kellaway, a kindly professor, are excellent.

Harold Schuster has instilled a naturalness in the players and his direction manages considerable movement to the talkative, but well-plotted script turned in by Ladislas Fodor and Elaine Ryan from a play by Fodor. Robert T. Kane's associate production is first-rate. Camera work by Edward Cronjager; art direction and other technical points are top-notch.

The Wagons Roll At Night

(Melodrama)

Warners production. Features Humphrey Bogart, Sylvia Sidney, Eddie Albert and Joan Leslie. Supporting cast: Sig Rumann, Cliff Clark, Charley Foy, Frank Wilcox, John Ridgely, Clara Blandick, Aldrich Bowker, Garry Owen, Jack Mower, Frank Mayo. Directed by Ray Enright. Associate producer, Harlan Thompson. Screenplay, Fred Niblo, Jr., and Barry Trivers. Suggested by story by Francis Wallace. Photography, Sid Hickox. Art director, Hugh Reticker. Film editor, Frederick Richards. Special effects, Byron Haskin and H. F. Koenekamp. Music, H. Roemheld. Orchestral arrangements, Ray Heindorf. Music director, Leo F. Forbstein. Previewed April 22. Running time: 84 mins.

Avoiding the pitfalls encountered in numerous predecessor films dealing with circus life, 'The Wagons Roll At Night' tells an absorbing, standard melodrama of bigtop and carny folk focused upon the handling of a dangerous lion act. Picture has the smell of the sawdust, but avoids overstress on background and setting in order to concentrate on human interest and the thrills connected with the big scene in the cage with a killer lion. Performances by Humphrey Bogart, Eddie Albert, Sylvia Sidney and Joan Leslie ably carry the intense portions of the tale, with competent support from a dozen skillful players well cast. Direction by Ray Enright exploits the entertain elements thoroughly, combining melodrama, a lot of genuine comedy and romantic warmth with a sure hand, to complement the careful and intelligent production organization by Harlan Thompson.

Drama, scripted by Fred Niblo, Jr., and Barry Trivers, from a story suggestion by Francis Wallace, pivots upon the attitude of Bogart, boss of the circus-carnival, that the general run of folk in his branch of the show world are not good enough to associate with his ingenious, convent-bred sister, Joan Leslie. Because of an accident, Eddie Albert, a grocery clerk who has been made an animal trainer to supplement a drunken lion tamer, is taken to Bogart's farm for recuperation. He meets the young sister. They fall in love. Albert violates Bogart's ultimatum not to see the girl again. Bogart's violent passions of hatred and resentment break out in an attempt to have Albert mauled to death by an insane lion, into whose cage he persuades Albert to go for a quick reputation. Instead, the beast kills the circus boss, who, at the desperate pleas of the sister and of Sylvia Sidney, goes into the cage to save the other man. Sylvia Sidney is a crystal-ball gazer with the show, loved by Bogart in his cynical way.

Albert's easy comedy and his unaffected devotion to the girl, and Joan Leslie's ingenious behavior in the romantic scenes are high lights. Sig Rumann as the drunken lion tamer tops the support. Cliff Clark is good as the circus barker. Charley Foy and Clara Blandick do well with their assignments.

Savagery of the big cats in the animal tent, in connection with human hatred and fights, is well exploited for thrills. These scenes also are exceptionally well photographed by Sid Hickox, augmented by the special effects by Byron Haskin and H. F. Koenekamp.

Spyros Skouras Lauds Americanism At Huge Fete

In a moving speech, Spyros Skouras, head of National Theatres, last night paid his personal tribute for the privilege of American citizenship at the sixth annual Americanism meeting and banquet at the Ambassador hotel. Presiding over the assembly as co-host was Charles Skouras, prexy of Fox West Coast Theatres, and honorary colonel of Allied Post 302, American Legion.

Guests of the evening were 250 ROTC boys from the high schools of Los Angeles and vicinity; state and national officers of the American Legion, Navy and Army men and newspaper representatives, numbering in all over 600 persons.

Taking as his subject, 'What An Adopted Son Thinks of America,' Spyros Skouras eloquently related the ideals of democracy he got as a birthright in Greece and their practical national expression in the United States to which he had come in young manhood. He told of how, after Greece had decided to face the Axis powers, the contribution to Greek war relief in this country had swung 60% from Americans of all origins and 40% from Americans of Greek origin, now totaling some $6,000,000.

The next few days, he stressed, were vital to the Greek cause, and relief workers in this country were redoubling their efforts to sustain Greek morale. For this purpose Skouras said he was holding a meeting here today at 11 o'clock, one on Thursday in New Orleans, another one on Friday in Chicago, one next Monday in Washington, where special pleas would be made to secure several hundred planes to be sent to the fighting Greeks.

Other brief speeches were made. The ROTC band of Los Angeles high school supplied music.

HEARSTIAN 'KANE' BATTLE CONTINUES NATIONWIDE

New York, April 22.—Battle of Hearst papers against Orson Welles continued wholesale last week as RKO readied the preem of 'Citizen Kane' at the Palace, New York, and elsewhere during the month. Among the Hearst moves were attacks stirring up American Legion, Veterans of Foreign Wars and other patriotic groups because of 'The Free Company' broadcast; Hearst dailies refusing to accept 'Kane' ads; harassment of Welles by Hearst photogs at Palm Springs trying to get 'personal' pictures, and persistent inquiries at the draft board as to why Welles hasn't been drafted.

Whatever other effect the Hearst attacks are having, they are definitely stimulating interest in advance sale of tickets for the 'Kane' engagement.

Columbia Recording Strikers Accept Compromise Plan

Columbia Recording Corp. strikers yesterday voted unanimously to accept a compromise settlement recommended by Edward Fitzgerald, U. S. labor conciliator. End of the 10-day walkout, however, hinges on acceptance of the offer by company executives when the two groups go into conference today.

While the proposed settlement has already been okayed by certain company representatives here, union leaders were skeptical that it would be approved by home office executives in Bridgeport. In announcing the workers had approved the tentative deal to end the strike, Robert Kennedy, of the Los Angeles Industrial Council, stated:

'Again the union bends over backwards to settle this dispute. We will be pleasantly surprised, however, if the company meets us half-way by accepting this proposal. This is the last time we intend to consider a compromise proposal.'

Unionists said that Attorney Homer I. Mitchell had agreed to recommend acceptance of the settlement, but that Paul Crowley, local manager, had indicated he would not concur in the recommendation. Today's conference is scheduled for 10 a.m., at which time it was expected that an official reply would have been received from the home office.

The proposed settlement would give the workers a wage minimum of 65 cents per hour, instead of the present 55 cents. The union had been demanding the minimum be tilted to .75 cents per hour. The various wage brackets would be increased five cents, seven and a half, and 10 cents per hour, with the latter going to smaller paid workers.

The contract also would provide for six paid holidays annually, closed shop, full seniority rights, and one week's vacation with pay for workers employed a year or longer.

William Elconin, international representative of the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers, stated last night that Columbia distributors were laying off employes because of inability to restock their records. He said the union also had received 100% response from retail outlets, all of them agreeing not to restock until the strike is settled. Elconin checked out for the north last night to assist in conducting an election for the Congress of Industrial Organizations. During his absence James Dougherty, of the Industrial Council, will be in charge of union negotiations, assisted by a committee headed by Robert Kennedy.

Approximately 85 workers are affected by the strike, the plant having been closed since the walkout was ordered. Clerical employes were called back to their jobs, but refused to cross the union picket lines, blocking what unionists termed a move to reopen the plant.

PAINTERS ISSUE DEMANDS FOR 5-DAY, 30-HOUR WEEK

10% under the studio scale when employed on location, but are demanding a guarantee of 70 hours work, with triple pay for all time worked over 10 hours daily. The union also is asking that the label of the Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators and Paperhangers of America Local 644 be affixed to all completed films before they are screened.

Recommendations for short week and pay scales for men on late shifts asks: 'A 30-hour week for all hourly rate men. A demand for six hours per day, five days per week, Monday through Friday, which shall constitute a regular work week, six within seven consecutive hours between 6 a.m. and 6 p.m. shall be termed a regular work day.

'A demand that all time worked between midnight Friday and 6 a.m. Monday and not in excess of six hours in any one work or regular day shall be paid for at the rate of time and one-half. Time worked between 6 p.m. and midnight shall be paid at the rate of time and one-half. All time worked between midnight and 6 a.m. shall be paid at the rate of double time.'

The proposed demand referring to employment of permanent crews, states: 'A permanent crew shall be maintained on each shift, who shall be guaranteed not less than 250 working days per year. No man shall be discharged or laid off except for just cause, and the same to be submitted to an arbitration board to consist of three members of the Producers' Committee and three members of Local 644. These preferred men to be permitted to accept calls direct, and that all men on this preferred list who have worked two years or longer in the industry shall be given two weeks vacation with pay. This classification also to apply to all key men.'

All extra men required by a studio would be called through the union, and would be paid the regular studio rate for whatever classification used on, plus 10% extra. Men not notified of their dismissal at the end of a shift would be considered as working the next day. When notified of a layoff he would be given a tool pass and an order for his wages to date. No weather permitting calls would be permitted, and no cancellation of calls between shifts.

Tentative wage scales recommended to the negotiating committee would call for a rate of $1.55 per hour for straight painting, $1.77 per hour for color mixers and shop men, $1.77 for paper hangers, and $1.85 per hour for marbilizing, graining, flogging, lining, hand ageing, air gun work, bucket pump or hudson pump, lining brick, decorating, furniture polishing. A $2 rate was recommended for set foremen.

Hollywood Inside

BETTY GRABLE'S impacted wisdom tooth may cause a delay in two pictures at 20th-Fox. Actress had to be taken to Santa Monica hospital for treatment with one scene left unfinished in 'Miami.' She was also due to start work this coming Monday in 'A Yank in the R.A.F.' Tooth is not being yanked at this time, but is being treated to take down the swelling and keep discomfort in abeyance until Miss Grable has finished her current assignments. Bad luck also hit 20th-Fox's 'Manhunt' unit when a steel gum machine accidentally overturned and broke two toes on Director Fritz Lang's foot. Lang had the foot treated last night and may be able to report for work today.

WARNERS is talking a new deal with Frank Capra and Robert Riskin for the production of two more features for the company. Negotiations are expected to come to a head within the next few days, at which time story properties the director-writer partnership has in mind will be announced. Warners is pressuring the proposed deal due to results so far shown by 'Meet John Doe.' Likely that the personal corporation of Capra and Riskin will be dissolved and they will do the new pair of pictures for Warners as a team, instead of as a company, if the deal is closed.

There once was a time when a knockout team, one fat and one slim, and both comic,
Were knocking about in this knockabout world, and their weekly returns were atomic.
But now when a fat-and-slim team hits the pix they are gathering plenty of gravy, Joe Public is hungry for light-headed stuff in the films about Army and Navy.

Ever since Abbott and Costello lightened the burder of the defense program the producers have been looking for another comic double header. Next is Laurel and Hardy. What a happy world it would be if we could laugh off wars, and taxes.

The Flame of New Orleans

(Romantic Drama)

Universal production. Stars Marlene Dietrich. Features Bruce Cabot, Roland Young, Mischa Auer, Andy Devine, Frank Jenks, Eddie Quillan. Supporting cast: Laura Hope Crews, Franklin Pangborn, Theresa Harris, Clarence Muse, Melville Cooper, Anne Revere, Bob Evans, Emily Fitzroy, Virginia Sale, Dorothy Adams, Gitta Alpar, Anthony Marlowe. Director, Rene Clair. Producer, Joe Pasternak. Written by Norman Krasna. Photography, Rudy Mate. Film editor, Frank Gross. Art director, Jack Otterson; associate, Martin Obzina. Assistant director, Phillip P. Karlstein. Costumes, Rene Hubert. Set decorations, R. A. Gausman. Musical director, Charles Previn. Musical score, Frank Skinner. Sound supervisor, Bernard B. Brown; technician, Robert Pritchard. Music, Charles Previn and Sam Lerner. Previewed April 23. Running time: 78 mins.

Highly romantic fluff about a not too nice lady in the early days of New Orleans. 'The Flame of New Orleans' should cut a capable swath through the hearts of the femmes who make up the larger portion of matinee audiences, mainly because of the elegance in which it is dressed and the many delightful moments that appear along its course. The Marlene Dietrich reputation for semi-wicked film love, coupled in romantic play with Bruce Cabot, and the lighter moods injected by Roland Young, are the ballyhoo elements that will aid exhibitors in luring feminine ticket buyers to the box office.

Rene Clair, French director, rates attention in making his Hollywood film bow. At times he seems to hit a slightly studied pace, but there are smoothly finagled passages concealing the flimsy structure around which he had to work, and a Continental flavor to the whole that pay full credit to his craftsmanship and mark him as a welcome addition to the Hollywood directors corps. In the production saddle Joe Pasternak has ordered up an excellent cast and mounted the picture with class ornamentation in all departments.

Miss Dietrich brings all of her lure to the role of a fake countess, newly arrived in New Orleans and on the make for Roland Young, a rich banker who has reached the period of middle-aged chasing. Actress is sumptuously gowned by Rene Hubert in the eye-appealing garb of a century ago; makes her flirtatious moments thrilling and brings tenderness and feeling to her love scenes with Bruce Cabot. The latter's portrayal of a young ship's captain, smitten by the charms of the phoney lady, proves Mr. Cabot should have more opportunities to play virile screen heroes. He puts dash and color into the character. Roland Young, with easy assurance, deftly delights as the dallying banker who proposes honest marriage to the lady with a shady past.

Norman Krasna has slickly gilted his superficial plot basis with inter-

Tumbledown Ranch In Arizona

(Western With Music)

Monogram production and release. Cast: Ray Corrigan, John King, Max Terhune, Sheila Darcy, Marian Kerby, Quen Ramsey, James Craven, John Elliott, Jack Holmes, Steve Clark, Sam Bernard. Produced by George W. Weeks. Directed by S. Roy Luby. Musical director, Frank Sanucci. Film editor, Roy Clair. Associate producer, Anna Bell Ward. Story by Milton Raison. Photography, Robert Cline. Previewed April 23. Running time: 60 mins.

Sixth in the Range Busters series, this is a trivial little western strictly for the juve trade. It attempts in a labored way to ape its film big brothers in unfolding its story backward, using a lot of vague dialog about the 'fourth dimension' which will be over its patrons' heads.

John King, one of the featured trio in the series, is hurt in an Arizona college rodeo, and the biff on the head sends his psychic ego back several generations to a range adventure which happened to his forefathers and the ancestors of his school associates. Once back there via the 'fourth dimension' about which his college prof has told him, the narrative in which he and his pals, Ray Corrigan and Max Terhune, participate, is the familiar tale of real estate crooks, buying land for a railroad, swindling the ranchers and double-crossing each other. Corrigan, King and Terhune, aided by John Elliott as a territorial judge and stimulated by the latter's pretty daughter, Sheila Darcy, save the ranch for a spunky old lady, who has been a mother to the boys, played by Marian Kerby. The boys out-trick the heavies, Quen Ramsey and James Craven, at their own game when they are finally sworn in as deputies by the judge, to legalize their rough retaliation. Story is by Milton Raison.

Playing of the troupe is okay, with the material handed them, as is the direction by S. Roy Luby. Certain amount of mild comedy is gleaned from the script, the indispensable fistic fight is incorporated, the handsome Arab horses of the heroes prance nicely for the good camera of Robert Cline, and there is a modicum of gun play. Neatly eased in are the scenes of bucking broncs at the rodeo. In addition to the standard performances of the featured trio, good roles are turned in by John Elliott as the judge, Ramsey and Craven as the heavies, Jack Holmes as the sheriff, Miss Darcy and Marian Kerby and Steve Clark.

King's good baritone voice is heard in songs provided by Bill Watters and Howard Steiner—'Tumbledown Ranch In Arizona' and 'Wake Up With the Dawn'—and 'All Hail, Arizona', a college number by E. C. Monroe and Dorothy H. Monroe. Frank Sanucci directed the music.

Schine Circuit Wins Move Against U.S. In Trust Suit

Buffalo, April 23.—U. S. District Court Judge John Knight today granted the motion of the Schine Circuit to compel the government to amend its complaint in the anti-trust suit here, and ordered the U. S. to specify what kind of conspiracy it now claims against Schine, in view of its recent dismissal of complaints against the five major distributors originally charged with having been co-conspirators.

Judge Knight also directed the government to advise him within two weeks whether it will proceed against Schine first or against the Nashville, Tennessee, chain in a similar suit pending there.

Play Review

PASS THE NUTS

There have been some sad spectacles palmed off on an unsuspecting public along the little theatre circuit, but few to approximate this so-called comedy, which opened last night at the Las Palmas theatre. At $1.65 it's a shakedown. Whoever figured on that scale and also the ones responsible for the staging, have plenty to answer for. The piece hasn't the slightest excuse for being performed on any stage. Writing is childish and acting is rankly amateurish.

Judging by the few handclaps from a handful of customers at the entrance of Patricia Van Cleve, she must be the star. She has little to do and does it badly. Charles Clark, a Joe E. Brownish character, is the only performer who may profit from the play. With any kind of lines at all and decent direction he might get somewhere. The others miss being actors from here to all the way to there.

Jackie Moran takes credit for the presentation. Writing and direction is by N. J. Francis, who also plays a low comic. Others who play at acting are Alice Campbell, Ross Hawthorne, Ragnar Qvale, Mae McWilliams, Mary Kay Wells, Bill Goodwin (not the radio actor), Bobby Nelson, O. B. Barclay, Harry Elkins, Winston Jones, Jack Lane, Othello Stewart and C. Curtain Mitchell.

If this mess of unfunny trivia finishes out the week then the theatre is beyond or unworthy of redemption.

pany had turned down a compromise settlement suggested by Edward Fitzgerald, U. S. labor conciliator, and charged an effort was being made to break up the union by taking away the employes' seniority and closed shop. Company representatives declared this was erroneous. The said the company had offered the workers wage increases and pay for holidays that would increase the annual payroll 5.34% annually, had requested no change in the closed shop clause, and had merely asked that seniority be departmentalized instead of plant-wide.

Company representatives said their offer had been made even before the strike, had been renewed several times since the walkout, and still stood. Both sides said no new move was anticipated to renew negotiations. The company said it had no interest in breaking the union and was willing to deal with it at any time, but that naturally there was a limit to what the company could offer.

After the negotiations bogged down, Robert Kennedy, chairman of the negotiating committee of the United Electrical Radio Machine Workers, issued the following statement:

'The Columbia Recording Corp. and Columbia Broadcasting Co. have refused every reasonable formula for settling this dispute over a living wage. With a $4,700,000 profit for 1940 and showing a 16% increase for the first quarter of 1941, they refuse to grant a modest 10% increase in wages to meet the rising cost of living.

'In turning down pointblank the proposal of the federal conciliator they are proving to us that they have but one objective, to starve us into submission and break our union. They are clearly attempting to evade the labor laws of the United States. The support which has come from music merchants, the Citizens Committee and both American Federation of Labor and Congress of Industrial Organizations unions has strengthened our resolve to fight this through to the finish.'

The union also stated that a drive has been started to unionize the RCA-Victor plant. A new union agreement recently was signed with Allied.

The strike was called April 11 when the company turned down the union demands that the minimum wage be increased from 55 cents per hour to 75 cents, with an increase of approximately 10 cents per hour in the higher pay classifications. Later the union offered to compromise on a 65 cents ceiling. The company stuck to its original offer, which it claimed was approximately 4 cents per hour and not 1.7 cents per hour.

Miranda Opens Big At Chinese; May Garner $25,000

Carmen Miranda, South American comedienne who skyrocketed during her brief motion picture experience here, opened a week's engagement yesterday at Grauman's Chinese theatre, where she is appearing with her Banda Da Lua orchestra. The 'Brazilian Bombshell', as she is advertised, had little difficulty worming her way into the affections of an enthusiastic audience which greeted her at her opening performance, and the booking, first stage show at the Chinese in a long time, will likely reap a big $25,000.

For the Miranda booking, house has raised its afternoon price to 55 cents and is charging 75c at night. 'Topper Returns' is the main screen feature, with 'The Penalty' shown at afternoon performances only.

Fox West Coast is paying Miss Miranda and her six-piece ork $7,500 for the week, same figure that the South American singer will draw down for her week at the Paramount here, starting May 8. For subsequent stage bookings actress is reported asking $10,000.

estingly developed situations, carrying along from episode to episode with witty dialog as he spends behind-the-scenes tale of a shady gal who nearly reaches her goal of rich marriage only to spurn it for a poor, but honest life as a seaman's wife.

Mischa Auer and Franklin Pangborn contribute several comedy passages as a couple of European rakes who nearly upset the countess' plans when they recognize her as an old Continent friend. Andy Devine, Frank Jenks and Eddie Quillan serve well their brief assignments as Cabot's comic crew. Melville Cooper does a particularly good job as a relative by marriage to Young. Laura Hope Crews neatly portrays her part. Theresa Harris, maid to Miss Dietrich and accomplice in her schemes, shows well, and others are first rate support.

The score by Frank Skinner and the musical direction by Charles Previn are the picture's highlights, capturing every mood and aiding materially in advancing the plot. Rudy Mate's camera brings out the full values of the feminine loveliness and the colorful trappings. Art direction by Jack Otterson and his associate, Martin Obzina, are creditable contributions, as is the set decoration by R. A. Gausman.

Hollywood Inside

HIGH altitude flight equipment from the Lockheed P38, which has been called the Army's twin-fuselage miracle plane, was jerked out of the ship yesterday so that Warners technicians might duplicate it overnight for use today in 'Dive Bomber'. Equipment, replaced within one hour, delivers oxygen to pilots at the 30,000 foot level and above. It was the only outfit of its kind immediately available to studio's prop makers. Much technical equipment for the film was borrowed from the Wright Field laboratories at Dayton, O. Other stuff, not available because of Army and Navy demands, had to be duplicated at the studio, and all of it had to be practical. One of the things built by Bob Martin's prop men was an electro-encephlagraph, rare scientific device that measures the brain waves of pilots. Commander J. R. Poppen, of the Navy, has been supervising installation or building of technical equipment. Others advising on the flying end are Commanders Seth Warner and Charles Brown and Lieutenant Ray C. Needham, of the Saratoga.

In one studio he took over the music director's stand for a shot and disarranged the sequence of the show's music just before broadcast time. Program's maestro frantically got the sheets in order just before the red light flashed.

IN AN EFFORT to outdo Alexander Korda in the matter of lavish sets on their forthcoming pictures, Samuel Goldwyn tried to borrow Vincent Korda from Alexander as set designer, only to be turned down cold by the latter. Korda is erecting his most lavish set on the Samuel Goldwyn lot for 'Illusions'. Goldwyn would like to outshine it in his 'The Little Foxes', and, largely because of the competish, boosted the set budget on his picture to $150,000.

original placements, and in March 27%. It was pointed out, however, that Central had only one and one-half calls per Guild member to assign during March, 1941, basing the Class B membership of the Screen Actors Guild at 6,200.

While all indications point to an even larger increase this month, regular members of the SAG will not receive all of the benefit. Because of the demand for high school kids and youngsters 18 to 25 years, it was necessary for the SAG to issue many waivers. Producers have steadily increased their demands for young dress sets and for extras 18 years and under, making it difficult, and in many instances, impossible, for Central Casting Corp. to give the older extras work.

There were 9,338 open orders in March, 2,845 request orders, 10,111 continuations, making a total of 22,294 placements. Few waivers were issued in March, but the situation was changed this month, when the directors began calling for high school students.

The Great American Broadcast

(Filmusical)

20th-Fox production. Stars Alice Faye, John Payne, Jack Oakie and Cesar Romero. Features The Four Ink Spots, Nicholas Brothers, James Newill and Wiere Brothers. Supporting cast: Mary Beth Hughes, Eula Morgan, William Pawley, Lucien Littlefield, Edward Conrad, Gary Breckner, Mike Frankovich, John Hiestand, Eddie Acuff, Mildred Gover, Syd Saylor, Eddie Kane, William Halligan, Frank Orth and Herbert Heywood. Director, Archie Mayo. Associate producer, Kenneth Macgowan. Original screenplay, Don Ettlinger and Edwin Blum, Robert Ellis, and Helen Logan. Lyrics and music, Mack Gordon and Harry Warren. Musical director, Alfred Newman. Photography, Leon Shamroy, Peverell Marley. Art director, Richard Day, Albert Hogsett. Set decorations, Thomas Little. Film editor, Robert Simpson. Costumes, Travis Banton. Previewed at the Alexander, Glendale, April 24. Running time: 92 mins.

One of the undertakings in which 20th-Fox executive guidance functions best and its top players perform most brightly is the film devoted to phases of the show world. 'The Great American Broadcast' deserves to stand amongst the top rank in Darryl Zanuck's lengthening list of successful, widely entertaining features based on music and the radio. It sparkles, it has draw names, captivating music, a smart collection of specialties and sound dramatic interest, splendidly presented.

The narrative, richly embellished with melody, is a loose historical sequence of the highlights in radio entertainment, from the early gropings of amateurs and crude transmitters to the first coast-to-coast network broadcast. For a projection highlight, the narrative resurrects clips from the Dempsey-Willard fight at Toledo as a savage thrill which will excite the man audience everywhere. The old yellowed print is neatly eased into the studio footage which has been given an antique appearance to match. The personal drama in the tale has to do with the romantic quadrangle created by early competition in the radio field and the rasped pride of one of the early visionaries of the kilowatts whose wife was its first star entertainer. The story substance and treatment by Don Ettlinger, Edwin Blum, Robert Ellis and Helen Logan is a smart job of collation of the romantic, musical and retrospective diversion values.

Jack Oakie does an impressive job of trouping as the early radio tinkerer and broadcaster, who, like his buddy, John Payne, is in love with Alice Faye, a honkey-tonk chanter. Oakie's handling both of the flippant and the sentimental requirements keeps him firmly in the van of the screen's character comedians.

Alice Faye sings so often and so well that her romantic indecisions are given little time, but she takes care of her share of the plot very well, dallying between Payne and Cesar Romero.

John Payne puts fire and vigor into his role as the war-time pilot who ties up his whole faith and future with the growth of radio when it was still a plaything.

Cesar Romero gets one of his bland roles, a light assignment but expertly done, and reminiscent of his

(Melodrama)

Universal production and release. Stars Richard Arlen and Andy Devine. Features Anne Nagel, Addison Richards, Don Terry, Oscar O'Shea. Supporting cast: Harry Cording, Jeff Corey, Harry Strang, John Rogers. Directed by John Rawlins. Associate producer, Ben Pivar. Original story, Paul Huston. Screenplay by Maurice Tombragel and Victor McLeod. Photographed by John W. Boyle. Art director, Jack Otterson. Film editor, Ed Curtiss. Musical director, H. J. Salter. Dialog director, Maurice Wright. Previewed April 24. Running time: 60 mins.

'Mutiny In the Arctic', newest Richard Arlen-Andy Devine picture for Universal, is an action film in every sense. Producer Ben Pivar has provided a production that stands out predominantly, and most everyone connected with the opus has done his share to make it 'audience' from every standpoint.

Aside from the story angles, which concern an expedition to the Arctic regions in search of radium, the picture is filled with stirring sequences, including crumbling icebergs, a daring and hazardous airplane flight over the snow-capped ridges of the Far North, fist fights that are beauties, and speedy action to warm the cockles of even the most ardent of adventure film fans.

Dick Arlen and Andy Devine add new laurels to their long list of successes and several members of the supporting cast stand out in their particular roles. In earlier days 'Mutiny in the Arctic' could quite easily have been turned into a 'million-dollar' epoch, and cinema addicts who crave action in their celluloid entertainment are afforded unlimited opportunity here to regale themselves.

John Rawlins has done a choice directorial chore, and he is successful in sustaining the interest right to the final fadeout. Whatever lapses film may have, and they are very few, can be attributed primarily to the injection of a few bits of corny dialog, and a trite yarn around which the action evolves.

Paul Huston is credited with writing the story and he turned out a good-enough yarn which Maurice Tombragel and Victor McLeod transformed into a satisfactory screen play.

Aside from Arlen and Devine, both of whom portray their roles flawlessly, histrionic honors must go to Addison Richards and Don Terry, the ringleaders of a conspiracy to get possession of the radium find after Arlen and Devine, ostensibly with Richards' assistance, have worked up the necessary expedition.

Only femme role is portrayed by Anne Nagel, who lends a pretty picture to the proceedings, but fails to convince in her small, but important role. John Rogers has a neat bit as a mess boy and others of the supporting cast are adequate.

Photography of John W. Boyle is outstanding, particularly his storm-at-sea shots and the breaking up of the icebergs, although there remains the possibility that these latter sequences were 'lifted'.

Almost every foot of the celluloid depicts action of some sort or another and exhibitors who book 'Mutiny In the Arctic' will have no need to make excuses.

The Singing Hill

(Western With Music)

Republic production. Stars Gene Autry. Supporting cast: Smiley Burnette, Virginia Dale, Mary Lee, Spencer Charters, Gerald Oliver Smith, George Meeker, Wade Boteler, Harry Stubbs, Cactus Mack, Jack Kirk. Director, Lew Landers. Associate producer, Harry Grey. Screenplay, Olive Cooper. Original story, Jesse Lasky, Jr., Richard Murphy. Photography, William Nobles. Songs: Jule Styne, Sol Meyer, Eddie Cherkose, Smiley Burnette, Gene Autry. Musical supervisor, Raoul Kraushaar. Film editor, Les Orlebeck. Previewed April 24. Running time: 73 mins.

About as fine a Gene Autry musical western as any Republic has ever produced is 'The Singing Hill'. Film has been given excellent production (with Harry Grey as associate producer), a swell feminine lead in Virginia Dale, smooth direction by Lew Landers and five grand new songs. There can be little doubt that this one will assay high at the box-office.

Story centers about the Circle R ranch, owned by Miss Dale, a spoiled absentee heiress. When she tries to go back on the kindly traditions of her family and sell the land, Autry, her ranch foreman, is hard put to stop her. George Meeker, a crafty broker, wants the ranch so that he can close all free grazing acreage to other, smaller ranchers, and drive them out of business. Autry, Smiley Burnette, Mary Lee (the orphan daughter of one of Autry's cowboy pals), and Cactus Mack, another cowpoke, go to the city and force Miss Dale to come to the Circle R. Spoiled as she is, she will not give in even when Autry has Spencer Charters, whimsical small-town judge, declare her legally irresponsible to manage her own affairs. Autry is given control of the ranch and ordered by the court to return $25,000 option money to Meeker. Miss Dale has already spent the money, so Gene and the little cowmen pool their cattle and start to herd them to market. Floods drive down a canyon, the cattle are stampeded and one of the ranchers is killed. Autry and his men return defeated, but Miss Dale, who finally realizes that all will be ruined if she sells out, relents, and helps Gene capture the gang in a wild battle.

Autry is the same old Autry, immensely pleasing and in good voice. Miss Dale, who took the femme lead after Patricia Morison turned it down and was suspended by Paramount, more than makes good. She is better than any of Autry's previous leading ladies. Burnette draws his usual quota of laughs. Mary Lee is an honest, likeable kid, with better than average pipes. Gerald Oliver Smith is amusing as the rich girl's butler, and Meeker is tops as a heavy. Charters, Boteler, Harry Stubbs, Mack and Jack Kirk give excellent support.

Although Olive Cooper goes into no sustained flights of originality, her screenplay is a well-turned job. Burnette's tune, 'Sail the Seven Seas'; a couple of numbers by Jule Styne, Sol Meyer and Eddie Cherkose, along with Autry's song, 'There's Nothing Like a Good Old-Fashioned Hoe Down', are splendid. William Noble's photography is up to par.

Benny Testimonial Dinner Talks Will Run To Flippancy

Serious speeches will be held to a minimum at the testimonial dinner to Jack Benny in Biltmore Bowl May 9, saluting his 10 years in radio. Louis B. Mayer will speak for the picture industry, and Niles Trammell, NBC prexy, spokesman for the radio business. Other talks will be more or less of a flippant nature.

Unable to make the trip here from New York between broadcasts, shunning air travel, Fred Allen is sending a transcribed 'tribute' to be played at the dinner.

Clay Morgan, aide to Trammell, who is handling arrangements for the testimonial, said yesterday that invitation acceptances assure a capacity turnout. Shindy will be strictly a black tie affair.

have been involved. Also, it is understood that friction with Malcolm Kingsberg, vice-president of the Circuit and also vice-chairman of the Keith-Albee-Orpheum board, who has been with the company since 1933, and who is aligned with the Mike Meehan interests, might have been a likely factor. It is known that Kingsberg has been trying to wield general operations power over RKO and that O'Connor did not relish this intrusion.

The resignations were made today by wire to George J. Schaefer, prexy of RKO, who is in Hollywood, and to Kingsberg. O'Connor has been with RKO for 20 years and Meyers for 12. In theatre operations circles the duo is known as the top combination in the field and have had the respect and co-operation of all the other circuit operators in their work.

George Schaefer last night stated all he knew about the resignations of O'Connor and Meyers was contained in the wire sent him, but he did not expect they would quit tomorrow. He said he had not considered a successor for either post. However, it is believed that Kingsberg probably will take over the reins held by O'Connor.

head of the PCA and functions as liaison with the Breen office here. He also has been working for the Hays organization on the industry National Defense cooperating plan as coordinator of the committee of which George J. Schaefer is chairman.

Breen figures on being relieved of his job within the next couple of weeks, and though he plans a two months' vacation, it is understood he likely may make an immediate studio affiliation. Various company heads have talked to Breen about a new connection, with George Schaefer, head of RKO, informing Daily Variety that he has not yet talked to him, but would now as the others were. When queried whether he had the top studio spot in mind for Breen Schaefer said, 'I don't know until after I have talked to him.' These talks may be held over the weekend.

Breen joined the Hays outfit in 1929 as assistant to Hays in New York, and came to Hollywood Jan. 1, 1931, in same capacity. In January, 1934, he succeeded Dr. James H. Wingate as head of the Studio Relations Committee, which was established in 1928 with Col. Jason Joy at the head.

Then, with the Legion of Decency mandate to the industry on a clean screen, Breen devised the idea of the Production Code Administration Board, worked on it two months, went to New York and had the Haysite board okay it in June, 1934. He put it into immediate operation.

When Breen joined Hays he was getting $18,000 a year, and job he now is quitting paid him $1,000 weekly.

Harmon, who joined Hays a few years ago, was editor of a newspaper in Hattiesburg, Miss., president of the National Council of the YMCA and general secretary of the International Committee of the YMCA of the United States and Canada before joining Hays.

fine showing in 'Tall, Dark and Handsome'.

In the specialty brackets The Four Ink Spots beguile with choice harmony and comicalities; the Nicholas Brothers put on another demonstration of their incomparable hoofing; the Wiere Brothers amuse with a continental routine, and James Newill sings.

Director Archie Mayo knows his show world stuff, too — what will translate with sure-fire entertainment to the screen—and here does a capital job, in the quality and holding power of his scenes, the crisp socking of the musical numbers and specialties, and in the general pace which makes the 90-minute show seem considerably shorter.

In the minor player rank the roles of Mary Beth Hughes, Edward Conrad and Eula Morgan are well etched.

Mack Gordon and Harry Warren contribute the prodigal song potpourri, ranging from fine sentimental ballads to farced ditties and radio ad numbers. 'Long Ago Last Night' is one of the tops, and a honey, as is 'Where You Are'. 'I Take To You' is a sentimental jingler. Others are 'I've Got a Bone to Pick With You', sung by the Ink Spots; 'The Great American Broadcast', topical; 'It's All In a Lifetime', and 'Run, Little Raindrop, Run'.

Leon Shamroy and Peverell Marley do splendid job of lensing, and Alfred Newman's music direction is a solid merit in the melodic values.

Kenneth Macgowan as associate producer gives the picture impressive presentation.

Don Lee Strikes Out For Commercial Modulation

First move locally toward commercial frequency modulation was made yesterday by the Don Lee network when its general manager, Lewis Allen Weiss, placed an order for a high voltage transmitter to be erected atop Mt. Lee, overlooking Hollywood. Atop a 230-foot steel tower will be erected a six-bay turnstile antenna, adding another 70 feet to the radiator's height.

New unit, to be placed in operation early this summer, will service an area of 7,000 square miles. Frequency modulation receivers are now on the market, retailing up to $150. Frank Kennedy, Don Lee chief engineer, will supervise installation of the FM equipment, which will give greater tone fidelity to sound broadcasting.

Elbert Franklin May Take Over Mexican Circuit Operations

Elbert Franklin, son of Harold B. Franklin who died suddenly in Mexico City last Monday, probably will operate the new circuit of neighborhood theatres which Theodore (Ted) Gildred has launched in the Mexican capital and which were to have been operated by Franklin, Sr. Gildred is committed for the first of this proposed chain of 10 or more nabe houses and expects to start work at once on plans drafted by S. Charles Lee, Los Angeles theatre architect.

The younger Franklin, who planed in from Mexico City last Tuesday night, expects to return there within the next week or 10 days. Mission of Harold Franklin, who died just as he was preparing to catch a plane for Los Angeles, was to dispose of his Beverly Hills home and move his family to Mexico.

These plans, it is understood, will not be changed as a result of Franklin's death, and the son and Mrs. Franklin are now planning to take up their official residence in Mexico City.

Memorial services for the former Fox-West Coast prexy, and later film producer, will be held this morning at 9:30 at the Wee Kirk o' the Heather, in Forest Lawn cemetery in Glendale. Franklin's body was cremated in Mexico City and the ashes interred there in a crypt.

Paul Short, chief barker of Tent No. 17, Variety clubs of America, and Bob O'Donnell of the Interstate circuit arrive next Tuesday in Hollywood to complete arrangements for stars, producers, directors and executives to attend the National Variety convention in Atlantic City May 15-17. They will confer with Walter Wanger and other industry chiefs.

Assembly Committee Ignores Anti-Ascap Bill Objections

out orchestras play an average of 81 tunes nightly. They declared unemployment will increase rather than decrease if the bill becomes effective. Roeder said the bill is identical to the Florida act, provisions of which were recently held invalid by a constitutional court. Appeal is now before the U. S. Supreme court. Delegation from Frisco's Musicians Local No. 6 led arguments in support of the measure.

Elmer Vincent of that group testified 'The consent decree isn't worth the paper it's written on.' He said if the Ascap monopoly isn't broken now the condition would spread to the entire amusement industry. He added that 21 states now have similar legislation as that contained in Tenney's bill.

Edward Love, secretary of the Frisco local, declared 'excessive license fees cost us untold loss of employment. The irony of it is this—live music is subject to tax, while juke boxes are not.'

Support also was voiced by Newell Hooey of California State Hotel Association. After explaining the music assignment setup he said the whole trouble is the power to fix prices. He pointed out that fees total nearly $6,000,000 a year. Powers denied fees were excessive, maintaining that Ascap is trying to arrive at a fair and equitable rate. Fees range from $60 to a few cases of $24,000 a year, but the average license in the U. S. is about $75.

15% FEE IN WB, GOLDWYN DEAL

puts at his disposal its entire roster of players.

Leo Spitz, who engineered the deal for Goldwyn, declared it would be virtually impossible for any company, aside from Metro, which isn't interested, to top the Warners offer. While Spitz is in no hurry to speed along the deal, he is marking time in the hope that something better might come along.

Distribution heads are agreed that at 15% Warners can't hope for better than an even break on handling the Goldwyn pictures. Producer paid United Artists, from which outfit he recently seceded, 25% minus discounts, which only on heavy grossers in the world markets could conceivably bring the fee down to 15%. It is conceded, however, that Warners has struck a good bargain because of the new method of selling blocks-of-five. Expected that one or two top pictures from him would provide the leverage for the sale of a block.

Pal Execs May Get Ultimatum Today

An ultimatum setting a time for a strike of employes at George Pal Productions will be handed to company executives today by representatives of the Screen Cartoonists Guild unless the two groups are able to get together on a wage agreement. A walkout has already been authorized by the workers, when and if the Guild negotiators feel it necessary.

Company executives said they were making every effort to negotiate an agreement, but that the demands submitted by the Guilders would call for a payroll increase of nearly 100%. Guild leaders said the company had been offered a number of concessions, but that the minimum pay scales requested were much lower than that paid by other studios.

Negotiations between the SCG and Screen Gems were renewed yesterday.

Schenck, Moskowitz Will Appeal On Surrender May 12

New York, April 24.—Joseph M. Schenck today was sentenced to three years on each of the first two counts on which he was convicted, and was fined $20,000, the sentences to run concurrently. This means three years. Joseph Moskowitz received one year and a day, and was fined $10,000.

May 12 was set as the date for surrender of the men, with their present bail continued. On that day Defense Counsel Harold Corbin will ask for continuation of their bail pending an appeal to the Circuit Court of Appeals. This will be opposed by the government, forcing Corbin to go to the Circuit court to seek the right to keep the film executives out of jail until their appeal can be heard.

Attorney Corbin summed up before sentence, asking first that the verdict be set aside as contrary to law, which was denied by Federal Judge Grover Moscowitz. Then the attorney declared the verdict was a compromise between those of the jury which thought Schenck was innocent and those who thought him guilty. He declared that in view of the acquittal on both the 1937 evasion charge and the conspiracy count, it was obvious the jury convicted on the election bets alone in 1936, and the William Goetz-Roland West stock sales in 1935, while finding their methods of doing business okay. He said that certainly was not criminal, that the issues at stake were purely technical ones, and that Schenck's way of life was exemplified by the fact that he tried to protect his friends from losses.

CORBIN LAUDS MEN

Corbin stated he has virtually lived with Schenck during the last few months, and is utterly convinced of Schenck and Moskowitz's innocence. He declared Schenck lived humanly and never turned down an appeal for aid. The attorney declared Schenck is more of an asset to the government out of jail than in, by payment of the income taxes, and that he was and is amply willing to pay.

Prosecutor Mathias Correa declared the government evidence of three years indicated there were more attempts to defraud in other years, and stated the amount deducted was small in proportion to Schenck's ability to pay. He recommended a three-year sentence on each count, with the sentence running concurrently for Schenck, plus a minimum fine of $10,000, and a sentence of one year and a day for Moskowitz, plus a $10,000 fine.

Judge Moscowitz then declared: 'It is always an unpleasant task to impose sentence, especially when the defendants have risen to such high positions, and I am sorry for the predicament they are in. It is always the innocent, the families of the guilty who must suffer for the guilty. I have given considerable thought to this decision, and in imposing sentence I must also consider the position of the public, and the effect the sentence will have in stopping others from similar crimes. The court could impose sentences of 10 and five years, but in view of the circumstances will accept the government's recommendation.'

SURRENDER MAY 12

May 12 was then set as the date for surrender. Should either or both have to go to jail eventually, Moskowitz can get out in four months on good behavior. Schenck may have to serve much longer, as with good behavior he gets two months off each year, or six months on three years, and at the end of the first year can apply for parole. However, since the perjury count is still pending against Schenck, he may not receive a parole. Neither will be jailed for at least one year, possibly more, while their appeals are pending. The Circuit Court of Appeals should hear the case by Novemeber, with a decision being handed down by February, 1942. Then an appeal may be taken to the United States Supreme Court if the Circuit Court of Appeals refuses to reverse the verdict.

EL MONTE ASKS OFFICIAL OKAY ON 63-DAY CLEARANCE

Seeking to have official sanction given the 63-day availability for 30c admission first run theatres in El Monte, A. L. Sanborn and John Rennie, operators of the El Monte theatre there, have filed a petition with the American Arbitration Association, through Attorney Rufus Bailey, urging that the schedule as set up some years ago, and under which they now are being served, be legalized.

Request is unique in that plaintiffs have no grievance against the major distributors named as defendants, and seek only for an official recognition of the availability as long established.

James Edward Theatres are named co-defendants, as Edwards' Tumbleweed theatre at Five Points, near El Monte, and the Valley theatre at Rosemead, which are operating under the 63-day clearance schedule, would be affected under an AAA official sanction for El Monte.

Suggestion is made that AAA establish an El Monte business district, as set up by the El Monte chamber of commerce, as a 63-day zone, thereby insuring Sanborn and Rennie of uninterrupted flow of product under the new government consent decree.

Case is the third filed with Secretary Walter H. Elliott of the Los Angeles AAA office, and is regarded in industry circles as quite unusual, in that the plaintiffs are seeking no redress other than to have a distribution agreement under which they have long been operating officially recognized.

STUDIO PAYROLLS UP IN MARCH

age weekly total of 14,074 wage earners in the film industry collected $598,281 each week in March, as against a total of 12,792 weekly workers who were paid $568,816 each week during February.

Both average weekly earnings of individuals and total number of hours worked each week decreased during March, those on the payrolls working 32.6 hours to earn $42.51, or an average hourly pay of $1.305. During month of February wage earners worked 34.4 hours per week to collect an average pay of $44.47.

March averages represent considerable change over the total of workers and payrolls during March of 1940, being a plus 9.1 and a plus 6.6% respectively, although average weekly earnings were minus 2.3% less when compared to March a year ago.

DISNEY DEADLINE SESH CALLED TUESDAY

pany, with Attorney George E. Bodle sitting in for the Screen Cartoonists Guild, which preferred the unfair labor practice charge against the studio.

In the meantime it was learned that Walter Spreckels, labor contact for Disney, has arranged to meet with the Screen Cartoonists Guild at 9:30 a.m. Monday (28), and with the Society of Motion Picture Film Editors at 4 p.m. Tuesday (29). Both crafts have filed complaints with the NLRB accusing Disney executives of 'sponsoring a company union.'

Spreckels is understood to have spent some time yesterday in conference with Disney, discussing the American Federation of Labor drive to unionize the studio. Spreckels will not appear at the NLRB conference Tuesday since the unfair labor practice charge was filed before he resigned as regional director of the board.

Scores of affidavits charging that Disney executives attended organizational meetings of the Studio Federation, and that officials have been present at Federation meetings since the SCG entered the picture have been filed with the NLRB. These will be forwarded to Washington along with the request for issuance of a complaint unless an amicable settlement is reached at Tuesday's conference.

Aubrey Blair, AF of L organizer, Herbert Sorrell, business representative of Moving Picture Painters Local 644, and Attorney George E. Bodle will represent the Cartoonists at the parley with Spreckels on Monday. Prexy Edmund D. Hannan is expected to head the delegation appearing for the Film Editors.

Gene Tierney Illness Causes Suspension Of 20th's 'Belle'

Recurrence of eye trouble for Gene Tierney yesterday forced temporary suspension of shooting on 20th-Fox's 'Belle Starr', causing third disruption of film schedules at Westwood plant because of player illness within past few days.

Walter Pidgeon, suffering severe cold yesterday was ordered off the set of 'Man Hunt' by his doctor, and Director Fritz Lang rearranged schedule to shoot around him.

'A Yank in the R.A.F.' also had schedule rearranged to work around Betty Grable, who is still in Santa Monica hospital from operation on impacted wisdom tooth. Picture starts Monday.

Gene Tierney, who has title role in 'Belle Starr', had first swelling of eyelids, ascribed to an allergy, last Friday and was out until Monday. She has again been taken for treatment to the Good Samaritan hospital, and Director Irving Cummings will not resume filming until she has recovered.

Evergreen District Tops Skouras Drive In First Week

Kern County-Arizona district, operated jointly by Homer Gill of Bakersfield and Lou Christ of Tucson, is in second place and Thornton Sargent's first run Los Angeles houses hold down third.

Tom Soriero, manager of the United Artists theatre (downtown) leads the theatres in Class C and Harold Kopp, of the Uptown, Los Angeles, heads the Class E houses.

Drive runs 12 more weeks, winding up July 13, with prize awards totaling more than $30,000 to be distributed.

Universal, SOEG Talk Proposed Contract

Negotiations between Universal and the Screen Office Employes Guild were resumed last night, with committees from the two groups meeting at the studio. Most of the session was devoted to reviewing terms of the proposed SOEG contract which were not reached at the last conference. The SOEG negotiators are scheduled to meet with Columbia executives Monday (28), and with RKO on Wednesday (30).

Writers, Managers Mull Licensing Pact

Details of the Screen Writers Guild plan to license agents were discussed last night at a meeting between committees representing the SWG and the Artists Managers Guild. Tentative agreement has already been reached on the general plan, with the main difference reported to be over the scrivener's request for appointment of a negotiator to secure bids on all story materials before they are sold.

JACK WHITE has his own views about the Motion Picture Relief Fund, the Screen Actors Guild, Central Casting Corp., etc., and he wants the world to know about them. Requesting reporters to visit his bedside in St. Vincent's hospital, Jack, a veteran film player and former strong man, said 'all these phoney stories about the Relief Fund, the Guild and Central are the bunk'. But, then let Jack tell it: 'Several months ago I became ill. I didn't want to bother the Relief Fund or the Guild so I went over to General hospital. My condition didn't improve. I finally went to the Relief Fund and explained the situation. And they gave me the devil for not coming sooner. The next day I was here in St. Vincent's. I was given every attention. Dr. Brown performed a major operation, and my condition has steadily improved. I feel that he saved my life and that I wouldn't be here if it wasn't for the Motion Picture Relief Fund. They even gave me a check when I was out of work, but Central gave me a job the next day and I mailed the check back. I can't thank them enough. And the same goes for the Screen Actors Guild, Mr. Thomson and Mr. Somerset, and to Mr. Philbrick, Mr. Melniker and Mr. Roderick at Central. All of them deserve the highest commendation. Please give my regards to all of them.'

SAMUEL GOLDWYN didn't pick up the option on William Wyler's contract for another two year-period without a struggle on the director's part. Wyler has been trying for some time to have pact changed to call for his services on only one picture a year instead of the two features he is now required to direct. Wyler had several outside deals under negotiation and figured he would be free to pick and choose among offers if Goldwyn would permit holding pact to the one feature each year. Director has the right to approve any loanout deal Goldwyn may make but because of latter's prior rights to his services there have been instances when he was unable to accept the director's post on a story he particularly liked. Wyler has turned out a number of big box office successes in the pictures he has done away from Goldwyn. Producer has also been assured of good returns when Wyler was assigned to handle the direction on a Goldwyn-UA production, which is understood to be the reason he refused to alter contract.

Film Previews and Review

The Great Train Robbery

(Melodrama)

Republic release of Joseph Kane production. Cast: Bob Steele, Claire Carleton, Milburn Stone, Helen Mackellar, Si Jenks, Monte Blue, Hal Taliaferr, George Guhl, Jay Novello, Yakima Canutt, Dick Wessel, Lew Kelly, Guy Usher. Directed by Joseph Kane. Original screen play, Olive Cooper, Garrett Weston and Robert T. Shannon. Photographed by Reggie Lanning. Film editor, Lester Orlebeck. Music, Cy Feuer. Reviewed April 25 at the Hitching Post thatre. Running time: 59 mins.

Republic delved deep into motion picture history to grab the title for its modern version of a train robbery. Yarn in no wise, it is pointed out at the start of the picture, is to be confused with the Edison picture of the same name, produced back in 1903.

For this streamlined version, Producer Joseph Kane, who also directed, has provided a surfeit of thrills that will be especially appealing to rabid action fans. It's a story of the west, but horses give way to high-speed autos, and cowboy garb is discarded in favor of civvies. But there is a chase, with plenty of shooting and fisticuffs before the modern train robbers are brought to their end.

Bob Steele, a railway dick, starts out to guard a shipment of gold bullion via a crack train headed from the desert lands to Chicago. His brother, played by Milburn Stone, and a roadhouse proprietor, heads the holdup gang and makes light of brotherly ties in his efforts to wipe out his law-abiding brother.

Claire Carleton, an entertainer at the roadhouse, is loved by both brothers, with their mother, Helen Mackellar, always trying to patch up quarrels between the two. As usual, the law triumphs, the modern road agents are caught or killed and Steele and Miss Carleton do a fade-out in each other's arms.

Steele gives a cleancut performance as the railway detective, and an excellent portrayal of his crook brother is given by Stone. Both Miss Carleton and Miss Mackellar play their parts well, and good performances are turned in by Si Jenks, as the old prospector who ferrets out the hidden train after the wouldbe bandits display plenty of hoke in 'kidnaping' the Limited; Monte Blue, Hal Taliaferro and Guy Usher.

Kane's direction is wholly adequate, and the screenplay by Olive Cooper, Garrett Weston and Robert T. Shannon leaves little to be sought by the type of patron who will go for this yarn. Reggie Lanning's camera work is of a high order and Lester Orlebeck has done a good job of editing.

'The Great Train Robbery' fills the bill for thrills and will be especially to the liking of juvenile audiences.

The Big Boss

(Drama)

Columbia production. Cast: Otto Kruger, Gloria Dickson, John Litel, Don Beddoe, Robert Fiske, George Lessey, Joe Conti. Directed by Charles Barton. Original screen play by Howard J. Green. Photography, Benjamin Kline. Film editor, Viola Lawrence. Previewed April 25. Running time: 69 mins.

Highly circumstantial in its basic premise of the fateful encounter of two brothers at the peak of political power for both, 'The Big Boss' comes off as conventional but acceptable program entry for the general runs because of good performances and capable direction.

Original screen play by Howard J. Green relates a rather involved plot of business racketeering, just inside the legal bounds, by the brother who went 'bad', who considered every honest man a sucker, and who controls a state legislature. Opposing him is the 'good' brother, whose dying father exacted a pledge from him to keep the other going straight, and who now has become the governor. The grown men, both astute politicians, no longer recognize each other, having become separated in boyhood. Now one is out to break the other, until discovery of identity brings a switch.

Otto Kruger, as the callous boss, and John Litel as the governor, handle their roles with conviction, although the dialog at times gets a little unwieldy. Gloria Dickson makes an excellent impression as the assured newspaper woman who has the governor's confidence but also manages to keep close to the big politician. The romantic note between Litel and the girl grows until it reaches an open declaration of love. Don Beddoe, her reportorial rival, also carries his assignment impressively. Robert Fiske is a stereotyped heavy opposed to Kruger, although in the latter's ring, and it is the death of this character in a melodramatic battle which causes the final showdown. George Lessey and Joe Conti have good bits.

Story is exceedingly talky and is obvious in its development, but gets a directorial pace by Charles Barton which gives semblance of bustling action except in those stretches where the elaborate political plotting and exposition requires slow and often tedious progress. Director works capitally with his players for sound characterization. Confession of his masquerade and wrongdoings by the 'bad' brother to save the other for the good he will do the people of the state is too pat and easy to bring the picture to strong dramatic close.

Hymer In 'Stripes'

Warren Hymer reports at Universal today for featured role in 'Rhapsody in Stripes' before going to Paramount to do part in 'Birth of the Blues', Bing Crosby-Mary Martin musical. Deals agented through the Leo Morrison office.

The Black Cat

(Melodrama)

Director, Albert S. Rogell. Associate producer, Burt Kelly. Original screen play, Robert Lees and Fred Rinaldo, Eric Taylor and Robert Neville. Suggested by the Edgar Allen Poe story. Brown. Special photographic effects, John Fulton. Assistant director, Howard Christie. Set decorations, R. A. Gausman. Gowns, Vera West. Previewed April 25. Running time: 69 mins.

Such chiller names as Basil Rathbone and Bela Lugosi would indicate that 'The Black Cat' is pure horror stuff, but the billing of Hugh Herbert is the tipoff that audiences also will have a generous share of nitwit doings from that fun authority. Both production and direction is interestingly developed and picture will prove capable of filling all requirements as supporting fare.

Practically every piece of ghostly paraphernalia, guaranteed to raise goose bumps, is thrown into the plot. Such things as a wealthy recluse and her horde of cats, surrounded by poor relatives doing their share to hasten her death; an odd housekeeper, an equally odd gardener, etc., are used as a basis upon which to string the varied happenings. The comedy angle is introduced by Herbert as an antique dealer, anxious to buy the old lady's treasures, and Brod Crawford, also working hard to put over the sale so he can talk of love and such things with the recluse's granddaughter, Anne Gwynne. There are enough murders, under weird circumstances, to satisfy the horror addicts and the gore is kept from dripping too heavily by Herbert.

The proper eerie touch is given to the characters porarayed by Rathbone, a sinister relative; Lugosi, the gardener; Gale Sondergaard, the housekeeper; Miss Gwynne, Gladys Cooper, Claire Dodd, John Eldredge and Alan Ladd, relatives; Cecilia Loftus, the recluse; all of whom are a choice bunch of suspects, victims and baddies. Herbert's saving dose of silly nonsense is a major contribution and Brod Crawford proves a big help in the major doings.

Albert S. Rogell, with a big supply of material to sort out in the original script by Robert Lees, Fred Rinaldo, Eric Taylor and Robert Neville, suggested by the Edgar Allen Poe story, has developed the suspense interestingly and larded in the comedy at the right moments. Burt Kelly has given the picture the benefit of wisely-spent budget money and earns a good credit in the fulfillment of his duties. Stanley Cortez's camera aids the picture's mood measurably. The special effects by John Fulton are good, as are the art direction and set decorations.

ONE of the liveliest and most entertaining parties of the year was that tossed Saturday night at the Biltmore Bowl by the 20th-Fox Studio Club members. Milton Berle acted as emcee, keeping his audience constantly laughing, pouring out an amazing wealth of pointed, uproarious wit. Entertainment was first class, headlined by Carmen Miranda and her bandalura orchestra, Ella Logan, Stanley Clements, Abbott and Costello, the Merry Macs, Virginia O'Brien, the Nicholas Brothers, Dorothy Dandridge, Ames and Arno, and Berle and Laird Cregar in a takeoff on Miranda. Music was supplied by the orchestras of Glenn Miller and Garwood Van. Darryl Zanuck, other studio executives and full contingent of 20th-Fox stars were at the party. . . . Henry Luce and Clare Booth drew about 250 to hear them talk on Chinese relief at the Beverly-Wilshire hotel Friday night. The couple head today for China to get first hand line on what is going on in the country of Luce's birth. In meantime they impressed need for folks here start ball rolling to get $5,000,000 for the united appeal for Chinese Relief in America. They announced Walt Disney would head a committee to garner the coin. Dave Selznick presided and introduced the speakers. Buffet lunch was served afterward and the 'Who's Who' of films met the Luces and learned all about their views on international matters.

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt will address the State Advisory Committee of the California National Youth Administration today at an informal tea to be held at the home of Helen Gahagan and Melvyn Douglas.

FILM ROW gang tossed a farewell spread for Dr. C. Zeno Holt at Perino's cafe on eve of his departure for Berkeley to take the chair of instructor in medicine, science and military tactics at the University of California. During his absence his local offices in the Fox-West Coast home office building will be continued, with a substitute in charge. . . . Dolores, from Santiago de Chile, will premiere at the House of Murphy Wednesday (30), as a singer of friendly songs of Mexico and points south. The new show will also introduce Stan Stanellison, accordionist, and Eddie Cletro, troubadour.

MILTON BERLE, one of the community's quaintest congeries of nonsense, yesterday tossed a frivolous little party for Mack Sennett beside the swimming pool of the Beverly Hills hotel that took the guests and spectators back to the days of the Keystone Comedies.

UNIVERSAL FIRST QUARTER PROFIT IN BIG JUMP

before Federal income and excess profits taxes.

Both figures indicate earnings are running about the same as for the first quarter which ended Feb. 1.

The Universal statement cited that 1940-41 production has been substantially completed within the overall budget. Of 56 features and four serials promised, all but four have been completed. It also states that six features have been completed for next season which starts Sept. 1.

Cowdin stated that he expected one half of the pictures for the new season would be ready for release at the start of the new year. He also said that a new high had been reached in the exceeding of 10,000 sales contracts closed for the present season.

It was also revealed by the board chairman that the company's Chicago convention was the only one held on the 1941-42 product, with selling on the new season now going forward. He reported that voting trust certificate holders had approved seven-year pacts for seven top execs at Wilmington, Del., on April 22, with nearly 99% favoring the new deals. Also, by-laws of the corporation were amended to indemnify directors against suits excepting for wilful misconduct or action in bad faith.

AMOS 'N' ANDY, NBC HIT IN SUIT

Amos 'n' Andy (Freeman Gosden and Charles Correll) are named defendants in a $50,000 damage suit filed in Los Angeles Superior court by Boris Travnikoff, also known as William Crow, through Attorney Harold Fendler. Suit also names the National Broadcasting Co. as a codefendant, and seeks $25,000 damages for alleged unauthorized use of a series of black-face dialog, based on the 'stop and swap' idea, and an additional $25,000 for interference in the production of a motion picture based on the same idea.

Complaint charges that Travnikoff wrote some dialog with the central idea a 'stop and swap' motif, and that these were broadcast over KMTR and KHJ in 1934 and 1935. Three years later, when Travnikoff was arranging with Russell Bridges to produce a motion picture of the same idea, defendants, Amos 'n' Andy, are accused of starting a 'stop and swap' series of broadcasts over NBC. Plaintiff complained and some time later the black-face team discontinued the broadcasts.

RKO Will Roadshow 'Fantasia' on All New Playdates

New York, April 27.—Deal has been set here for RKO to take over the road showing of Walt Disney's 'Fantasia' now that Disney sound experts have solved the problem of combining the eight Fantasound tracks into a single sound track without impairing the tonal quality. Understood deal calls for Disney to continue his own handling of those theatres which he equipped for original openings of the concert feature, but RKO will take over all new play-dates on a two-a-day basis.

Deal has been in work for some time and Roy Disney returned here suddenly from the Coast last week after studio sound experts finally reached solution of the problem which they have been working on for the past year. Disney has spent around $30,000 each on the 12 Fantasound units built by RCA, but limiting of distribution range because of necessity of tying up a theatre for installation of the special equipment caused cartoon producer to have his experts get busy developing a less costly method that could be used generally in theatres around the country. Deal with RKO will mean Disney will be able to show a faster return on the huge sum of money he has tied up in the film.

A Disney representative will work with RKO at each future opening of the feature, supervising the correct handling of the sound. Bookings now are being worked out by Roy Disney with RKO sales executives for an early, general roadshowing.

UA Sales Conferences Offed Indefinitely

New York, April 27.—United Artists regional sales conferences, scheduled for tomorrow, have been postponed to an indefinite date. It is understood that Murray Silverstone is not yet ready to announce the names of the new producers he hopes to have in line for 1941-42.

Silverstone hopes to impress UA salesmen with a powerful group of producers. First step in this direction was the inking of the pact with Eddie Cantor. Arthur Kelly, vice-president in charge of sales, who handled the Cantor deal, left immediately afterward by plane for the Coast to confer with Silverstone in speeding up parleys with producers.

First of the divisional sales meetings was to take place in New York, to be followed at intervals of a few days by confabs in New Orleans, Cincinnati, Chicago and San Francisco.

Spyros Skouras Will Spend More Time on West Coast

Spyros Skouras, president of National Theatres Corporation, parent head of Fox West Coast Theatres, plans to spend much of his time on the west coast starting Sept. 1, dividing his interests between here and New York city. He will continue his duties as chief of theatre operations, but figures that with the new buying setup, caused by the government's consent decree, his presence on the Coast will be more needed than in the past.

Work on the construction of a new building, to cost in the neighborhood of $135,000, is to be started immediately adjoining the Fox West Coast home offices here, with provision made for quarters for the National Theatres prexy.

In addition the new structure will house the company's commissary, presently located in crampy quarters on the Washington side of the home office building, and also the main warehouse of the circuit's rapidly growing candy department. Offices for the increased film buying department also will be provided.

Plans for the new structure, which will face on New Hampshire street, are being completed and actual construction is expected to start within the next few weeks. It will be completed before Sept. 1.

CHARLES J. CHIC

Funeral services will be held tomorrow at 9:30 a.m. at the Wee Kirk o' the Heather for Charles J. Chic (Schick), 49, for the past four years production manager at Metro. Chic committed suicide early Saturday morning in his car near his home, 151½ South Bedford drive, Beverly Hills. Van Dyke and others, and also was assistant to William Duncan, who starred in and directed his own serials. He was brought to Metro in 1927 by Edward Sedgwick as his assistant, and also worked on that lot with King Baggott and others. He was named assistant to J. J. Cohn, general production manager, holding that spot until four years ago when Cohn became a producer, and Chic succeeded him as head of the department.

Col. R'cding Employes Plan Court And NLRB Moves

Following a brief sashay over a back-to-work movement at Columbia Recording Corp., striking employes announced their fight to keep the plant unionized will be taken into Superior court today and before the National Labor Relations Board. It also was stated that expulsion charges now are being preferred against the union member responsible for the return-to-work suggestion.

Spokesmen for the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers said that charges of unfair labor practices will be filed against the company with the NLRB, and that the union will institute legal action under the State Labor Code provision providing employers must bargain in good faith. In the meantime, clients of the company had already started legal maneuvers, which strikers admitted would break the walkout if successful.

The first legal move came Friday when Davis and Schwegler, music publishers, secured a claim and delivery court order for a master stamp plate at the Columbia plant. When the officer marched through the picket line to remove the plate, the union protested to Undersheriff Clem Peoples that an effort was being made to use his office as a strike-breaking agency. Peoples explained his office was required to carry out court orders, but is understood to have agreed to notify the union of such future moves to give it an opportunity to take action.

Unionists explained that if clients of Columbia were permitted to remove the master plates, additional records could be stamped out, and the effects of the walkout would be lost. They also claimed that the back-to-work movement was engineered by company representatives, but this was denied by the latter.

Homer I. Mitchell, attorney for the company, stated that Columbia had no desire to break the union. He said the company has and is ready to negotiate with the union at any time, and has made what it considers reasonable offers for the men. He said there is always a limit to what any employer can pay, and that Columbia felt it had been negotiated to the top.

The plant has been closed since April 11, when the company vetoed demands of the union that the maximum wage ceiling be tilted from 55 cents per hour to 75 cents. Later the union agreed to take 65 cents on recommendation of Edward Fitzgerald, U. S. labor conciliator, but the proposal was turned down by the company. The union insists the company's best offer has been a raise of 1.7 cents per hour, but company executives said the offer was approximately four cents, including pay for holidays.

Metro Seeking Grant For Garbo Film which he appeared for Samuel Goldwyn. He aims to get into production around July 15 and have the picture ready for release around Christmas.

Comic will provide his own coin, UA's new financing unit or banks putting up none of it. Money is coming from his personal friends in New York, anxious to obtain an investment outlet such as this in the face of the new tax bill.

Cantor will get sole producer credit on the films and will have no associates. He does intend, however, to give himself important name support in the films in which he stars, he said.

Papers were inked at a powwow in Cantor's New York apartment on Saturday. Present for UA were Arthur Kelly, v.p. in charge of sales; Harry Gold, eastern district sales manager, and Dennis F. O'Brien, of O'Brien, Driscoll and Raftery, UA's counsel.

BREEN SUCCESSOR NAMING SOON

Breen as Production Code Administrator.

Though Francis L. Harmon is first in line with Hays for the job, Hays must get the okay of the Hays organization board of directors for the appointment. Others, in case that Harmon, who is current head of the Code Administration in New York, does not get the spot, to be considered are Geoffrey Shurlock, aide to Breen on the Coast, or Harold Smith in the Hays office foreign department. One of publicity men in Hays office here gaggingly suggested Jock Lawrence, Coast press agent, for the job, feeling that the latter might endeavor to pursue his tactics of tying matters up in Code Administration as he is currently attempting with the press and publicity departments on the Coast in Gestapo fashion.

Rogers starrer, 'Tom, Dick and Harry', which has around three more weeks of shooting. A former Baltimore newspaperman, he has been with RKO in various capacities since 1932, when Harold Franklin appointed him director of advertising, publicity and exploitation for both Radio and the RKO circuit.

Before joining RKO he was for three years with VARIETY in New York and for six years publicity representative for the Theatre Guild. He served one year as assistant to J. R. McDonough, former RKO prexy, and then became a producer in 1935.

Sisk has been handling some of RKO's larger pictures and the two top features he was to do following the Rogers film will be assigned to other 'A' producers on the lot. Pictures are 'Sister Carrie' and 'The Play's the Thing', a forthcoming Charles Laughton starrer.

Marcus will vacation for at least two months before announcing a new connection. He has been with the company eight years, the past six of which he was in charge of the studio's budget films and was responsible for the development of several important producers during that time as well as turning out features himself.

Marcus joined Robertson & Coe on April 21, 1921, in the contract department, and when that company was taken over by F.B.O. he remained as sales manager. Later when RKO assumed control of F.B.O., Marcus moved up to become president of RKO-Pathe. Last Monday he celebrated his 20th year in the business. The first two years of the eight he was with RKO he handled shorts while learning the producing end of the motion picture business.

VARIETY ACTORS PAY JUMPED

Wage increases estimated to boost earnings of Los Angeles variety actors $250,000 annually were put into effect over the weekend by the American Guild of Variety Artists. Letters listing the new pay scales were mailed Saturday to 150 theatres and night spots.

AGVA tops stated that about 1,000 actors will be affected, with the number increasing as current contracts expire. It is estimated that the average raise per actor will be approximately $5 a week, although it will be double that amount in the higher brackets.

The scale for club dates is tilted from $8.50 to $10. The increase in other classifications is from $25 to $30 per week, $30 to $40 per week, $40 to $50 per week, and $50 to $60 per week. The latter applies only to Class A houses, the majority of which have contracts. AGVA also plans to make agents responsible for collection of actor's salaries.

Par's 1940 Earnings Around $6,304,064

Consolidated earnings of Paramount Pictures, Inc., for the year ending Jan. 4, last, were $6,304,064, plus discount on the purchase of company's debentures of $98,066, a total of $6,402,130, annual report issued by President Barney Balaban reveals. These earnings are after deducting all charges, including interest, federal taxes, depreciation and $523,783 additional reserve provided for contingencies. These figures vary about $16,000 from those released in February.

20th Pushes 'Valley' On 1941-42 Sked; 'Outlaw' Indefinite

'Sun Valley' has been tentatively pushed over to the 1941-42 schedule on 20th-Fox releases, and Howard Hughes' 'The Outlaw' has been shifted from a previous May release to an 'indefinite' status, according to new schedule revealed by Herman Wobber, general manager in charge of distribution.

Possible that 'Belle Starr' may be substituted for 'Sun Valley', or that the latter may again be restored to the 1940-41 schedule. Purpose is to shift the pictures so as to offer the best balanced blocks of five for readiness under the consent decree operation becoming effective Aug. 1.

O'Connor, Meyers Stay At RKO Until May 10

New York, April 27. — John J. O'Connor and Fred Meyers, respectively general manager and film buyer-booker for RKO theatre circuit, who resigned last Thursday, effective the next day, have agreed to remain with the company until May 10.

Much pressure was brought on the duo to reconsider their resignations. Peter Rathvon, member of the RKO board and the Floyd Odlum-Atlas Corp. rep on the board, and W. G. Van Schmus, managing director of Radio City Music Hall, also a board member, conferred with them to change their minds. Both were reported to have told the board members they did not want to reconsider as they felt that Malcolm Kingsberg, vice-prexy of the company and also Keith-Albee-Orpheum board member, had told them he was the important factor in operation and they felt therefore there was no need for them and he could handle the operations. Kingsberg also endeavored to get them to reconsider.

The differences between the RKO operators and Kingsberg had been going on for some time and came to a head last week after O'Connor's and Meyers' judgment in buying 'John Doe' from Warners for the circuit had been questioned by Kingsberg who said he should have been consulted before the deal was closed. Consequently the duo tendered their resignations and told Kingsberg he could take over and operate.

O'Connor has an offer from Warner Brothers to go in as assistant to its operator, Joseph Bernhard. Warners also is interested in Meyers. Latter also has an offer from National Screen Service while both have propositions to head a new group of independent theatres around New York that want to band together for operation and film buying purposes. Likely that a decision as to their future will be made by both Meyers and O'Connor during coming week.

Jones Wins Award

Ray Jones, Universal still photographer, last night was awarded the special trophy for making the most popular picture entered in the First Annual Still Photography Show of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences. This made three awards captured by Jones. He won gold medals for the best action portrait and the best novelty still.

PRODUCER - DIRECTOR PARLEY SET TOMORROW

far-reaching effects of the demands, decided to handle them through negotiations.

The companies will be represented by Y. Frank Freeman, E. J. Mannix, Cliff Work, B. B. Kahane, Fred Pelton, George Cohen, Herbert Freston, M. J. Siegel of Republic, and Maurice Benjamin. The Guild negotiating committee is composed of George Stevens, chairman; Frank Capra, George Marshall, Felix Feist, Phil Rosen and Leslie Selander.

Siegel, although not a member of the Producers Association, was called into conference by a group of company execs Friday, because of his familiarity with the situation through deals with employes in the smaller salary brackets. Siegel is understood to have analyzed the Guild demands and to have explained how their adoption would affect production costs, especially on low-budget pictures. Those meeting with Siegel included Y. Frank Freeman, Fred Pelton, B. B. Kahane, George Cohen, J. R. MacDonough, Cliff Work and Maurice Benjamin.

The regular Producer labor relations committee did not meet because of the absence of E. J. Mannix. When Mannix returns from the east today he will be given a fill-in on the actions of the Producer group and will be ready to sit with the executives when they huddle with the Directors tomorrow night. Attorney Mabel Walker Willebrandt also is due in today to discuss the proposals with the Guild negotiating committee.

The Directors are asking a minimum of $300 per week for directors employed on short subjects, montages and second units. A minimum of two weeks' salary is sought for a one-reel short, and three weeks for a two-reel subject. A minimum of $60 per day is demanded for a second unit or montage director employed by the day.

A weekly minimum of $350 is demanded for westerns and serials, with a proviso no contract in this classification shall be for less than three weeks.

For features, the SDG demands a minimum of $500 per week, with no contract for less than three weeks. Proposals also provide no flat deal shall be for less than the weekly wages specified in each instance. Where a director is employed on a contract of 40 weeks or more, the Guild is demanding a minimum of $200 per week for shorts and second units, $250 for westerns and serials, and $400 for features. Contract directors also would be guaranteed two weeks' vacation, and all directors would receive a 12-hour rest period.

The Guild wants to raise the present 80-20% Guild shop to 90-10%.

Off The Old Block

William Cabanne, son of Director Christy Cabanne, and William Beaudine, Jr., son of another veteran film pilot, will make their film debut as players in Paramount's 'Henry Aldrich for President.'

DEFINITE DISNEY MOVE TODAY

The first real move by the Walt Disney Studio to reach an agreement with American Federation of Labor crafts is expected today when Walter Spreckels, Disney labor contact, confers with a committee of labor tops representing the Screen Cartoonists Guild. The Guild delegation will be composed of Aubrey Blair, AFofL organizer; Herbert Sorrell, business representative of Moving Picture Painters Local 644, and Attorney George E. Bodle.

While the general labor situation will be discussed at this session, definite action probably will be postponed pending the National Labor Relations Board conference called for tomorrow by William Walsh to determine the status of the Disney Studio Federation. Walsh, NLRB senior attorney, was named acting regional director after the resignation of Spreckels.

The Society of Motion Picture Film Editors meets with Spreckels tomorrow to discuss its demands.

Wanger Terms Cabot

Walter Wanger has signed Bruce Cabot to a term contract, with actor reporting there in May.

GOLDWYN SIGNS RKO CONTRACT

Foxes', starring Bette Davis, and 'The Professor and the Burlesque Queen', tentative title for a Gary Cooper starrer. Likely Goldwyn, who says he has an abundance of story material ready to go with, might add another to the group.

Deal was negotiated by Leo Spitz, Goldwyn attorney, with George Schaefer. Though terms of deal were not announced, it is understood that the deal is similar to the one RKO has to handle Walt Disney product.

Warners had offered to handle the Goldwyn product on a 15% basis for domestic distribution. Understood that RKO, figuring Goldwyn product had prestige value, probably agreed to distribute picture on cost basis to itself and benefit in reducing the cost percentage through volume of business the added product would bring.

Also likely that RKO might be financing portion of Goldwyn product costs as it did with Disney at time it made its shorts deal, contributing around 75% of the cost at time negative was delivered and splitting 50-50 after production and distribution costs were covered. On 'Snow White' RKO put out a special sales force to handle the Disney product, so likely this may be continued in the handling of the Goldwyn product and 'Fantasia', which RKO will also distribute.

Lloyd Signs Nigel Bruce

Nigel Bruce has been signed by Frank Lloyd for one of the top roles in 'I, James Lewis', latter's next producer-director effort for Universal release.

Pal, SCG Announce Tentative Wage Agreement

A strike of cartoonists employed on George Pal Productions was averted over the weekend when the company made a tentative wage deal with the Screen Cartoonists Guild. The walkout had been authorized by the workers, and 2 p.m. today had been set as a deadline for the company to give its answer.

The two groups went into conference Friday night, and the company agreed to a tentative contract calling for substantial wage tilts for all classifications. Details of the deal were sent to New York for approval, with the agreement that both sides would give a yes or no this morning. It is understood the deal has been given a favorable nod by the workers, and that its okay is certain by New York officials.

The company was represented by George Pal, Attorney Homer I. Mitchell and S. L. Vanderveer. The Cartoonists committee was headed by Attorney George E. Bodle and Lyle Shrader, international representative of the Brotherhood of Painters.

Dispute Over Laborer Jurisdiction Nears

The union jurisdictional dispute over studio laborers is nearing a climax, it was indicated yesterday by disclosure that Producers had issued orders to ban all workers carrying permit cards from Studio Laborers and Utility Workers Local 727 of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes. The move came as a surprise since the dispute had been referred to the International presidents of Local 727 and Studio Utility Employes Local 724, both American Federation of Labor crafts. It was reported the ban on permit cards had the approval of the IATSE International, but local officials were puzzled over the move which caused some workers to be laid off. The dispute started shortly before Local 724 threw its support to the IATSE in a National Labor Relations Board election enabling the IA to defeat the United Studio Technicians Guild, sponsored by the Congress of Industrial Organizations.

Brian Aherne has been signed at Metro for the male lead opposite Jeanette MacDonald in 'Smilin' Through', joining Ian Hunter and Jackie Horner as other cast toppers.

RKO Options Rice

RKO has taken an option for term contract on Florence Rice, following her role in 'Father Takes a Wife.'

Landers Gets 'Ship'

Lew Landers will handle direction on 'Mystery Ship', Jack Fier production at Columbia, set to start May 15.

Producer agreement on the contract revisions requested by the Screen Actors Guild has been stymied by fear of certain company executives that the proposed limitation of $5.50 extra calls would substantially increase the cost of B productions. However, with the return of E. J. Mannix from the east, it is expected that a speedy agreement will be reached and that the new extra wage brackets can be put into effect shortly after May 1.

The SAG originally proposed that $5.50 tickets be limited to calls for 50 or more extras. Producers took

Hollywood Inside

HENRY BLANKFORT, long the top executive for the Hollywood Theatre Alliance, which produced 'Meet the People', has departed from the ranks of the H.T.A. and will help produce a strictly commercial all-Negro revue in opposition to one long planned by the Alliance. Blankfort and others have established the American Revue Theatre and announce that 'Jump for Joy' will be produced at the Mayan theatre early in June. Duke Ellington and his orchestra, the announcement says, have been signed for the show. Board of the American Revue Theatre includes Blankfort, Hal Fimberg, Walter Jurman, Sid Kuller and Paul Webster, some of whom have been associated with the H.T.A. Group plans to produce two revues a year, opening shows on the Coast and taking them later to New York. Meanwhile, the Theatre Alliance is going ahead with its plans to produce an all-Negro show. Committee composed of Charles Leonard, Edward Eliscu, Bob Meltzer, Hi Alexander and Phil Moore is working on details. Clash between those who wanted to make the Alliance a strictly commercial affair and those who wanted to use it as a non-profit organization to revive interest in the theatre here and to give young actors a break, has long stymied plans for the H.T.A.'s revue. H.T.A., in the colored show venture, is affiliated with the New Negro Theatre, which will benefit from the proceeds. 'Meet the People' is still playing in New York.

GENE TOWNE-GRAHAM BAKER, 'The Play's the Thing', have obtained a six-month extension of their contract to produce 'How To Meet a Man', story by Towne. Concern was thwarted in making the picture for almost a year by casting trouble. They got Martha Scott for the femme lead with Orson Welles evincing a desire to appear in it with her and Edmund Goulding to direct. However, things did not jell and deal went cold. Yesterday the six-month continuance for RKO to release and finance pic was made with Towne to get male lead and director. In case nothing can be done there Towne has right to make the picture for another company providing RKO is paid $92,000 for the story rights and studio overhead. In event picture is made on outside Towne will provide his own financing and arrange for release through United Artists.

LATE issue of PM, New York daily, carried a novel review of 'Model Wife' by the paper's film critic. Picture is playing at the Palace. Critic devoted exactly one paragraph to 'Model Wife', using the remaining eight paragraphs in the story to review the trailer for Orson Welles' 'Citizen Kane', which was screened at the same time. 'Kane' goes into the Palace May 1. Hearst papers continue their boycott of Welles, although the Los Angeles Examiner for Sunday had to give him a bow. Early last week Welles donated $25 to the fund being raised by Hearst papers for relief of the Colima, Mexico, earthquake suffering. His name did not appear among the donors to the fund. It was listed as 'O. Welles, $25.'

DEAL has been worked out between Warners and Fox-West Coast whereby 'Meet John Doe', produced by the Capra-Riskin unit for WB is being booked for immediate playdates in the F-WC houses in this area. 'Doe' was given its Los Angeles premiere at the Warners Downtown and Hollywood, at slightly tilted admission prices, and distributing company was loath to generally release the picture at regular prices without stretching the protection period. Customary availability point was reached more than 10 days ago, but owing to failure of the major circuit to come to terms with the distributing company, no playdates were arranged for this territory up to last weekend.

PICTURE locations are being rapidly delimited in the Los Angeles and adjacent port areas by increasing army and navy defense activities, especially in the harbor territory where heavy riveter machines make a racket which prohibits film sound tracking. Film Previews

They Dare Not Love

(Drama)

Columbia production. Stars George Brent, Martha Scott. Features Paul Lukas. Supporting cast: Egon Brecher, Roman Bohnen, Edgar Barrier, Kay Linaker, Frank Reicher. Director, James Whale. Producer, Sam Bischoff. Screenplay, Charles Bennett, Ernest Vajda. Story, James Edward Grant. Photography, Franz F. Planer. Musical director, M. W. Stoloff. Film editor, Al Clark. Art direction, Lionel Banks. Previewed April 28. Running time: 75 mins.

Columbia's 'They Dare Not Love' could have been shelved and no great disaster would have befallen the exhibitors of the country. It is just another (and not top-flight) anti-Nazi picture which is distinguished by poor direction and an anemic plot. George Brent and Martha Scott do an excellent job, as do other members of the cast, but even the fine talent of Miss Scott cannot rise above the shoddy material. Exploitation will have to emphasize the drawing power of the top names.

Brent is an Austrian playboy prince who skips out of Vienna with Egon Brecher, a professor, and his daughter, Miss Scott, just as Hitler's legions take over in 1938. They fall in love on the way to America, but her father warns her about an inexorable caste system, reminds her that she is a commoner and she refuses to tell Brent where he can find her after the boat docks. He drowns his sorrow with an American heiress, Kay Linaker, but finally encounters Miss Scott on the street. Her father rebukes him for playing while Austria is in bondage. Brent decides to give himself up to the Gestapo if seven of his countrymen are released from captivity in Austria.

Paul Lukas, the Gestapo chief, agrees that he will allow the men to cross over into Belgium if Brent surrenders. Brent sails for Antwerp on a Belgian ship, unaware that the boat has just been purchased by the Nazis and will head for Hamburg. All the other passengers have been barred from the ship, but Miss Scott discovers the double-cross and dashes to the boat to warn Brent. She, too, is made captive. At sea, the captain of the ship, Frank Reicher, marries them. For being too friendly to them he is disciplined by Lukas, who also turns up on the boat. When a radiogram from Berlin warns the captain that England and Germany are at war and orders him to change his course, he destroys the message and allows the boat to be taken by a British destroyer.

Lukas is as good as he possibly could be as the cold, melodramatic Gestapo chief. Excellent support is given, especially by Roman Bohnen, and by Brecher, Edgar Barrier, Miss Linaker and Reicher. It is sad that the abilities of Brent and Miss Scott should be wasted on the stereotyped screenplay by Charles Bennett and Ernest Vajda. James Whale is responsible for the direction. Sam Bischoff has given the vehicle adequate production, but a lily of this kind can't be gilded. Music and technical assistance are up to par.

The Pioneers

(Western With Music)

Monogram production. Stars Tex Ritter. Features Red Foley, Arkansas 'Slim' Andrews, Doye O'Dell. Supporting players: George Chesebro, Del Lawrence, Wanda McKay, Post Park, Karl Hackett, Lynton Brent, Chick Hannan, Gene Alsace, Jack Smith, Chief Many Treaties, Chief Soldani. Director, Al Herman. Producer, Edward Finney. Screenplay, Charles Andersen. Suggested by the James Fenimore Cooper novel. Photography, Marcel LePicard. Film editor, Fred Bain. Musical director, Frank Sanucci. Technical director, E. R. Hickson. Sound, Glen Glenn. Production aide, Samuel R. Wallis. Songs, Betty Laidlaw and Robert Lively, Jack Smith, Johnny Lange and Lew Porter, Red Foley and Lee Penny. Previewed April 28. Running time: 61 mins.

There are elements of juvenile entertainment in 'The Pioneers', such as Indians, wagon trains, chases and fights, which will allow it to get by as Saturday matinee stuff for the little kiddies, but no adult recommendations can be made. Outside of having some good songs for Tex Ritter to sing, which are well recorded, picture suffers from all manner of inconsistencies and depends on numerous library shots to pad the action and production. Western is the last of the Ritter starrers on Monogram's program, film cowpoke having gone over to another company.

Plot gets itself all worked up over the travail suffered by a wagon train treking west to settle land and the phoney Indian raids plotted by the white villain and his henchmen, who want to corner the rich lands themselves. It soon resolves down into a loosely-connected series of running fights, fist sluggings, bad marksmanship and similar desert formula, in spite of being 'inspired by James Fenimore Cooper's novel'. Ritter, the guide, is in unusually good voice for his songs and is adept at both fist and gun slinging and riding.

Red Foley and his Saddle Pals, from WLS' National Barn Dance program originating in Chicago, and Doye O'Dell from WTIC, Hartford, Conn., are prominently cast and do their best work in the vocals. Arkansas 'Slim' Andrews' comedy is thin and obvious, but with a chuckle here and there for the youngsters. Wanda McKay does okay in the brief femme assignment, and George Chesebro, Karl Hackett and Lynton Brent do well enough by the baddie parts.

Al Herman directed from Charles Andersen's screenplay, and at least has kept the action moving along. Edward Finney's production is standard, as is photography by Marcel LePicard. Best of the songs, 'Song of the Trail', was clefted by Betty Laidlaw and Robert Lively.

Big Industry Benefits Planned for Greeks In Mid-West

In spite of Greek reverses, which have led to abandonment of much of the country to the Nazis, industry aid to the stricken country and its people is to continue. At least several million Greeks are known to be at Crete and on other islands in the Aegean sea, and these, more than ever, it is stated by Greek interests, require all material aid possible.

Next big industry benefits for the cause will be staged at Cincinnati Friday night, and at the Armory in Louisville, Ky., the following night, Derby Day, May 3. Screen names to participate in these benefits include Tony Martin, Lana Turner, Don Ameche, Virginia Gilmore, Patricia Morison and Marsha Hunt. Latter pulls out today and balance of screen contingent planes out tomorrow night.

Film players will be guests of Jouett Ross Todd, Louisville chairman of the Greek War Relief, at the Derby Saturday, and other local festivities are planned.

On the west coast relief activities continue unabated. Last Saturday night Herbert Marshall appeared at the benefit performance in Seattle, and on Thursday night last Bob Hope headed a big show at the Long Beach Municipal Auditorium, when close to $5,000 was raised for the cause. Among those participating were Linda Darnell, Virginia Gilmore, Jerry Colonna and Laraine Day.

Stressing the need for continued relief efforts for the Greeks, Charles P. Skouras pointed out that once before the Greek nation had been conquered, but that after 400 years had regained its independence through the efforts of the Greek islanders. 'Hitler and Mussolini may take over continental Greece', Skouras said, 'but the millions of Greeks on the numerous islands will fight on until their independence is again secured. Greece is not defeated and never will be. Therefore, the need for material assistance is greater now than ever.'

Col. Recording Execs, Employes Mark Strike Time

Columbia Recording Corp. executives and striking employes continued to mark time yesterday, with each side insisting that any move to reopen negotiations would have to be initiated by the other. The United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers announced that any future parleys with the company would have to be before the general membership instead of with a negotiating committee.

Union spokesmen said that while no further steps had been taken to remove master plates from the plant, arrangements had been made to block their use at other establishments. They said both Allied and RCA-Victor had promised they would not handle any Columbia work during duration of the strike.

United officials said that unfair labor practice complaints were being drafted, but that official filing with the National Labor Relations Board would be held up a few days. The walkout started April 11 following a disagreement over wages.

No Carny Stuff Allowed In Pic Within Quentin

San Quentin, Calif., April 28.—Miramar Pictures Co., which set up equipment inside the prison walls for a film on life of inmates, can at least lay claim to authentic sets. Run of the institution was given the company by Warden Clinton Duffy, who permitted filming of scenes from the 'fish' stage to the day of freedom.

Director of the picture, a San Quentin alumnus, was paid glowing tribute as 'a man who came back' in a talk by the warden to the inmates. Warden Duffy appears as narrator in the film. He said he would preview the picture before its release and order cuts to insure an accurate portrayal of prison life. Contest is being conducted among the inmates for the picture's title.

Warden Duffy announced that pictures will be shown the inmates before many more weeks. He said that Warners has donated two projection machines and as soon as they are installed the films will be shown.

'Kane' Opening In Frisco May 14; Boles Arranges

'Citizen Kane' opens at the Golden Gate theatre in San Francisco May 14, policy being the same as at the RKO-Hillstreet here, two matinees daily at 75c top, and one night show, all seats reserved, at $1.10 and $1.65. George Boles, manager of the Golden Gate, spent the weekend here conferring with Charles Koerner, RKO district theatre chief, on plans for the engagement.

Boles will have a stage show in conjunction with the Orson Welles picture, it being desired to maintain the regular house policy during the run.

Advertising and publicity campaign, mapped out by Koerner and Boles, calls for heavy display space in the Chronicle and News, together with billboard and radio advertising. Copy will be submitted to the two Hearst papers, Examiner and Call-Bulletin, but house expects the same trouble there as encountered in Los Angeles, where display copy has been turned down.

Deliberate Overbuying Held OK in Minn. Anti-Trust Case

Minneapolis, April 28.—Deliberate overbuying of product by an exhibitor in order to deprive an opposition theatre owner of film sufficient to operate his showhouse properly, and thus ultimately force him out of business or damage him extensively, does not constitute a violation of the Sherman anti-trust laws or provide a Federal court cause of action for damages, it has been ruled here by the U. S. District court.

Ruling was made by Judge R. C. Bell, at the conclusion of the plaintiff's case, in ordering a dismissal of the $75,000 triple-damage suit brought by David Ratner, of the White Bear theatre, White Bear, Minn., against Mrs. Jessie Jensen, owner of the competing Avalon theatre in the same town. Although testimony introduced showed that Mrs. Jensen had overbought film considerably, sewing up seven of the eight major company products so that Ratner, who had invaded the town, was unable to buy sufficient product, the court held that the plaintiff's acts were not concerned with interstate commerce and that, accordingly, the Federal court had no jurisdiction.

Action was unique in invoking for the first time, it is believed, the anti-trust laws in a damage suit by one exhibitor against another for cornering product, without joining in the action any of the film companies that made the deals and refused to sell to the complaining theatre owner.

MINN. ANTI-CONSENT BILL SIGNATURED

plan, the new Minnesota law requires distributors to offer for sale their entire season's product, the same as at present. It also compels distribs to allow a minimum of 20% cancellation, and to refrain from forced selling of any of its other films.

Companies that opposed the law in the state legislature were Metro, 20th-Fox, Warners and United Artists, and they also sought to induce the governor to veto the bill. Signature of the chief executive, however, was affixed at nearly midnight Saturday, following a hearing in his chambers.

Next move is up to the distributors, one of whom, 20th-Fox, has announced already that it would not sell films in Minnesota under the new law.

NBC CHARGED WITH PACT BREACH OVER 'KIDS' START

for refusing to put the show on the air was that it verged too closely on the formula of another NBC show, 'The Quiz Kids'. Don Gilman, western division head of NBC, said yesterday that certain complications had developed but that he was hopeful they would be ironed out and the show take off shortly. Davis said the program had originally been approved but that it was later tabooed as presently set up. He declared that the show would be moved to the Don Lee network if NBC refused to take favorable action.

Davis said that the program differed from 'The Quiz Kids' in that it had only one quiz angle, that of the youngsters firing questions at some outstanding personality, appearing as a guest. Otherwise they discuss current topics and pick 'the kid of the week' for some meritorious act.

Show was to have started its origination in Seattle and work gradually down the coast for an extended stand here.

be made today at an NLRB conference called by William Walsh, acting regional director.

Following their talk with Spreckels, Aubrey Blair, Herbert Sorrell and Attorney George E. Bodle expressed satisfaction with progress of the union drive on the Disney lot. Spreckels said they explored all of the possibilities of how to handle the job in an orderly manner, and that 'while Mr. Disney does not feel he can tell his employes what union to join, he is willing to do anything to help clear up the situation in a manner satisfactory to everybody.'

Walsh was in Sacramento yesterday, but it was stated he would return in time for today's conference. Principal hurdle is the Studio Federation, which was certified by the NLRB about two years ago. The Guild now claims to represent a big majority of the employes, but a group in the Federation still insists it is the collective bargaining representative. The SCG has branded the Federation as a 'company union.'

Visio Setup Readied For 500 Theatres In Five Years

New York, April 28.—RCA now has apparatus ready and for sale that will, in the opinion of Thomas F. Joyce, RCA vice-president, make possible large-screen television immediately practical in the metropolitan New York area. Joyce believes that the visio setup will be practical for 500 theatres in certain situations throughout the country within the next five years.

Announcement came at a press conference preliminary to a demonstration for newspapermen and exhibitors of the new RCA equipment on May 9. Company will televise to the 1,000-seat New Yorker (NBC) theatre from Madison Square Garden the Billy Soose-Ken Overlin middleweight championship bout.

Joyce suggested that the film industry, instead of fighting television, get in on the ground floor. David R. Sarnoff, head of RCA, has ruled out NBC as a producer of the programs for theatres, according to Joyce. Joyce foresees a producer buying up television rights to sporting events and selling service on these to theatres with receiving apparatus. He suggested 10 cents to 20 cents per seat for ordinary affairs and 40 cents for a Joe Louis championship bout or something of that quality.

Apparatus per house will cost $30,000, Joyce said. He estimated line charges at $200 a week and service on machinery from $20 to $50 per week. Pictures would be wired instead of etherized. First, because getting permission from the Federal Communications Commission for a special channel might not be possible; second, to prevent non-subscribing theatres or home television owners from grabbing the shows out of the sky.

Correspondents Talk Over Previews

Top Hollywood correspondents meet today at the Brown Derby to receive an answer from the Studio Publicity Directors Committee on their demands that films be previewed here before they are screened in New York and other eastern cities. Mitchell Out for 3 Months; Arnold Sought for 'Devil'

Effort is being made to borrow Edward Arnold from Metro to take over the Thomas Mitchell role in 'The Devil and Daniel Webster' at RKO, following announcement yesterday by actor's doctors that he would be unable to appear in pictures for at least three months. Mitchell suffered serious head injuries a week ago when horses drawing a buggy in which he was riding bolted. He is in Cedars of Lebanon hospital.

Offer was made to Alfred Lunt to play the Daniel Webster character by Ben Piazza, but former turned down deal because of ill health. Lunt is closing his current play to rest at his Wisconsin home while recovering from neuritis attack.

Replacement of Mitchell in the cast means that William Dieterle and his production associate, Charles L. Glett, will have to re-do about 10 days' work. Picture has been in production for nearly three weeks. Mitchell also was supposed to go into 'Unexpected Uncle' as his next RKO feature.

$5.50 Calls Slow Up Actor Pact; Execs See B Boosting

the position that this would make little difference on big productions, but that it might have a decided effect on the cost of B pictures, where only 10 or 12 extras might be used daily.

Other proposals called for elimination of the $8.25 and $11.00 calls and adoption of a $10.00 bracket. If the original proposal is adopted this would mean that unless 50 extras are called, each would have to be paid $10.00 daily. The $5.50 proposal also would eliminate any specifications, such as ages, dress, etc. There also has been some talk of dropping the pay of dress extras from $16.50 to $15.00, but it is understood that no definite action has been taken on this. The dress group some time ago opposed a plan to increase their daily stipend, taking the position such a move might result in the use of fewer dress people resulting in a decrease of earnings.

With the switch in pay brackets and elimination of casual extras from the industry, SAG tops believe that the Guild will be able materially to increase the annual earnings of the regular extras who depend on the industry for a livelihood. Checks now are nearing completion on the extras who worked only a few days in 1940, the Standing Committee having recommended that they be dropped from the available list or be called only when regular extras are not available.

In urging a limitation on $5.50 calls, the SAG is understood to have pointed out that the original plan was to use them only in crowd or mob scenes. They were classified under the old NRA code as atmosphere players, and the Wage-Hour Administration in its survey of the industry so classified them and placed the higher paid extras in a separate classification.

It is reported that the Producers and the SAG have already reached a tentative agreement calling for improved conditions for day players and smaller paid freelance actors.

U. S. Supreme Court Refuses To Review Picketing Decish

Washington, April 28. — United States Supreme court today refused to review a California Supreme court decision upholding the closed shop and giving unions almost unrestricted rights in picketing. The case came up on appeal by Howard Automobile Co. salesmen of San Francisco, who were refused an injunction to restrain the American Federation of Labor Salesmen's Union from picketing them in an effort to force them to join the AFofL craft, and to force the Howard company to accept a closed shop contract.

The salesmen had organized an independent union, and had notified the National Labor Relations Board they did not have any grievances with their employers over wages, hours or conditions. The independent group was branded by the AFofL as a 'company union'.

Schenck, Moskowitz File Appeal In New York Case

New York, April 28. — Joseph Schenck and Joseph Moskowitz filed an appeal to the U. S. Circuit court of appeal today from the sentence of three years and one year and a day, respectively, of U. S. District Court Judge Grover M. Moscowitz, April 24. The 20th-Fox executives list 10 errors of the court in refusing to dismiss each count of the indictment on which they were found guilty.

Most important of objections was failure of the court to allow defense questioning of government revenue agents. This was 'a violation of the defendants' constitutional rights to obtain testimony from any available source.'

Another error cited was the court's instructions to the jury to take into consideration the failure of either side to call witnesses. This referred to the failure of the defense to call Roland West.

U. S. Court Judge Conger postponed until May 5 application of the government to fine A. C. Blumenthal for his failure to respond to a subpoena issued in the trial. Blumenthal could be fined $100,000, and is moving to quash the subpoena on the grounds he is very ill in Mexico City and could not come to New York. He has submitted affidavits of attending physicians showing that he has a nervous breakdown, and lung and kidney trouble.

Retiring directors who are not eligible for re-election because they have served two consecutive years are Frank Capra, John Cromwell, Garson Kanin, George Marshall, Phil Rosen, Frank Strayer, King Vidor and William Wyler. Directors not eligible for election to the board because they served two consecutive years prior to 1941 are John Ford, Rowland V. Lee, Rouben Mamoulian, Lewis Milestone, Leo McCarey and Frank Tuttle.

The eight members who remain on the board another year are Frank Borzage, Victor Fleming, Tay Garnett, Henry Hathaway, Ernst Lubitsch, William A. Seiter, George Stevens and Norman Taurog. Capra declined to stand for re-election last year, but the membership refused to nominate another candidate and insisted on his retaining the post.

The election of new officers will not affect the negotiations with the Producers, since a special negotiating committee headed by George Stevens has been named by the Guild to handle these parleys. The SDG is seeking a minimum wage for directors on low-cost pictures, 90-10% Guild shop, and guaranteed employment terms. The Producer negotiating committee is headed by Y. Frank Freeman.

RKO's $8,500,000 Loan Okay Up Tomorrow

New York, April 29.—Simplification of RKO's corporate setup will be nearly completed next week inasmuch as a bank loan deal involving nearly $8,500,000 is expected to receive parent company approval at the RKO directorate meeting next Thursday. Another wrinkle will be eliminated tomorrow when the Atlas Corporation (Odlum) will lift 17,000 additional Mike Meehan shares of Keith-Albee-Orpheum preferred, as provided in the option made with the Meehan interests last December.

Vince Barnett has a top role in John Nesbitt's The Passing Parade subject, 'Your Last Act', at Metro.

SOMEWHERE IN FRANCE

Washington, April 29.—Karen Morley of motion pictures made her eastern stage debut at the National theatre here in 'Somewhere In France', a new play by Carl Zuckmayer and Fritz Kortner. Presentation was by the Theatre Guild. Piece is set to open next week in New York, but the chances are that Miss Morley will be back in Hollywood soon unless she has something else lined up in these parts. She is capable enough, certainly, and no doubt would be Americans Receive $9,675,000 From Brit. in 6 Mos.

New York, April 29.—At end of first six months under the British frozen coin pact, major American film companies will have received approximately $9,675,000 from distribution of pictures in England. Six month period ends tomorrow. Figure mentioned is considered certain despite lower theatre grosses in some spots during the past 30 days due to increased bombings. Revenue is reported higher or at least equal in most places. Picture house grosses have also benefited because less money is allowed out of the country under new money control regulations.

Graham Baker Given Three RKO Pix

Graham Baker has been assigned three pictures to produce at RKO, assuming assignments that previously had been given to Robert Sisk. Pictures are 'Valley of the Sun', 'Sister Carrie', from Theodore Dreiser's novel, and 'Through the Thin Wall', for Charles Laughton.

Tyroler Joins Metro

William Tyroler, formerly with the San Francisco Opera Company, has joined the Metro music staff under Nat Finston. He will be pianist, arranger and vocal coach for the younger contract players.

Hicks in 'Foxes'

Russell Hicks joins the cast of 'The Little Foxes' which William Wyler is directing for Samuel Goldwyn. Hicks is the third player from films to draw spot in the picture, all the rest being from the stage.

Hollywood Inside

REWRITE of the fight scenes in Warners 'Manpower' is regarded necessary by studio executives because they fear the feud between Edward G. Robinson and George Raft might become dangerous if co-stars were permitted to clash with the violence the script now calls for. Associate Producer Jerry Wald and his collaborative writer, Richard Macaulay, were huddling yesterday on projected script alterations while animosity between Robinson and Raft is reported to have become so heated that on Monday they made physical passes at each other and avoided contact only because of poor aim. Meantime Director Raoul Walsh is handling the shooting schedule in such a way as to keep the two actors away from each other as much as possible, where script calls for them to carry through the jealousy angle regarding Marlene Dietrich. When Raft is working with Miss Dietrich, Robinson is off, and vice versa. Dressing rooms have been moved to opposite sides of the working stage, further to avoid the tongue lashing which is reported to have been going on between Robinson and Raft. To give Robinson new dressing room site required some six hours of work by laborers removing props on that side of the stage. Feud, for a time regarded as having been fomented purely for publicity purposes, but now declared to be the real thing, is asserted to have started during first few days shooting when both Raft and Robinson began to take more and more vehement issue with each other as to the limits of their respective roles as rival telephone linemen and to tell each other about asserted efforts at scene hogging in no uncertain words.

MAINTAINING its right to pull a program off the air at any time, NBC yesterday indicated that Lime Cola's 'Kids of the Week' will not be broadcast Sunday from Seattle. Program, to have been launched last Sabbath on 11 stations of the net's Coast blue web, was ruled off when chain execs ruled it was too similar to Alka Seltzer's 'Quiz Kids', also on the blue band. Network officials claim that such action as derailed 'Kids of Week' last Sunday is subject to their discretion and that a show can be yanked in the middle of a broadcast or before it starts. Lime Cola has been offered choice of two substitute programs but agency representing the account, Davis and Pearson, has nixed the idea and insists that legal redress will be sought for breach of contract. Understood that 'Kids' will move to the Don Lee network if NBC refuses to take the show as presently set up.

CURRENT issue of Pic magazine has yarn captioned 'Parsons vs. Hopper' accompanied by two pages of art. It's the feud between the two gals started by Louella Parsons that is the subject matter. The art will handle the pic crowd plenty of laughs for it appears as though Lolly was snapped mostly at disadvantageous photographic moments. One quote from article says 'Hedda, on the slender side, is a walking tribute to American beauticians; few people would guess that she and Louella are the same age.' Also tells how Lolly declared war on Hedda after latter scooped her last year on the James Roosevelt divorce story. Says she cut loose for being beaten on the Roosevelt yarn and as a result her paper killed the burn yarn in its second edition. Quite amusing is the treatise.

SCARCITY of young English film players between the ages of 18 and 23 has resulted in the elimination of eight of the 26 bits needing such actors in 'A Yank in the R.A.F.' at 20th-Fox. Director Henry King was unable to line up sufficient young men to portray parts as British fliers and other English service men, largely due to the fact that majority of the bona fide English citizens of military age have left the Hollywood scene to serve their country.

Retakes

By GEORGE E. PHAIR

In days of old when crooks were bold, there was no half-way mark.
The villain's heart was bleak and cold, his deeds were dank and dark.
The hero was a paragon of virtue, pure and white,
And all his acts were noble facts and his intentions bright.

But now the villain is a guy who bears a heart of gold,
Although he prowls a bank or two and lays the sheriff cold.
He saves the bonehead hero's ranch in many a shooting fray
And leaves the lovers in a clinch and gallops on his way.

Once they were called sunfish—the baseball fans who sat in the bleachers and heaved second-guesses at the manager. The Hollywood Stars, soaring in the Coast League firmament, are equipped with Hollywood production in the second-guess department. They are known as goldfish—the opulent fans who gather daily in the shade of Bob Cobb's Brown Derby and exercise the good old American right to tell it to Sweeney. Bill is doing a fine job of managing these days, which accounts for the sudden growth of the second-guess chorus, conducted by Lou Silver, with plenty of assistant conductors. It is always a healthy sign when the second-guess choristers raise their voices in baseball. When they grow silent, it is time for the club owner to worry.

Film Previews

(Drama)

Metro production. Features Lew Ayres, Lionel Barrymore, Laraine Day, Bonita Granville, with Alma Kruger, Red Skelton, Paul Stanton, Diana Lewis. Supporting players: Walter Kingsford, Nell Craig, Tom Conway, Marie Blake, Eddie Acuff, George H. Reed, Chick Chandler, Frank Orth, Gladys B. Lake. Director, Harold S. Bucquet. Screenplay, Willis Goldbeck and Harry Ruskin. Based on an original story by Lawrence P. Bachmann and Max Brand. Photography, Clyde De Vinna. Musical score, David Snell. Recording director, Douglas Shearer. Art director, Cedric Gibbons; associate, Howard Campbell. Set decorations, Edwin B. Willis. Gowns, Kalloch. Film editor, Ralph Winters. Previewed April 29. Running time: 77 mins.

This latest entry in Metro's 'Dr. Kildare' series doesn't quite measure up to the entertainment peak reached by several of the others, and will depend largely on the impetus built up by those predecessors, and the well-established following, to play out satisfactorily. Picture for the most part moves along at a slow gait that makes the 77 minutes running time seem overlong, in spite of a number of sequences that reach an interesting pace.

Bonita Granville, as the guest player in the group, does the character of the ice show skater, establishing the story motivation that brings down legal troubles on the young doctor, his hospital and friends. Lew Ayres (Kildare) performs an emergency operation at the scene of an auto smashup in which Miss Granville is critically injured. When she comes out of danger it is with a paralyzed leg, wrecking her career. Kildare and his associates are haled into court to answer a large damage suit, and after much pro and con legal doings the doctor is cleared when it develops a spinal growth is responsible for the paralysis, and not the operation. Miss Granville is cured and everybody is happy.

Ayres dependably continues the Kildare character, although there are a few script instances where the clarity of purpose usually associated with the fictional medico is allowed to become fogged. Lionel Barrymore, the gruff Dr. Gillespie, ably makes the role stand out. Laraine Day (Mary Lamont) and Miss Granville supply the beautiful femme interest excellently.

Alma Kruger, Red Skelton, Walter Kingsford, Nell Craig, Marie Blake, Eddie Acuff, George H. Reed, Frank Orth and Gladys B. Lake, portraying regular cast characters, lend first rate support. Skelton, Miss Blake, Acuff and Orth take care of the comedy touches. Tom Conway impresses as Kildare's defense attorney, and Paul Stanton as the opposition counsel. Diana Lewis and Chick Chandler are good in smaller spots.

Harold S. Bucquet's direction doesn't reach his usual par for the series, due in part to the fact that the script by Willis Goldbeck and Harry Ruskin also failed to measure up completely. Feature is based on an original by Lawrence P. Bachmann and Max Brand and has changed considerable of the factors found in the published story. Production values are good, as are the photography by Clyde De Vinna and other technical departments.

(Melodrama)

Republic production and release. Features Dennis O'Keefe, Florence Rice. Supporting cast: Peter Lorre, Stanley Ridges, Minor Watson, Charles Arnt, Joan Blair, Charles Halton, Alan Edwards, George Watts, Sarah Edwards, Helen Brown. Directed by William Morgan. Associate producer, Leonard Fields. Screenplay, Karl Brown, Malcolm Stuart Boylan. Based on the Phillips H. Lord radio program, 'Mr. District Attorney'. Photography, Reggie Lanning. Film editor, Edward Mann. Musical director, Cy Feuer. Previewed April 29. Running time: 68 mins.

Republic's 'Mr. District Attorney' is strictly for those who think dramatic entertainment is anything with a gun in it. Speed is lacking, the dialog misses fire and the character of a femme reporter is not true to type, but the picture will probably do all right in the market for which it is intended.

Story finds Dennis O'Keefe, a beardless college boy with pull, getting a deputy's job from Stanley Ridges, the district attorney. There, with the help of Florence Rice, the girl newshawk, he manages to solve an old mystery and round up a gang of political thieves. Minor Watson, a lawyer, heads the gang. Peter Lorre is a public official in hiding because he is mixed up in graft with Watson. A huge sum of money in his possession is hidden in a bank safety deposit box where Charles Arnt, a Milquetoast clerk, filches some of it for his girl friend, Joan Blair. She makes a killing at the races. Authorities have the serial numbers on the currency but they don't know who passed the money after it turns up at the race track. Appearance of the bills proves Lorre is still alive. When he is cornered he murders both Arnt and Miss Blair. Watson gives him money to escape on a boat, but Lorre's wife, humiliated by her enforced poverty, shoots him at the dock. When Watson dashes to the bank to grab the incriminating money in the safety deposit box O'Keefe and Miss Rice chase him madly through the streets in a stolen police car, capture him and send him to prison. O'Keefe and Miss Rice, before this yeoman feat, have been fired from their respective jobs. They get each other and better jobs at the fade.

O'Keefe can't make his part believable and neither can Miss Rice. Both are personable, however, and do get by. Arnt is good as the bank clerk, and the others do their best, but the story throws 'em with its cliches and far from snappy pace. A good bit of chopping could have been done to liven things up. Technical side is adequate.

Republic is planning to make others based on the Lord airer, and some critics will hope for better results, after this practice try.

Montez, Morey Assigned Spots in 'Hawaii'

Maria Montez and Elaine Morey are assigned to featured spots in Universal's 'Moonlight In Hawaii', which starts today, Charles Lamont directing. Johnny Downs and Jane Frazee have romantic toppers. Marjorie Gateson also is added to featured group. Stanley Cortez will photograph 'Hawaii.'

Blumberg Comments On Adequate Pix On U.S. Defense

Service films being made here will give citizens of Latin America a more concrete and adequate picture of the U. S. Army preparations and its modern equipment than they have gained through any other medium, Nate Blumberg, Universal prexy, told his colleagues at the studio production and sales meeting here yesterday.

Comment was part of a report made to studio officials and eastern executives on results of the recent sales convention for Latin American managers. Blumberg based his comment on results of showing of the Abbott and Costello picture, 'Buck Privates', to the South and Central American sales conferees. He said the sales managers, all of whom, except two, were native born Latin Americans, were deeply impressed by the vivid panorama of U. S. military preparations and army training. Sales force also approved plans by studio to follow 'Buck Privates' and the currently working 'In the Navy' with productions about the marine corps, air corps and U. S. coast guard backgrounds.

In confabs here are Blumberg, J. Cheever Cowdin and W. A. Scully, general sales manager, who came in last Friday. In addition to conferences on production, Cowdin and Blumberg are working out final details on plans to take care of Universal employes who have gone or will go into military service.

welcomed by New York in the right play, which, unfortunately, 'Somewhere In France' is not.

As a matter of fact, it is not any kind of a play. Rather it might be called several essays in search of a drama; essays on those facets of French character and outlook which brought France disaster as it met war unprepared.

Dudley Digges brings out all of his exceptional talent to bear on the leading role, but it is not enough. Piece was translated from the German by Ruther Langer, and the action takes place in a French inn, called The Last Drop, near Rheims. It starts before the present war and continues to the fall of France; it concerns the Fifth Column, appeasement, etc.

Besides Morley and Digges, cast includes Walter Slezak, Alexander Knox, Wesley Addy, Arlene Francis, Art Smith, Flora Campbell. Worthington Miner staged and scenery is credited to Watson Barratt.

Ascap Starts Supreme Court Test Fite On State Song Laws

Washington, April 29. — State laws permitting public performance of copyright music where the original purchase price has been paid will have their constitutionality tested in U. S. Supreme Court. Arguments started yesterday on validity of legislation passed in Nebraska and Florida, ratified in 1937 but later held unconstitutional by Federal courts on ground it infringed rights guaranteed by the Copyright Act.

Counsel for American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers centered their arguments on collective action as the only means owners of copyright music have of obtaining revenue. 'Without such a method the exclusive right of public performance for profit, vested in the copyright owner, becomes an unenforceable and valueless right, existing only in theory and robbed of all commercial value', it was contended.

It was further argued that it would be next to impossible to place on records or sheet music 'the selling price for all uses and purposes' because that would vary according to the use made and the popularity of the tunes.

FILM SELLING SUSPENDED BECAUSE OF NEW LAW

eral prosecution and punishment for violating the consent decree sales provisions.

It is expected that the home office attorneys will decide within the next few days on the procedure to be followed. The trade anticipates an attack on the constitutionality of the Minnesota law, carried to the United States Supreme Court if necessary, and an attempt to obtain a temporary injunction to restrain enforcement of the new Minnesota law until its validity can be determined. Action could be instituted by violating the Minnesota law, or under an equity suit.

Penalty imposed for a violation of the new state law is a fine or imprisonment, or both.

20th-Fox previously had announced its intention to suspend its Minneapolis operations and to service adjoining states, now covered by its Minneapolis exchange, from other localities.

Majors operating out of Minneapolis, only exchange center in Minnesota, supply film for several adjoining states, including North Dakota, parts of South Dakota and the northwestern area of Wisconsin. Under the terms of the new Minnesota law, which was signatured last week by Gov. Stassen, despite vigorous protests launched by distributor reps, companies are prohibited from carrying out the terms of the consent decree which provides that packages of not more than five feature pictures may be sold to an exhibitor in one bunch.

HOW AGITATION STARTED

Agitation for a state law contravening the federal pact was started by the Allied group of Minnesota, which protested vigorously against the five-at-a-time picture selling plan. The Allied group also wanted the 20% cancellation privilege, now enjoyed by exhibitors, as against the cancellation privilege afforded under the new setup only on films that might be regarded as detrimental to community interests.

Majors affected by the Minnesota law are 20th-Fox, Warners, Metro, Paramount and RKO Radio. Companies that have not consented to the government decree are Universal, Columbia and United Artists. Republic and Monogram are not signatories to the pact.

Film companies bound by the consent decree are figuring on setting up branch distribution offices possibly at Fargo, in North Dakota; the South Dakota towns will be served out of Omaha, and the northern Wisconsin area from Milwaukee or some other convenient point.

Drastic action by the film distribs is attributed to the fact that to declare the Minnesota law unconstitutional, and conflicting with a federal law, would require some little time and distribution would be entirely tied up unless immediate steps to overcome the situation are taken.

secretary of AGVA, although it was reported that his resignation had not been received up to midnight.

The request, signed by the 12 board members, follows:

'We, the undersigned, members of the local board of the Los Angeles Local of the American Guild of Variety Artists, earnestly request Mr. Ken Thomson to assume the authority vested in him by the National Board and to administer to the best of his ability the affairs of our local union until such time, at the discretion of the board, we may by a vote of the membership appoint an executive secretary. As an emergency measure, due to the inefficiency of the present administration and leadership, we sign this with the full knowledge of the facts, and with the sincere belief that it is for the betterment of our organization.'

The request was signed by M. J. Happney, Frank Mitchell, Helene Heller, Princess Wynemah, Cliff Nazarro, Lin Mayberry, Virginia L. Wiseman, Frank Yaconeli, Lucile Gleason, Jack Frost, Jade Rhodora, James Burke.

Howard came here from New York shortly after the appointment of Hoyt Haddock as national executive secretary. Haddock has since resigned. It was reported several weeks ago that Howard was to be dropped, but the board is understood to have decided to give him a final chance to deliver to its satisfaction. The national board directed that Thomson maintain supervision over the Coast locals of AGVA. In addition to his other duties, Thomson recently was selected to head the Coast activities of the division of the National Defense Committee in charge of development of better cultural relations between the United States and Latin America.

Walsh Asking NLRB Complaint Against Disney Studio

Blair, American Federation of Labor organizer, and George E. Bodle, counsel of the SCG.

Lessing denied the Federation is a company union, and filed a lengthy statement with the board in which he claimed AFofL leaders had threatened to turn the studio into a 'dust bowl' or 'a hospital filled with workers beaten in a union war'. Elliott also denied the company union accusation, stating the Federation was independent and had an entirely new set of officers. He was supported by Attorney Howard Painter. The threat was hurled that if the company ceased to bargain with the Federation it would call a strike. The AFofL promptly countered with the threat that if the Federation didn't call a walkout it would.

Walsh reviewed the evidence step by step, finally stating he was satisfied from the proof offered that the Federation 'was a company dominated union.' He asked the company and Federation if they were willing to disband the group, and when both replied in the negative, he stated there was no other alternative but for him to send the case to Washington with the recommendation that a complaint be issued. He had previously pointed out the evidence showed the original organizational meetings were held on company property on company time, and that the membership was solicited by company officers.

AF of L leaders called a meeting for today to discuss the situation and arrange future plans for submission to the membership of the SCG. While the NLRB has indicated it will ask Washington to expedite the case, some of the AF of L leaders are reported opposed to any further delay.

In pointing out that there was substantial evidence showing the Federation was 'a company dominated union', Walsh stated, 'and much of the responsibility for this must be laid at the door of Gunther Lessing.' The latter has handled the negotiations which led up to the present strike threat, but Walt Disney recently retained Walter Spreckels, former NLRB regional director, as labor consultant. Spreckels did not appear at the conference today since the case was filed while he was still with the board. He was busy on the outside, however, trying to straighten out the snarl and prevent a tieup of production at the studio.

Demands of the Society of Motion Picture Film Editors for a contract and wage adjustments at the Disney studio will be discussed today at a conference between studio executives and Walter Spreckels, Disney labor contact. It is understood the company has promised to give the Society an answer prior to the meeting of its executive board tomorrow night.

Newshounds War on Studio Publicity Group Over Previews

Top Hollywood correspondents yesterday declared war on the Studio Publicity Directors Committee, when the latter group failed to give a definite answer to the writers' demand that pictures be previewed here before they are screened in New York and other eastern cities. The committee sent word through its chairman, John Joseph, that steps would be taken to remedy the situation.

The writers took the position that this was the same answer they had been getting for weeks, but that in the meantime the same old practice was being followed of previewing productions in the east and then showing them here. The correspondents then agreed that they would take steps themselves to remedy the situation, but declined to state just what those steps would be.

Several plans were said to be under consideration. One of these was a direct appeal to Y. Frank Freeman, prexy of the Producers' Association, over the head of the Jock Lawrence group. Another was to catch sneak previews, which in the past have been passed up in order to cooperate with the studios by giving them an opportunity to dress up a picture before it was previewed. Several other moves also were under consideration, the writers agreeing unanimously that they had waited long enough for the committee to take steps.

The writers are understood to have the go ahead signal from their publishers, who take the position that the correspondents are only trying to do the right thing in handling their jobs. It is probable that any move to catch sneak previews will result in the situation being taken out of the hands of the committee and being handled by the producers themselves.

DISNEY TO CLOSE SHOP IF STRIKE IS CALLED

Walt Disney in a wire to the National Labor Relations Board yesterday stated that if a strike is called at his studio and 'any violence whatsoever occurs' he will close the plant until an election of employes is held to select a bargaining representative. He urged a speedy hearing on the Screen Cartoonists Guild complaint, adding that he felt obligated to refuse the Guild recognition until the board had rendered its decision.

The wire sent to individual mem-

Hollywood Inside

APPEARANCE in the studios of the 'Hollywood Merry Go Round', a pamphlet signed by 'The Watchman' has caused quite a furore among executives of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes, as well as the 10,000 member-workers. IATSE tops and stooges have made every effort to learn the identity of the sponsors, but so far have been unsuccessful. One issue devoted considerable space to the asserted visits of Attorney Joseph A. Padway to the San Fernando ranch of Willie Bioff. The current issue dealt with the $100,000 loan of Willie, while others told of Pat Casey going east to contact tops in the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes, activities of Steve B. Newman, etc. It is understood the next issue will deal with the bill of particulars filed by the government in the income tax evasion charge against Bioff. Incidentally, publication of that bill of particulars has caused some of the IATSE regulars to rise up in arms. They are now openly declaring they were sold down the river, and many of the leaders are in favor of turning thumbs down on having the IA International handle any negotiations deals for them.

A NEW and admittedly novel method of peddling motion picture story material was introduced by Elliott Fisher last night in his home studio at 6118 Selma. Before an audience composed of talent representatives from Paramount, Darmour and other studios, Elliott presented 'Drums of Despair' in radio fashion, with sound effects, a cast of 14 and a group of singers in costume. Elliott believes his new method will give a studio an opportunity to see just what they are buying, instead of reading through six to eight pages of dry script and then taking a chance of getting a bargain. Representatives of General Foods and other national air sponsors were on hand to witness the presentation and agreed with studio representatives that Elliott's new sales idea had great possibilities.

CLIFFORD CLINTON, head of the vice crusading group in Los Angeles, has demanded a showing of 'Paper Bullets', which the Kozinsky Brothers will finish Saturday at Talisman. Clinton bases his request for the screening on the belief that one of the main characters in the film closely resembles him. Story has a Los Angeles background and deals with a vice crusader who builds himself up, through hot radio programs, to a point where he can run for Governor of California. Martin Mooney, who wrote radio blasts in opposition to those of Clinton during the Dockweiler-Fitts election campaign battle last year, dished up the yarn. Vice crusader in the film is operator of a cheap hotel.

FEUDS having served as a springboard to high radio Crossleys and eventual cinematic lure, J. Walter Thompson agency execs are trying to hop up a scrap between Edgar Bergen's Charlie McCarthy and Lou Costello on the Chase & Sanborn javaree. But it's no go with Costello, who insists on his own spot with his straight-man, Bud Abbott, on the Sunday show. Attempts to write in a feud have been consistently snubbed by Costello, although both the agency and sponsor are hot for the idea. Comics are committed to 13 weeks on the show. It was the feud between Bergen's dummy and W. C. Fields that blossomed into a feature picture.

RKO beat both Warners and 20th-Fox in the releasing deal for at least two pictures to be made by Samuel Goldwyn within a year's time by agreeing to guarantee the producer return of his negative costs on the production. This deal is similar to one given Walt Disney on all three of his features that RKO is handling, including the first 'Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs.' Understood that RKO will get around 24½% for distribution domestically and 27% foreign on the Goldwyn product, as a result of the deal which was negotiated with George Schaefer by Leo Spitz on behalf of Goldwyn.

By GEORGE E. PHAIR

A mist came down in Hollywood, but some would call it rain,
Some guys who view our tropic sun with truculent disdain.
But cowboys in their spurs and chaps and Easter-eggish shirts
Can walk along and croon a song and calmly answer 'Nertz'.
A buckaroo comes striding past our office habitat.
And totes a silk umbrella to protect his 10-quart hat.

Old William Penn, who stands on top of the City Hall in Philadelphia with his ten-quart beaver sombrero, probably has a lot of fun watching the cowboys galloping Hollywood's outfield, topped with similar skimmers. Old William never treked west of the Pennsylvania mountains but the boots-and-saddles boys who ventured beyond the Mississippi into the far prairies are still connected with Philadelphia by an economic link. That is where their ten-quart hats are made.

Norman Taurog went on a vegetable diet, on account of his doctor told him to. So he went to New York on a vacation and ate vegetables for four weeks and rode back on the train eating vegetables. So when he got back home he asked:

'What's for dinner?'

So you know the answer.

Speaking of diets, Richard Himber is always speaking about going on one, and continues to speak about it.

A roughneck, though born in a hovel,
May soar in the cloudlets above.
It once was 'The Man With the Shovel',
And now it is 'Accent On Love'.

Dorothy Lamour is figuring on a vacation when she finishes 'Aloma of the South Seas' and probably will spend it in Honolulu, to get away from it all.

Alexis Smith pitches a shutout game in her first speaking part in pictures. Alexis is the only femme in 'Dive Bomber.'

With all that high power flackery going on, 'Manpower' may be changed to 'Horsepower.'

Anyway, the Mediterranean situation is well in hand. Bing Crosby and Bob Hope are going on the 'Road to Morocco.'

Milton Berle informs us that he has one more week in 'Sun Valley', after which he will get himself defrosted.

Out yonder in the valley where the fields stretch far away,
You'd think the folks would build their homes with room to breathe and play,
To take a wise advantage of the spaces far and wide—
Instead, they build on dinky lots that nestle side by side.
With rows of crowded houses rubbing elbows as they meet,
They might as well be living on a teeming city street.

Major Barbara

(Comedy Drama)

United Artists release of a Gabriel Pascal production. Cast: Wendy Hiller, Rex Harrison, Robert Morley, Robert Newton, Emlyn Williams, Sybil Thorndike, Deborah Kerr, David Tree, Penelope Dudley-Ward, Marie Lohr, Walter Hudd, Marie Ault, Donald Calthrop, Miles Malleson. Produced and directed by Gabriel Pascal. Scenario and dialog by George Bernard Shaw. Music, William Walton. Production designed by Vincent Korda. Photography, Ronald Neame. Previewed April 30. Running time (without epilog by Bernard Shaw) 115 mins.; (with epilog) 122 mins.

'Major Barbara', one of George Bernard Shaw's old plays (1905) which the Irish playwright, in an epilog to the film, says he is sending to America just as we are sending Britain our old destroyers, is produced with meticulous regard for the letter as well as the spirit of that trenchant discussion of salvation. It had to be so produced because Shaw himself wrote the screen translation and the dialog, as well as dictating the making of it, so that there was no chance of its going off the rails.

For the cultivated trade, surely, it offers delightful and thoughtful diversion and may be expected to follow closely the precedential business set in the class houses by Shaw's 'Pygmalion', released in 1938. As a prestige offering it will grace the United Artists program for the season. Quality of the performances, paced by Wendy Hiller, Rex Harrison, Robert Morley, Robert Newton, rates exceptionally high and reflects careful casting and individual response right down to the smallest bit. What the picture will do as it gets away from the metropolitan first runs is problematical. In substance and treatment 'Major Barbara' is addressed to audiences having capacity for intellectual enjoyment. Full relish of its Shavian humor and irony is dependent to considerable extent upon at least a reading familiarity with the British character and the London types depicted, particularly the Cockney. The Cockney dialect gets pretty idiomatic and slurred at times, and by that same token all the more hilariously amusing to those who are familiar with it.

The play has to do with the state of soul, and the conflicting viewpoints — personal, moral, national and philosophical—of a millionaire munitions maker; his daughter, a Salvation Army major (whence the title), and her suitor, a young scholar in Greek, who get themselves involved with other more or less free roving souls of upper and nether class Britons, all popping off vehement ideas on personal privilege, war, religion and codes of conduct, together with a modicum of romantic love. All this is of course arranged and stressed according to the Shaw no surprise. For some time minority interests in both AGVA and the AAAA's have tried to grab control of the local. Three times this minority tried to oust me but could not get a majority vote of the board, much less the membership. Finding themselves unable to oust me legally, they conceived this so-called petition, signed by non-board members and members who have not attended board meetings in three months. I am willing to leave the results of my efforts to aid AGVA in the hands of the active board members and the membership, for whom all of my efforts have been devoted since I was appointed executive secretary.'

THOMSON TAKES CHARGE OF LA'S AGVA LOCAL

In taking over the local, Thomson stated:

'Those in the best position to judge, the members of the local AGVA board, have decided that a reorganization is necessary. At their request, I am functioning, in effect as a trustee working under authority of the Associated Actors and Artistes of America, the national AGVA board and the local AGVA board.'

In a resolution adopted today at a joint meeting of the AGVA national executive committee and the executive committee of the AAAA in New York, authority was again vested in Thomson, as previously delegated Dec. 31, 1940, to handle affairs of variety actors in the Los Angeles area. Thomson agreed to move in yesterday, after a majority of the local AGVA board had requested that he take charge and reorganize the personnel in an effort to eliminate 'inefficiency of the present administration and leadership'.

Thomson is expected to take personal charge of the negotiations now in progress with agents on a proposed licensing program, similar to the current pact between the SAG and the Artists Managers Guild. He also will make a check on the recent wage increases put into effect by the local AGVA. No further changes in office personnel are contemplated until Thomson has had an opportunity to study the ability of the various individuals.

Studio Blurb Heads Plan Motion Picture Day Tuesday (6)

The Studio Publicity Directors Committee, under the chairmanship of John Joseph, is arranging plans for the first Motion Picture Day in the history of the Advertising Club of Los Angeles, to be held Tuesday (6) at the Biltmore hotel. The industry will be represented by Committee members, company executives and stars.

John LeRoy Johnston, publicity director for Walter Wanger, was named sub-chairman in charge of plans for the forthcoming Variety Clubs of America convention.

Robert Taplinger, sub-chairman of the trailer division of the Motion Picture Production Defense Committee, reported on the work now being done in Hollywood in connection with the Treasury Department Defense bond issue. The Treasury Department's Motion Picture Division is headed by Howard Dietz. One of plans now under consideration calls for production of a trailer showing the cooperation of the various film unions in the drive to put over the bond issue. The union trailer proposal, recommended by Herbert Sorrell and J. K. Wallace, will be taken up as soon as Frank Whitbeck returns.

up to unless the shorts are produced under strictly newsreel circumstances.

The letter received by Columbia executives stated:

'The Screen Actors Guild has for some time countenanced the appearance of stars and featured players in short subjects such as yours on the theory that actors are agreeable to doing such work without pay for the publicity value that they receive.

'However, so many companies have started the production of similar reels and so many complications have arisen concerning the use of Guild members in such reels that the Screen Actors Guild must hereby notify you that in the future it will have to enforce its contract more strictly in connection with these pictures. That is to say, you will be required to pay at least the minimum scale provided for in the Basic Contract for anyone whom you use, and all conditions relative to the employment contained in the contract shall apply with the following exceptions:

'1. You may photograph non-Guild member personalities without regard to the contract.

'2. You may photograph non-Guild professional people without regard to the contract.

'3. You may photograph without compensation stars and featured players under newsreel circumstances as distinguished from production circumstances.'

The latter is understood to call for mere casual shots, without dress or makeup and without story continuity, similar to those often seen in newsreel shots. The letters stated the producers might complete any pictures now in production, but that the use of free talent was out in the future.

It is understood that similar letters were sent to Pathe, Republic, Cinema Celebrities and Sunshine Productions, all of whom have been releasing such short subjects. Sunshine, however, recently signed a SAG agreement. Ralph Staub, Hedda Hopper and others have produced shorts such as those turned out by Harriet Parsons, who recently has been releasing through Republic.

BUT THE GATES WERE Closed!

"How could a major motion picture company hand over such a sum of money to a young, untried producer without knowing exactly what kind of a story he was going to make?"

"Orson Welles has engaged a secretary in New York to mail him com strips every day."

'It was not a good effort for RKO or ness to give a young fellow who had never seen the inside of a studio, who had never directed or acted in a picture nor had anything whatever to do with picture production, the leeway in a contract that was given Mr. Welles . . . So far they have never uncovered a genius capable of writing, directing, acting and producing a picture; contributing all those necessary picture ingredients at the same time. Everyone else in the picture business knew it—it can't be done. . ."

ng had an outline of the story given to me, I would say (understand this is only a personal opinion) that this production is one the producer would be smart to wrap up in mothballs and file far away in a dark closet, perhaps for future reference, but never for distribution."

"Orson Welles is 25 years old tomorrow and comes into an inheritance. Uncle Sam gets most of it for taxes. Well, the boy wonder needn't worry too much since he almost inherited RKO in salary checks without making a single picture there."

"Now the wise boys are saying Orson Welles double-crossed them because he's actually going into production in two weeks, and the wise ones bet money he'd never make a picture. So, good, bad or indifferent, Little Orson Annie will still take the rap."

"Ha! They're saying Orson Welles has increased his production schedule. Instead of not making three pics for RKO, he'll not make five!"

"Orson Welles, celebrating his 25th birthday, made a resolution to produce that picture if it takes him another 25 years."

"Orson Welles, the boy wonder who was expected to revolutionize the whole movie-making map, is still around town and still waiting for the right story."

'RKO has a lot of money at stake which must be accounted for to the stockholders. The judgment of its executives can be questioned if, as a result of signing an unproven man as writer, producer, director and actor, to make a picture without supervision, the investment has to be written off."

"Orson Welles, man of tomorrow! Mr. Welles, resentful of quips about his stationary, non-progress in picture making, points with pride to the fact that the wig he'll wear in his first production is finished already—and he's been in Hollywood only one year."

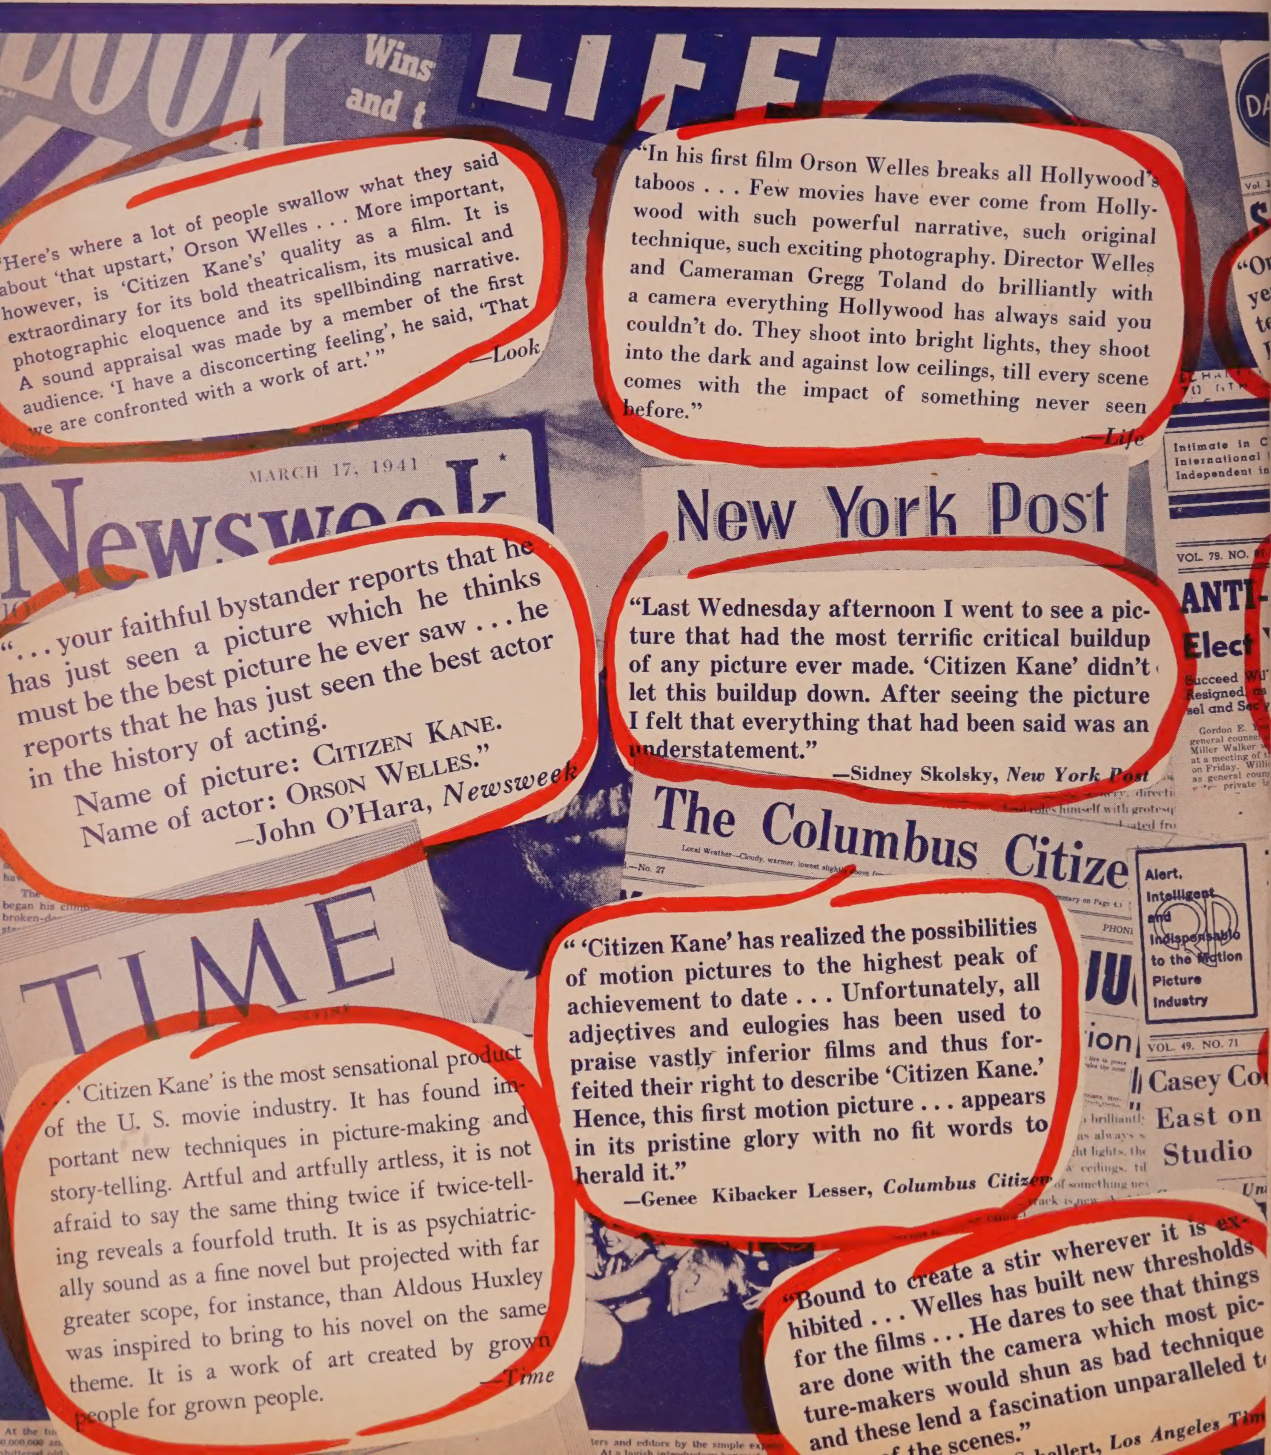
"Orson Welles confers with himself in a three-way mirror, as actor, director and producer. The actor wants something, producer says budget won't stand it, director sees it another way. So it goes, with Little Orson Annie fighting himself."

"Orson Welles was chic in a silver fox bear trimmed with old RKO scripts."

"Do you remember way back when a chap from the Mercury Theatre named Orson Welles, was going to make a picture?"

" 'Tis said Orson Welles was so sophisticated that even at the age of 2 he had cuffs on his diapers."

CAME THE PREVIEW...
THE VERDICT



'Here's where a lot of people swallow what they said about 'that upstart,' Orson Welles . . . More important, however, is 'Citizen Kane's' quality as a film. It is extraordinary for its bold theatricalism, its musical and photographic eloquence and its spellbinding narrative. A sound appraisal was made by a member of the first audience. 'I have a disconcerting feeling', he said, 'That we are confronted with a work of art.' "

—Look

"In his first film Orson Welles breaks all Hollywood's taboos . . . Few movies have ever come from Hollywood with such powerful narrative, such original technique, such exciting photography. Director Welles and Cameraman Gregg Toland do brilliantly with a camera everything Hollywood has always said you couldn't do. They shoot into bright lights, they shoot into the dark and against low ceilings, till every scene comes with the impact of something never seen before."

—Life

"... your faithful bystander reports that he has just seen a picture which he thinks must be the best picture he ever saw ... he reports that he has just seen the best actor in the history of acting.

Name of picture: CITIZEN KANE.

Name of actor: ORSON WELLES."

—John O'Hara, Newsweek

"Last Wednesday afternoon I went to see a picture that had the most terrific critical buildup of any picture ever made. 'Citizen Kane' didn't let this buildup down. After seeing the picture I felt that everything that had been said was an understatement."

—Sidney Skolsky, New York Post

. 'Citizen Kane' is the most sensational product of the U. S. movie industry. It has found important new techniques in picture-making and story-telling. Artful and artfully artless, it is not afraid to say the same thing twice if twice-telling reveals a fourfold truth. It is as psychiatrically sound as a fine novel but projected with far greater scope, for instance, than Aldous Huxley was inspired to bring to his novel on the same theme. It is a work of art created by grown people for grown people.

—Time

" 'Citizen Kane' has realized the possibilities of motion pictures to the highest peak of achievement to date . . . Unfortunately, all adjectives and eulogies has been used to praise vastly inferior films and thus forfeited their right to describe 'Citizen Kane.' Hence, this first motion picture . . . appears in its pristine glory with no fit words to herald it."

—Genee Kibacker Lesser, Columbus Citizen

"Bound to create a stir wherever it is exhibited . . . Welles has built new thresholds for the films . . . He dares to see that things are done with the camera which most picture-makers would shun as bad technique and these lend a fascination unparalleled t f the scenes."

—Hollywood Variety

" 'Citizen Kane' is a great motion picture. Great in that it was produced by a man who had never had any motion picture experience; great because he cast it with people who had never faced a camera in a motion picture production before; great in the manner of its story-telling, in both the writing of that story and its unfolding before a camera; great in that its photographic accomplishments are the highlights of motion picture photography to date, and finally great, because technically, it is a few steps ahead of anything that has been made in pictures before."

—Hollywood Reporter

"A 22-carat artistic achievement, highly exploitable, is screen event of the first magnitude . . . Marked by impressive departures in technique, an absorbing dramatic story, an array of brilliant characterizations, opulent production values, outstanding photography, and by the deserved personal triumph of Orson Welles."

—Film Daily

"Here is vibrant screen fare . . . has a fascination that will hold . . . A 'super effort' . . . To theatre men we say, 'see this picture'! To those who play it there is the plain duty to themselves to give it every ounce of showmanship they possess in exploiting its extraordinary box office potentialities."

—Chick Lewis, Showmen's Trade Review

"An intensely interesting, technically unique and novel production . . . Performances are of the finest."

—Motion Picture Daily

"Orson Welles made a dent in the slick, shiny surfaces of Hollywood yesterday, a dent so deep that only a new form can keep it from looking a little shoddy in the future. For he showed up his competitors at a press preview of his 'Citizen Kane.' . . . He has done a prodigious job exceedingly well . . . The picture is unique. What's more important, it's vastly entertaining."

—Virginia Wrigh

"Hollywood, April 10—The picture that never would b made is what Hollywood called Orson Welles' 'Citizen Kane,' but 600 critics voiced almost unanimous compliments at its preview last night. In addition to acting its chief role, Welles wrote and directed the piece and produced it. Hollywood said no man could do all that."

THANK YOU, Orson Welles!

IS A VERY FINE PRODUCTION, THE RESULT OF GREAT INITIATIVE AND COURAGE, ESPECIALLY UNDER THE MOST TRYING OF CIRCUMSTANCES.

The essence of show business is to present the new, the novel and the unusual to the public.

You were not given the chance to present your ideas, but were severely criticized for daring even to have an idea!

You were condemned before being tried!

Your triumph is one of the great accomplishments in motion picture history, and proof that America is still the land of opportunity, where there will always be room for those with dreams and courage to bring them to reality.

bers of the NLRB in Washington follows:

'I respectfully request your board to authorize a hearing in this case as speedily as possible in order that the question of representation can be determined without delay. The Screen Cartoonists Guild, American Federation of Labor, is demanding immediate recognition by this company as sole collective bargaining agent, although the Federation of Screen Cartoonists is the board's certified bargaining agent.

'I feel legally and morally obligated to refuse such recognition until your board has rendered its decision in the pending case, and an NLRB election has been held by secret ballot in which my employes can choose their own collective bargaining agent. The Guild is now threatening a strike and secondary boycott and has declared itself unwilling to wait for the board's decision.

in New York, authority was again ves any violence whatsoever occurs I will be forced to close my plant awaiting the outcome of the board's decision, thereby holding up work on pictures now in production. May I again urge the board to order an immediate hearing.'

SCG officials and AFofL tops said they too would welcome a speedy hearing on the pending petition. They added, however, that an election would not even be necessary if the board sustains their allegation that the Federation is a 'company-dominated union'. If the board should so find it would issue an order for the Federation to disband and for Disney to cease dealing with it, such as was done in the Screen Playwrights case.

AFofL tops planned to meet over the weekend to discuss the Disney situation and to plan any future moves in their drive to unionize the studio. The SCG claims to represent a majority of the workers, and William Walsh, acting regional director of the NLRB, stated following a hearing that the evidence conclusively indicated the Federation was a 'company-dominated union'. He has forwarded the case to Washington with a recommendation that a complaint be issued charging the Disney company with unfair labor practices.

Schenck, Moskowitz Win Freedom On Appeals

New York, April 30.—Joseph M. Schenck and Joe Moskowitz today won their freedom during appeal period following an eloquent plea by former Judge Joseph Proskauer who argued for an hour and a half before Judge Grover Moscowitz, who last week sentenced 20th-Fox chairman and his eastern representative on Federal income tax evasion charges.

They will remain at liberty during time that the U. S. Circuit Court of Appeal is deciding whether conviction is to be upheld or reversed.

Proskauer, taking over legal defense for Schenck, said in court that there were six errors in Judge Moscowitz's charge to the jury which should result in a reversal of the conviction.

U. S. Attorney Mathias Correa attempted to oppose bail for the executives, but court, while stating it felt justice had been done and men were considered guilty, agreed to bail. Schenck and Moskowitz must post bond of $20,000. Former bail was $1,500.

Court ordered matters expedited and counsel agreed to have the record ready for the Circuit court by May 22. Both sides agreed that it is improbable the Circuit court will hear the case before October or November.

Proskauer's arguments, based on charge of court covering 1937 income tax returns, in which Judge Moscowitz stated that overpayment of tax does not excuse criminal attempt, were to the effect that this is incorrect law. Proskauer also took issue with the court charge that deductions cannot be estimated, stating that he deducts business and pleasure expenses by estimate. Proskauer further charged incorrect procedure in failure of court to define 'legitimate sale' and leaving it to the jury to ponder over legal interpretation of legitimacy, failure of the court to tell the jury that if stock sold to Roland West and William Goetz was worthless then Schenck could have deducted the entire amount; failure of court to tell the jury it could absolve defendants on character testimony alone and failure to stress importance of that testimony. Lastly, Proskauer charged that the court convicted both men when, at midnight, he charged jury to take into consideration failure of either side to call available witnesses, since this followed on heels of Correa's smashing at defense for failure to call West and Lou Anger.

Proskauer will work together with Harold Corbin and latter's office on the case, but will present argument to the Circuit court himself.

Uncensored Film Yanked in Philly On Nazi Angle

Philadelphia, April 30. — Mrs. Edna Carroll, chairman of the State Board of Motion Picture Censors, yanked two officials of the Kyffhauser Bund on the carpet last week for showing an uncensored film before an audience that hissed views of the Statue of Liberty and cheered the Nazis.

Bund, an organization of German war veterans, was accused of violating state censorship regulations by showing uncensored films of the Nazi conquest of Norway. Officials Peter Krecklmann, manager of the North German Lloyd office here, and Carl P. Berger declared that the films were newsreels and, as such didn't require censors' approval.

Mrs. Carroll warned that all foreign films are censorable and declared that future violations of the state laws would be rigorously prosecuted even if the showings are confined to private gatherings.

Alien squad detectives reported the hissing of Statue of Liberty scenes. Mrs. Carroll is remembered for banning the March of Time's Nazi propaganda clip, 'Baptism of Fire' from 'Ramparts We Watch', with Board later okaying picture after objectionable material was scissored.

WAGE-HOUR DIVISION STAYS CLASSIFICATIONS

months to determine if the companies are complying. Unless specific cases of evasion are discovered, it is reported no move will be made by the Administration to enforce payment of back pay since the Wage-Hour Law became effective.

Such action, however, would not preclude the unions or individual workers from collecting retroactive pay through economic pressure or legal action. Unless the various unions could get together, however, and pressure the companies into paying off, the unions would have to bring suit on behalf of their memberships or the workers would have to file individual court actions.

It is understood the Wage-Hour Division takes the position that with the Producers and union clamoring for classifications of the workers during the past year or so, it would not be becoming for the government to arbitrarily penalize either side, since it was the fault of neither that the government was unable to clear up the situation until the present time. Then, too, it is understood the Division feels that by merely handing down the classifications it would not be taking away any of the rights of the workers to seek retroactive pay where they fell within the proper classifications.

Several of the companies are understood to have set aside contingent funds in anticipation of a move by the workers to collect back pay when the final classifications are announced. Some of them passed out notices that adjustments in pay would be made later if the Wage-Hour classifications called for it.

Hundreds of the workers are said to have already 'spent' their back pay, and there is certain to be a rush to collect when the classifications are announced.

The final classifications are expected to be handed down next week by General Philip Fleming, Wage-Hour Administrator. Recommendations on disputed classifications have already been submitted by Merle D. Vincent, chief of the hearings branch, who conducted the film hearings here.

pattern of delightful humor and tonic irony.

Wendy Hiller brings the poise of the socialite and the zeal of the Salvation Army recruit from an earl's house, as her role calls for, into rich blended performance. Through the paternal part played with great humor by Robert Morley, the playwright freely speaks his mind and his provocative challenges. Rex Harrison as the Greek scholar and impetuous wooer of the Army lass contributes a dominant part. Robert Newton's ruthless Cockney, who has a strange remnant of pride and who gradually succumbs to 'Barbara's campaign of salvation, is one of the most vivid and skillfully drawn characters ever projected in an English picture. Fine also are Emlyn Williams, Sybil Thorndike, Deborah Kerr, Penelope Dudley-Ward, Marie Lohr, Marie Ault, Donald Calthrop.

Because of the nature of its discussions and the present state of nations, the film will have an enhanced interest and intensity for American audiences. Shaw has adroitly fitted new lines into his old play to beget a special timeliness, although his plays generally manage to preserve unimpaired depth and timelessness across the years. The state of present warfare is not suggested or implied, except through the symbolic pictorial elements of the munitions factory in full speed production. The picture, however, actually was made in the Denham studios near London under full blast and interruptions of the bomber assaults and the requirements of defense taken care of by the actors between scenes.

Gabriel Pascal directs with a smooth flow of action to beguile the attention while the often long speeches are being uttered, and the fine characterizations provide counter attraction in many places where the play threatens to get too talky. Production is smart and well mounted. Vincent Korda does a distinguished job of production design.

Shaw's five-minute epilog after dramatic scenes finish is a characteristic talk to the American public in which he pleads for a unity of interest by the American and English people in the present world crisis.

U.S. Points Unconstitutionality Of Minnesota Film Law

New York, May 1.—The Department of Justice believes the Minnesota anti-government consent decree law, as enacted last week, is unconstitutional on two points. These are that it violates both the interstate commerce and the 'due process' laws. The latter refers to a constitutional amendment not allowing a man to be deprived of life, liberty and property without due process of law, and in compelling producer-distributors to sell an entire program and grant exhibitors a 20% cancellation.

PAR'S PROFIT SET AT $2,475,000

New York, May 1.—Paramount today estimated at $2,475,000 its earnings for the first quarter ended April 5, after all charges and including $650,000, company's net interest in combining undistributed earnings of partially owned, non-consolidated subsidiaries. This compares with $1,606,000 in the corresponding quarter of last year, and is equivalent to 89c on common stock, compared with 53c for the first quarter of 1940. During the quarter the corporation acquired 6,700 shares of first preferred stock at a discount of approximately $8,400; also 770 shares of second preferred were converted into 693 shares of common.

Hollywood Inside

HOLLYWOOD correspondents started an all out drive against Jock Lawrence Studio Publicity Directors Committee last night by descending on Huntington Park to catch a sneak preview of Columbia's 'Adventure in Washington' at Warners theatre. More than a dozen Hollywood columnists and news writers stepped up to the boxoffice and planked down the price of admission like any ordinary theatre patron. It was not until the show was over and the crowd began to move out that Columbia executives got wise that their picture was being previewed by more than a dozen writers representing publications throughout the country. Harry Cohn and Charles Rogers were mingling with the crowd to get their reaction to the picture when they spotted writer after writer filing through the doors. The correspondents refused to state how they learned the preview was scheduled but insisted there would be 'honest reviews, with no cheating.' The writers stated they have tried in every way possible to iron out the situation with the Jock Lawrence group, but had received nothing but empty promises. They said that in justification of their publication they decided it was necessary to cover all pictures possible although they would much prefer to reach an amicable agreement with the Producers. 'Adventure in Washington' was directed by Alfred E. Green and presents Herbert Marshall and Virginia Bruce, with Gene Reynolds, Samuel S. Hinds, Ralph Morgan, Vaughn Glaser, Charles Smith and Dickie Jones. It was reported that the Jock Lawrence committee was in session shortly before the correspondents decided to 'catch the sneak', but Chairman John Joseph could not be reached for a statement.

HAYS office in handling the preview situation has made it very difficult for non-members to show their pictures to the press. Every time the indies call the Hays office and inform it they want to show a picture to the press in studio or outside, are informed that no available showing dates can be had for two or three weeks in advance. When the indie studios contact exhibs direct and get a date for the showing, especially with the circuit houses, latter are reminded by the Hays office that there is agreement for no previews in the area. Result is that though indies want to show their pictures to the press in advance they have been compelled to release the films in various parts of the country ahead of showing them first to the Hollywood newspaper contingent, which they would prefer to do for value of advance publicity they might get on good pictures. One of the indie organizations which claims it has been stymied in previewing pictures is understood to be heading toward the Post Office Building to talk to one of Uncle Sam's representatives as to legality of the tight reins that the Hays office minions are trying to hold over non-organization producers.

NEW peace pact between Mutual Broadcasting System and Ascap is expected materially to benefit returns on four 20th-Fox musicals which have recently been released or are about to be. Inability to use tunes from these pictures over the airlanes has handicapped exploitation of tuners, and 20th-Fox has been using everything from trick trailers to loudspeakers on trucks to plug the musical numbers. Results were regarded as none too forte, and returns on both 'Down Argentine Way' and 'That Night In Rio' are regarded as having been below what they would have been with wider air plugging. For 'Rio' company believes it can still pick up a good deal because it's still in first run in many spots. Peace pact also is expected to benefit 'The Great American Broadcast', recently completed, and 'Sun Valley Serenade', now being made. Mutual Broadcasting is believed to be more receptive to songs from these four and other films because motion picture song writers, presumably, have worked more diligently during the Ascap-BMI battle than have tunesmiths who lost major section of their market when works no longer were usable on the air.

DESPITE a fire that destroyed a portion of the company's phonograph record warehouse, RCA Manufacturing Co. will not suffer any loss of time on picture or phonograph recording or record manufacturing, it was stated yesterday by a company's spokesman. No loss in the productive capacity of the plant was sustained by the blaze which swept the adjoining warehouse building, and all employes are working on schedule. Total damage to warehouse will run about $100,000.

STAR of a recently released picture is due for a surprise when he finds out he is helping pay the salary of a free lance press agent who is handling some outside exploitation on the film. Star has thought all along that flack was hired by the studio to take care of some special work when p.a. was really put on the payroll by the player's agent, who plans to charge off the salary from the picture's profits, which means star's returns on the film will be nicked proportionately.

Her golden tresses stirred his soul

Film Previews

Her First Beau

(Comedy Drama)

Columbia production. Stars Jane Withers and Jackie Cooper. Features Edith Fellows, Josephine Hutchinson, William Tracy, Martha O'Driscoll, Edgar Buchanan, Una O'Connor, Jonathan Hale, Kenneth Howell, Addison Richards. Director, Theodore Reed. Producer, B. B. Kahane. Screenplay, Gladys Lehman and Karen DeWolf. Story, Florence Ryerson and Colin Clements. Photography, George Meehan. Film editor, Charles Nelson. Art director, Lionel Banks. Musical director, M. W. Stoloff. Assistant director, Abby Berlin. Sound engineer, Lodge Cunningham. Previewed at the Alexander, Glendale, May 1. Running time: 77 mins.

'Her First Beau' is undoubtedly the most beguiling, heart-warming and humanly interesting story given Jane Withers in a long time. Full of neighborly touches, the story holds its best appeal because of its very familiarity and is so well played, written and directed that it seems to be a slice taken right out of the lives of the folks next door. Its two stars, Miss Withers and Jackie Cooper; the director, Theodore Reed; the producer, B. B. Kahane, and all of the cast register solidly with their work, making this Columbia feature one that will well-nigh please any and all audiences.

The story's engrossing theme deals with two families in a medium-sized town, one with a daughter just 15, and the other with a son, just 16. There is the big party and a girl's first sophisticated evening dress, greeted with awed jeers by her playmates and ridiculing scorn by a suave youth she is trying to captivate. There is the suspense of a forbidden night flight over a dangerous lake by her chum next door in his untried sail plane. And many other ingratiating interpretations of teen-aged humor and pathos, skillfully polished by the script writing of Gladys Lehman and Karen DeWolf from the story by Florence Ryerson and Colin Clements.

Miss Withers dons long dresses and grown-up hair-do with all the hopeful significance this act has for girls. Her performance strikes home in every phase. Jackie Cooper is easy and natural as the boy next door and completely complements Miss Withers' work with an equally important assignment.

Edith Fellows is the perfect little romantist. Josephine Hutchinson is the ideal, understanding mother of Miss Withers. William Tracy, Martha O'Driscoll and Kenneth Howell are a swell bunch of young, slang-slinging would-be sophisticates. Edgar Buchanan and Una O'Connor, as handyman and maid, respectively, are excellent. Jonathan Hale and Addison Richards, the fathers, capably hold their own among the youthful group.

Theodore Reed captures fully the mood and flavor of juvenile doings in his direction and carefully prevents over-exuberance in the young cast members. B. B. Cahane's production is soundly valued in all departments. George Meehan's photography and other assignments in the technical ends are first-rate.

Roland Drew's 'Blues'

Roland Drew yesterday was cast in Warners 'Navy Blues', his second role in two days. He went into 'Bullets for O'Hara' on Tuesday.

Meet Boston Blackie

(Melodrama)

Columbia production. Features Chester Morris and Rochelle Hudson. Supporting cast: Richard Lane, Charles Wagenheim, Constance Worth, Jack O'Malley, George Magrill, Michael Rand. Directed by Robert Florey. Assistant director, Milton Carter. Story and screenplay by Jay Dratler, based on character created by Jack Boyle. Photography, Franz F. Planer. Film editor, James Sweeney. Previewed May 1. Running time: 61 mins.

Jack Boyle's fictional character, 'Boston Blackie', transplanted to the screen as an amiable, two-fisted gentleman jewel thief, will likely prove acceptable among the not too discriminating clientele that dotes on the chase, the gun fight and the happy finale. It packs a few thrills, has been neatly mounted and well acted.

Chester Morris fills the bill nicely in the title role. He's a personable U. S. version of 'Raffles', though his safe-cracking proclivities are only referred to in the past tense in this stanza. In the first of what is reported to be scheduled as a series, 'Blackie' becomes embroiled in an espionage murder-mystery. Rochelle Hudson handles assignment as Morris' partner in adventure capably and has been given attractive treatment by Cameraman Franz F. Planer.

Some of the early sequences are too talky, but Jay Dratler's yarn swings into high as action progresses with Robert Florey piloting deftly to overcome the slow spots.

Arriving in America after a long absence, 'Blackie' and his Man Friday, played by Charles Wagenheim, are greeted by Inspector Faraday who has a few questions to ask about a jewel robbery. Meantime 'Blackie' has already made acquaintance of mystery woman Marilyn Howard (Constance Worth), finds a murdered man in his stateroom aboard ship, and is obliged to break his word to the inspector and escape in an effort to prove his innocence.

Pursued alternately by the inspector and a couple of knife-throwing conspirators, 'Blackie' also becomes a suspect in the killing of mystery woman Marilyn Howard. Much of the action takes place in amusement fairgrounds on sandy shores of Coney Island, where a 'Mechanical Man' act figures as the key to the riddle. Evil-doers are nabbed with a stolen U. S. bomb sight in their possession, and 'Blackie' is left free to resume his adventures.

Suspense is well sustained throughout the auto and Coney Island pursuit sequences. Constance Worth, as the femme counter-espionage agent, registers photographically, but is dispatched early in line with story requirements. Richard Lane, as the inspector with a soft spot for 'Blackie'; Charles Wagenheim, as the yegg's assistant; Michael Rand, as the enemy spy ringleader, provide adequate support in subordinate roles.

Comedy relief, where attempted, shoots wide of the mark, and added attention could profitably be devoted to this department if 'Boston Blackie' as a series is to become firmly entrenched.

John Nesbitt is on new term contract as commentator at Metro, to continue his series of short subjects.

Fox-West Coast Files Writs in Arbiter Setup Here

Fox West Coast Theatres has intervened in two of the three independent exhibitor suits filed for arbitration with the Los Angeles branch of the American Arbitration Association. Although circuit is not named as a defendant in any of the actions so far instituted, the clearance asked in at least two of the cases infringe on F-WC operations, and it is in order to protect these interests that the intervention has been filed.

In the complaint of O. W. Lewis, of the Mission Playhouse at San Gabriel, who seeks a reclassification of clearance in that area, Fox West Coast, because of its Pasadena and Alhambra operations, feels that it is vitally affected. Lewis asks that San Gabriel be designated to play 28 days after Pasadena, but this is objected to by F-WC, as the Pasadena first run box office price is 50c, whereas the Mission is operated at a 28c top. House presently plays 21 days after Alhambra first run closing. Lewis wants to play product directly after Pasadena (28 days) but is not inclined to boost his box office tariff, although he has that privilege, and at 35c would be enabled to play films at 28 days.

In the complaint of A. L. Sanborn and James Rennie, covering the El Monte theatre in El Monte, complainant wants a 14-day clearance over Pasadena at 30c. He has the right to go to 35c, which would automatically enable him to get the 14-day clearance.

UNIONS DEMAND BACK PAY

cal 695 and chairman of the Business Representatives Committee of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes Studio Unions, was drafting a call for heads of the various unions to meet to discuss united action. Union tops stated that while the final classifications had not been announced by the Wage-Hour Division in Washington, reports indicated the Division would not go behind its classifications, leaving it to the workers to collect through economic action or by instituting court suits.

Several union leaders said the only way the workers would be able to collect back pay would be through united action of all the unions when they opened negotiations with the Producers on contract revisions. They stated that several studios had passed out slips promising to make wage adjustments where the pay was affected by the Wage-Hour classifications, but added that none of the companies were going to pass out any money unless they were forced to do so.

It was reported from Washington that the Wage-Hour Division would follow the same procedure as in other industries, fixing the classifications as of a certain date and not applying any penalties unless there were specific cases of evasion by the employers. It was pointed out that the Producers had been requesting for two years that the classifications be fixed.

Ascap Music Back on Mutual Net May 10; 3% Blanket Deal

proval within 48 hours. Such a ratio would automatically ratify the new Ascap contract.

In a telephone conference call yesterday across the country, with all station owners or managers on the line for half an hour, W. E. MacFarlane, Mutual president, outlined terms of the licensing contract worked out with the Society. This was followed up with a mailing of the complete agreement to all member stations. They have been asked either to okay or reject the new deal and make their recommendations on the blanket form or per program basis of payment. Weiss said he was certain the plan would be roundly approved and that all stations would favor the blanket payment proposal due to the extensive bookkeeping required for payment by the program.

New licensing deal worked out by Mutual with Ascap calls for 3% of the net billing, as against 5% on the last contract. Percentage applies on the first four years of the nine-year pact, with the payoff to be increased to 3½% on the last five years. Weiss said this settlement figure would entail a saving of 40% to Mutual members over what formerly was paid. Spokesmen for Ascap declare that the volume of monies received would be greater, considering that payment will be made at the source. Also figuring in the increased income, according to Ascapers, will be payment by the networks, heretofore not participating in the music payoff.

Proposal by Weiss in the negotiations on sustaining fee for stations is incorporated in the licensing instrument. It calls for one time the network's hour rate per month.

It was indicated yesterday that 'outside pressure' was being exerted on some of the chain's stations to stall off actual signing until after the National Assn. of Broadcasters convention in St. Louis, starting (12).

Weiss characterized the new Ascap deal as fair and equitable, insuring an equal distribution over the industry in ratio to its income.

fast finish of the season by August.

Upswing in production will assume large proportions when it comes, because Republic wants to get a head start on its 1941-42 program of 32 features, 30 westerns and four serials. This total of 66 pictures is the largest ever planned in Republic's history.

So far 45 features have been finished for this season, of which 23 are westerns. There are 13 more to be completed for delivery before Aug. 11. Of these, 'Puddin' Head', with Judy Canova; 'Nevada City', with Roy Rogers and Gabby Hayes, and 'Jungle Girl', the last serial of the year, are currently shooting.

Those to be finished for this year include 'Under Fiesta Stars', 'Old Faithful' and 'Down Mexico Way', for Gene Autry and Smiley Burnette; 'Outcasts of Poker Flat', for Rogers and Hayes; 'Milkman's Matinee', from the radio program of that name; 'Kansas Cyclone', for Don Barry; 'Gauchos of Eldorado', for the Three Mesquiteers; 'Ice-capades of 1941', 'From Rags To Riches', 'Doctors Don't Tell' and 'Ten Nights In a Barroom'. 'Ice-capades' will be a de luxe feature, as is 'Puddin Head'. 'Down Mexico Way' will be last of the studio's premiere features this season for Autry.

Obituary

HOWARD JOHNSON

Howard Johnson, 53, veteran songwriter who contributed the lyrics of some of the outstanding tunes of 25 years ago, died suddenly yesterday in New York. His greatest success was 'M-O-T-H-E-R', although his lyrics for the musical comedy, 'Tangerine', which starred Frank Crumit and Julia Sanderson, won him wide acclaim. He wrote many tunes that were popular in the last war and listed among his other hits 'Moon Comes Over the Mountain', 'Georgia', 'Hello Aloha', 'Ireland Must Be Heaven' and scores of others. During the early days of musicals he spent a year at Metro writing ditties. His widow survives. Burial will be in Torrington, Conn.

He was a native of Dallas Tex., and formerly was circulation manager of Hearst's American Weekly. He was considered an authority on California state history and had written several books. His widow, two sons and five daughters survive. The body will be brought to Hollister for interment.

STUDY FRENCH EDICT

New York, May 1.—Foreign managers of major companies huddled at the Hays office today and took steps to obtain a clearer conception of a new edict by the Vichy government in the occupied area of France. Preliminary report is that the Vichy government is taking over any debts owed to foreign companies in that area, with the ruling supposedly effective today. Jock Whitney was supposed to outline a program on solidification of hemispheric solidarity but failed to make an appearance.

law is confiscatory. The department has been consulted unofficially by the majors on what to do about it, but feels that outside of the jurisdictional question it is a distributor problem.

Should the majors bring a suit to test the validity of the law the government will join the action, probably in the capacity of amicus curiae (friend of the court). In order to meet the present problem the department is prepared to go into Federal court and modify the decree to enable distributors to comply with the Minnesota law.

Government will modify the decree to take care of any state law along the same lines. So far it has received numerous complaints from exhibitors that major companies are violating the decree by theatre expansion. However, the United States is hampered by Sec. 2 of the decree which says it cannot attack threatened expansion, and would have to prove that theatre acquisitions were not necessary for the protection of present interests of the majors. The department is considering what to do about the complaints, but has not yet made up its mind.

The government is not laying down on the job of prosecuting little suits because of a desire to lay off the film industry due to the national crisis. The picture industry is important, but not essential to defense, and pending suits will be pushed.

Showdown Gets Gals More Coin With Chorus Work

Femme dancers and chorines in the Screen Actors Guild are demanding and getting $11 per day straight for studio calls, regardless of whether they are guaranteed a week's work. The former practice was to pay them $11 per day for solo calls, and to put them on salary at $50 to $55 when they were employed for a week.

The first showdown came at Columbia, when dancing girls and chorines on the Fred Astaire picture, 'You'll Never Get Rich', demanded $11 a day. The girls stopped work long enough to explain the difficulties of their routine, etc. Studio executives agreed, and the girls were guaranteed $11 per.

The next move came at Metro, where the girls were working on a Bus Berkeley musical. They pointed out the dancers were required to do a ballet routine, tap, etc., and argued the job was worth $11 straight, regardless of how long they were employed. A SAG checker joined the parley, and again the girls won. It finally was agreed they would be paid $11 per day, regardless of how long they were employed.

Arbitration Committee Gets Kick On Nebraska Setup

Denver, May 1.—W. J. and J. L. McDonald, operating the Nile theatre at Mitchell, Neb., have filed with the American Arbitration Association a petition asking that the present 30-day clearance enjoyed by Bluffs, Egyptian and Oto theatres at Scottsbluff, Neb., be reduced, and that the Nile be given clearance over the Delmar at Morrill, Neb., and the Grove and Riviera, Gering, Neb. Theatres named in the complaint are owned by the Midwest Amusement and Realty Co. of Scottsbluff, and are operated through the Gibraltar Enterprises of Denver. Distribs named in the complaint are Paramount, Warner Bros., and 20th-Fox.

Hearing is set for May 5 on another Denver case, also involving clearance. E. K. Menagh of the Star, Ft. Lupton, Colo., is asking a better break in booking in competition with the Rex at Brighton, five miles distant. Latter house is owned by C. U. Yaeger.

Col. Recording Strikers Announce Pickets

Columbia Recording Corp. strikers announced yesterday that chorines in costume, longshoremen, and workers from a dozen crafts in both the Congress of Industrial Organizations and the American Federation of Labor will march in the picket lines in front of Columbia Broadcasting Co. Saturday night. In the meantime negotiations still were at a standstill, neither the company nor the United Electrical Radio and Machine Workers making any move to resume the parleys. The plant has been closed since April 11, when the company refused to raise the minimum wage scale from 55 cents per hour to 75 cents.

Writers Threaten Pic Strike; Sesh Today on Pact covering wages, conditions, etc., for scriveners.

After the meeting the SWG executive board gave out the statement:

'At a membership meeting of the Screen Writers Guild last night the members expressed great dissatisfaction with the progress of the Guild negotiations with the Producers and passed a resolution to the effect that they considered the present writer demands as being extremely modest and reasonable, and that a further meeting of the membership of the Guild be called to discuss the advisability of taking a strike vote in the event the demands are not reasonably met by the Producers.'

The meeting started off with a discussion of the arbitration of screenplay credits. It was pointed out that the Producers had requested the SWG to continue to arbitrate credits with the machinery already set up during the interim between negotiations and the time the contract is inked. John Howard Lawson stated he thought the issue of credits was unimportant in comparison with the negotiations, adding that it was a headache the Producers didn't want, but that they would like to keep the Guild discussing it.

Talk of drastic action to force the issue with Producers was started by Boris Ingster. He said the SWG was the foundation on which all the other Guilds had secured contracts and working conditions, adding, 'and today we have nothing but the promise of Producers to bargain with us, which right the National Labor Relations Act gives us. And, today that is all we have, a promise to bargain. It has now come to the point where let's give our bargaining committee a weapon — the right to strike'.

'LOOK WHAT THEY GOT'

Others quickly approved, several stating that a strike would last only about three days before Producers would give in, even if it was found necessary to strike. Several scriveners pointed out that the actors didn't have to strike, but only had to threaten to do so in order to get a contract. One writer remarked, 'Yes, and look what they got'.

Fred Niblo, Jr., objected to the strike question injected into the negotiations unless it was understood that the high-priced writers intended to support the little fellows. He said he realized the Guild was not taking a strike vote last night, but said it was the first step, and that the second and third steps would mean that 'we will be out on strike'. He said that before a strike is called he knew the membership would be interested to know what the $2,500 per week scrivener is going to do about it. He asked whether they were going to 'support the little guys like the actors supported the extras'.

Prexy Sheridan Gibney and half a dozen other high-salaried scriveners stated that they felt certain writers in the higher salaried brackets would support the strike, if it became necessary to call one, morally, financially and otherwise. It was reported that SWG shop stewards will be instructed to counteract any attack on the SWG resolution on studio lots by explaining that no strike vote was taken last night, but that the motion merely provided for sounding out the membership on the advisability of walking out if Producers refused to meet the demands.

AGVA REORG STARTED BY KEN THOMSON

Reorganization of the Los Angeles local of the American Guild of Variety Artists was started yesterday, when Kenneth Thomson, executive secretary of the Screen Actors Guild, agreed to loan AGVA for one month the services of Lee Travers. He will act as executive secretary in place of Kenneth Howard who was dropped by the AGVA board. Travers has been in charge of checking independent studios for the SAG.

Eddie Davis, who has been doing certain office work at AGVA, was taken off the payroll, but will remain as a member of the board of directors. It was indicated that no other changes are contemplated at this time, Florine Bale remaining as office manager.

It was stated yesterday that while Kenneth Thomson had been requested by the board to act in a supervisory capacity, control of the local will remain in the hands of the board of directors. It also was said that the removal of Howard as well as the request for Thomson to supervise the reorganization had been approved by a majority of the board. When the reorganization has been completed, the board said a general membership meeting will be called to select a permanent executive secretary.

J. M. Schenck Returning To 20th Soon After Resigning Chairmanship

20th-Fox board of directors, at its meeting in New York yesterday, accepted the resignation of Joseph M. Schenck as chairman and member of the board.

Edwin P. Kilroe, who has been associated with the company for years, was elected a director to succeed Schenck. No action was taken to elect a successor as chairman of the board.

20th-Fox issued the following statement: 'The published reports that Joseph M. Schenck has entirely severed his connection with 20th-Fox are in error. Mr. Schenck tendered his resignation to the board of directors as a director of the company and as chairman of the board. His resignation was accepted by the board of directors at its meeting today. When Mr. Schenck returns to Hollywood, he will resume his production activities for the company.'

Schenck, Sidney R. Kent, 20th-Fox prexy, and other company officials are expected to arrive here from New York early next week.

Darmour Signs Dannay, Lee To New Pact For Four Flickers

Larry Darmour has signed a new deal with Frederick Dannay and Manfred B. Lee, authors of the Ellery Queen novels and radio show, for four pictures to be released by Columbia next season. Scribes now are here writing the fourth on the current program's films directly for the screen.

Darmour has scheduled the third, 'The Devil to Pay', to roll (8) with Ralph Bellamy and Margaret Lindsay in the top roles. James Hogan has checked in at the studio to prepare for his directorial chore.

Paramount 'Wings' Pre-Release Runs Set

Paramount will launch 'I Wanted Wings' in Los Angeles, San Francisco, Oakland, Portland and Seattle (15) for pre-release runs prior to general distribution of the picture beginning (30). Exploitation campaign, with the cooperation of the Army air fields up and down the Coast, has been worked out for special ballyhoo.

Army is lending its support to the day-date Pacific coast openings as part of its plan to generate interest among the forthcoming graduates of high schools and colleges next month in the air service. Recruits with two years of college and the necessary physical requirements are eligible as pilots, while high school graduates are acceptable for ground crew service.

Local campaign on the picture will be handled by Cliff Lewis for Paramount. John De Valle left yesterday to do the plugging in San Francisco and Oakland, while Ralph Ravenscroft planes out today for Portland and Seattle to clear the exploitation in that area.

SMPFE REJECTS PLAN FROM DISNEY

A counter proposal of Walt Disney Studio to immediately sign a contract with the Society of Motion Picture Film Editors, and later adjust wages either through negotiations or as a grievance, was rejected last night by the Society executive board. In announcing that the offer was not satisfactory, the board indicated the Society will insist on a regular contract covering wages, hours and working conditions.

The counter proposal was submitted by Walter Spreckels, Disney labor contact, at a conference with John W. Lehners, Society business representative. Lehners agreed to transmit the offer to the board, but the latter is understood to have taken the position that the question of a contract with Disney has been hanging fire for two years and that there was no necessity for deferring wage adjustments any longer.

Charges of unfair labor practices filed against the company by the Society are now pending before the National Labor Relations Board. Similar charges also have been filed by the Screen Cartoonists Guild, which is demanding recognition as collective bargaining representative for approximately 700 employes at Disney. Negotiations between the SCG and Spreckels are expected to be resumed the first of next week when Herbert Sorrell returns from Sacramento.

PICTURE folk naturally are interested in National Defense. With that interest manifested verbally, charitably and altruistically it might be a good idea for them to interest themselves economically as well.

Currently, the United States Government is selling Defense Bonds. They can be had at post offices and banks. They run in denominations from $5 to $1,000. They're a safe investment. The coin derived is needed for the safety of this country.

ONE who realized that fact is Phil Goldstone. Goldstone went out and bought a large number of these bonds. He did not buy them for himself alone. He bought them as gifts to his employes. To each office employe he gave $100 in bonds. To every other employe he has had for one year or more—and he has hundreds—he is giving a Defense Bond. The amount

U. S. COURT ACTION ON $3,000,000 JACKPOT SEEN

Federal court action to tap the $3,000,000 retroactive pay jackpot is contemplated in behalf of the 10,000 studio members of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes, it was indicated Saturday at a meeting of business representatives of the various crafts. Most of the union tops were in favor of concerted action, but it was agreed the business representatives would discuss the situation with their executive boards and get together again later.

The business representatives took the position that the Producers committed themselves to the payment of retroactive wages when they passed out memorandums stating pay ad-

Hollywood Inside

LIFE is no bed of roses these days for press agents working on pictures with national defense background. Censorship restrictions are rigid and some of the most interesting technical details and problems cannot be told in publicity releases. Commander J. R. Poppen, helping out on 'The Flight Patrol' at Warners, recently was interviewed by an Associated Press reporter here. Poppen, a veteran flight surgeon in the Navy for 19 years, told some of his experiences. Interview was killed by the local AP desk on the ground that all such news must come from Washington, D. C., under recent ruling by Secretary of the Navy Knox. Warners had another experience in connection with 'Dive Bomber.' After getting permission from the highest ranking officers in the Navy to have the utmost freedom in shooting publicity stills at the San Diego Naval Base, a local lieutenant attempted to censor the shots when they were shown to him. Local lad was James Bassett, former aviation editor for the Los Angeles Times. Bassett didn't pursue the censorship when he learned where original permission came from.

HOLLYWOOD correspondents continued their drive against Jock Lawrence's Studio Publicity Directors Committee by journeying to Long Beach Saturday night to catch another sneak preview. This time is was Paramount's 'Buy Me That Town', screened at the West Coast theatre. The group met at the Beach, had dinner together and then descended on the theatre, paying their admission as regular patrons. Reviews of Columbia's 'Adventure in Washington', the first sneak preview caught by the group, were printed in a couple of newspapers, and three writers carried extensive leads on it in their syndicated columns. All were reparted to have given the picture a kick in the pants. The correspondents are demanding that productions be previewed here before they are screened in New York and other eastern cities. Lawrence's committee has agreed to cooperate, but the writers say this has been only an empty promise.

BEGINNING with the premiere of 'Major Barbara', which will be tomorrow at the Four Star, the local United Artists office is launching an experiment to benefit the entire film industry, as well as Southern California. Arrangements are being made with the All-Year Club to give tourists a chance to purchase a few choice seats for the preem, a major tourist attraction which builds up Los Angeles and Southern California. At most premieres tourists have no chance to buy tickets, or to see the attendant color and swank save from the sidelines. All-Year Club is favorably disposed and the idea will be tried out on 'Barbara' to see if it can be perfected.

As they strutted in their silks beneath the hot electric glow.

They were weary of their acting and they yearned to be at ease
In the loose and cooling languor of a gentle evening breeze.

So they hastened from their labor
when the lights began to fade
And they strutted till the dawning in a night club masquerade.

Rookies On Parade

(Musical Comedy)

Republic production and release. Cast: Bob Crosby, Ruth Terry, Gertrude Niesen, Eddie Foy, Jr., Marie Wilson, Cliff Nazarro, William Demarest, Sidney Blackmer, Horace MacMahon, William Wright, Jimmy Alexander, Louis Da Pron, Bill Shirley. Director, Joseph Santley. Associate producer, Albert J. Cohen. Screenplay, Karl Brown, Jack Townley, Milt Gross from original story by Sammy Cahn and Saul Chaplin. Photography, Ernest Miller. Film editor, Charles Craft. Supervising editor, Murray Seldeen. Musical director, Cy Feuer. Art director, John Victor Mackay. Lyrics and music, Sammy Cahn, Saul Chaplin, Jule Styne, Eddie Cherkose, Sidney Claire, Nick Castle. Orchestrations, Gene Rose, Walter Scharf. Dances staged by Louis Da Pron. Technical advisor, Captain Jack Voglin. Previewed at the De Anza, Riverside, May 2. Running time: 69 mins.

This modestly-budgeted little service musical should garner a goodly share of coin at the box office primarily because it's here on time to ride the crest of current service picture vogue. Though it lacks compelling name power draw for marquee garnishing, the title will help considerably. Above all, it packs quite a few laughs with a couple of standout comedy sequences inspiring well-nigh hysterical guffaws.

'Rookies' is based on a somewhat innocuous narrative but bolstered by an able if not prominent cast. Cliff Nazarro, with and without double talk, scores repeatedly. Eddie Foy, Jr., is a never-failing source of merriment. William Demarest, as henpecked hubby who becomes hard-boiled sergeant; Sidney Blackmer, William Wright, Gertrude Niesen and Marie Wilson serve well in less prominent assignments.

In the lead Bob Crosby makes the best of a role which doesn't quite do justice to his capabilities. Crosby, whose voice is amazingly reminiscent of brother Bing, is pictured as a disgruntled bad-boy songwriter who gambles away royalties. Payoff comes when he loses proceeds of royalty check on day of wedding to Ruth Terry, dropping girl's money as well. Unfavorable reaction thereby created isn't overcome until near the close of the story when Crosby turns down lucrative offer to sell interest in show he produced for the U. S. Army.

Army camp interlude is most prolific in laughs. While writing score for stage revue scheduled for immediate opening Crosby and Eddie Foy, Jr., discover that unopened mail of two weeks earlier contained order to report for service. When show bankroller William Wright protests he needs the boys for his production, army officer retorts that Uncle Sam needs them more. Wright tries to intercede with Washington in effort to get boys off but only lands himself in the army.

Film is studded with pertinent, impressive and compelling touches of a similar kind. When Crosby voices protest against fatigue duty

A Woman's Face

(Melodrama)

Metro production. Stars Joan Crawford and Melvyn Douglas. Supporting cast: Conrad Veidt, Osa Massen, Reginald Owen, Albert Basserman, Donald Meek, Marjorie Main, Connie Gilchrist, Richard Nichols, Charles Quigley, Gwili Andre, Clifford Brooke, George Zucco, Henry Kolker, Robert Warwick, Gilbert Emery, Henry Daniell, Sarah Padden, William Farnum. Directed by George Cukor. Produced by Victor Saville. Screenplay by Donald Ogden Stewart and Elliot Paul. From play, 'Il Etait Une Fois,' by Francis De Croisset. Photography, Robert Planck. Music score, Bronislau Kaper. Dance direction, Ernst Matray. Film editor, Frank Sullivan. Art director, Cedric Gibbons; associate, Wade B. Rubottom. Previewed May 2. Running time: 105 mins.

A woman's face is still one of the world's chief concerns—which makes it a good title. Joan Crawford's popularity is again on the up-beat. This is a natural for her, and she does a fine job of it. Melvyn Douglas is a marqueeworthy name. Supporting players are on their mettle. George Cukor delivers a skillful piece of direction on top of a carefully built job of interesting and suspenseful screen writing. All of which grooves 'A Woman's Face' for box office favor, especially the feminine trade.

The production is specified as a psychological melodrama. It is built on the mystery suspense formula, with romantic overtones. The focal interest lies in the change which takes place in a hard and bitter female crook when plastic surgery changes an abhorrently scarred face into one of attractive beauty. The impulse to have her features altered, even at the price of sustained pain and a long gamble of success, comes when the woman, head of a band of blackmailers, falls in love with an arch criminal, Conrad Veidt. The opportunity comes when she is trapped in the home of a noted surgeon, Melvyn Douglas, where she has gone to blackmail his faithless wife, Osa Massen. After the transformation the Crawford character is sent to be a governess of a small child in a north European country, with the intent of killing the little boy in seeming accident, so that Veidt may inherit a fortune from his uncle, Albert Basserman. But the physical alteration of the woman's face also brings about spiritual regeneration. In the end, repelled now by the crook, and in love with the surgeon who has given her a normal life, she kills the crook to save the child.

The facial disfigurement, confined to one side of Miss Crawford's face, is hideous, but leaves no abhorrent audience reaction, and is cured for greater portion of the picture. It is a highly skillful piece of make-up.

Device used in telling the tale is the retrospective viewpoint which has of late became commonplace, but in this case it has genuine dramatic

Phantom Cowboy

(Western)

Republic production and release. Stars Don 'Red' Barry. Features Virginia Carroll, Milburn Stone. Supporting cast: Neyle Marx, Rex Lease, Nick Thompson, Bud Osborne, Ernest Wilson, Burr Caruth. Directed by George Sherman. Screenplay by Doris Schroeder. Photographed by Reggie Lanning. Edited by Tony Martinelli. Musical director, Cy Feuer. Reviewed at the Hitching Post May 2. Running time: 58 mins.

Don 'Red' Barry is starred in this Republic production, which is just another western, geared for its immediate following. Opus is full of fast riding and hard shooting, with a number of rough-and-tumble fights, all of which should provide plenty of diversion for fans who go for this type of screen diversion.

Milburn Stone and Rex Lease, the latter a crooked sheriff, have the machinery well in motion whereby Stone, through marriage with Virginia Carroll, will secure control of a rancho and at the same time deprive Barry, ward of the former owner, as well as the peons who have long lived on the estate, from coming into their share.

Barry poses as Lobo, ostensibly an outlaw but who in reality is Barry's friend, orphaned when Stone and the sheriff are responsible for the aged peon's death. Miss Carroll is the other heir to the property and for a time is made to believe Barry is responsible for the murders, but truth triumphs and the villains meet a sudden end, with Barry and Miss Carroll united.

Barry handles his assignment satisfactorily and Stone and Lease give clearcut portrayals of the menaces. Miss Carroll is adequate and the support cast is up to standard.

Screenplay by Doris Schroeder is just another scenario, and Reggie Lanning's photography is on a par with average westerns.

9,000 Jam Gilmore For Mount Sinai Big Benefit

Bill Elliott, western star, galloped to the opening gate with a colossal golden key and started the Racing Jamboree at Gilmore stadium yesterday for the benefit of the Mount Sinai hospital and clinic with 9,000 customers in the oval stand looking over the widest variety of athletic entertainment ever seen in Hollywood.

From the Polar ice fields to the tropical deserts, the competition went on under a sun that was typically Californian. Following an Eskimo dog sled race, with the sled on wheels, was a camel race, with the camels on foot. Athletes from the A.A.U. sprinted, hurdled and leaped in the high jump; old Malicious, of 'here comes' fame, galloped three-fifths of a mile; old-fashioned bikers and new fashioned motor scooters pedaled and sputtered hither and yon; there were movie cowboy races, Pony Express races and greyhound races. There was everything but a boat race.

Victor McLaglen's Motorcycle Corps did a slick job of navigating around the track, except for one of the riders, who was un-motorcycled and was taken away in an ambulance. The other riders went on riding, under the show-must-go-on theory.

It was a one-ring circus with a three-ring emcee idea. The three masters of ceremonies were Milton Berle, Ken Murray and Gus Mack. The judges, in addition to Mischa Auer, who rode a horse as commander of a Cossack troop, were Edward Arnold, Abbott and Costello, Buck Jones, who directed the Pony Express race, Tex Ritter, Roy Rogers and others who didn't show up.

the long pondered step that will let operators pass some of their costs along to the public through sale of time. Regulators declared 'the industry is entirely in agreement that television broadcasting is ready for standardization' and adopted for a trial period of six months the principles recommended by the National Television System Committee (equipment representatives).

Difference of opinion about when commercialization should start was noted, with the regulators saying the reason for the delay presented by National and Columbia at the March hearings 'are not controlling.' Report also observed that 'other leading figures in the industry, that earlier opposed commercialization', have different views now.

The row over RCA, Dumont and Hazeltine pulses was ended with the engineering principles calling for receivers able to bring in pictures transmitted by any system. The standards, however, provide for 525 lines (compared with the 441 advocated last year) and 30 frames. (Dumont wanted slower transmission).

The regulators tried to encourage exploitation of color, which the report said had been lifted 'into a new realm in entertainment possibilities' by CBS. No standardization or money making with tinted pictures will be allowed for another six months, but the report urged immediate experimentation.

Wails of the pioneers about the high cost of program productions caused the commish to soften up on the proposed minimum service requirement. Instead of 30 hours weekly, figure originally contemplated, the new rules require licensees to be on the air only 14-15 hours. Regular schedule must include two hours daily except Sunday between 2 and 11 p.m., with one of these hours between 7:30 and 10:30 p.m. five days each week.

All of the ribbons were opened up for commercial use, while the rules perpetuate the restriction against multiple ownership. No licensee can have over three video plants or more than one in a particular area. To get more than one ticket, applicants must make a convincing showing that public interest requires the granting and that they will not cover the field.

Frequency modulation was given more fertilizer, with the regulations specifying this type of sound transmission must accompany the images.

Thomas Lee's W6XAO, only western video station, is expected to have a bankrolled program ready for the July start. Commercialization has been the goal of the Lee site over its 11 years of experimentation and telecasting under the supervision of Harry Lubcke.

Richards Attempting KMPC Splitup From CBS

Severance of its affiliation with CBS is being undertaken by G. A. 'Dick' Richards, owner of KMPC. Columbia has been routing sustainers from the east, which it can't handle, to the Bevhills station. Manager Bob Reynolds has been ordered to prune the overhead but encountered objections from the Musicians Union when he sought to trim his studio orchestra of six men to a lone organist.

KMPC was included in the deal with Richards-owned WJR, Detroit, and WGAR, Cleveland, when those stations re-signed with CBS after NBC had made a feverish effort to wean the Detroit money-maker over to its chain.

PREPAREDNESS FOR ALL

will be determined by the earning power of the employe. Goldstone feels that if he starts his people off with a dowry in these bonds they will then buy of their own volition and get into the habit of being Defense conscious, and that is the greatest symptom of patriotism any American can show at this time.

Picture companies and theatre operators, who give bonuses, etc., could use the Goldstone deed as a good example for themselves. They could start off their employes on a great patriotic mission that would be helpful to the country and all its inhabitants. Too, others in show biz could do likewise—writers, directors, players, producers, and others.

THE investment in these bonds, besides showing the United States that the amusement industry is in accord with its defense program, also enables those who buy the bonds to save coin as well.

Also, with the picture industry as a body making a move in the proper direction of supporting National Defense, the country as a whole would follow this step, and Uncle Sam would quickly find that America, through a lead taken by the picture people, realizes the importance of Defense preparedness, and garner these bonds in short order and call for more, should the Government's defense requirements necessitate more issues.

on grounds that nothing can happen here, he gets reply that 50,000,000 Frenchmen once figured the same way.

Martial music, where used, is gripping. None of seven tunes featured in the film appeal as strong entries for general popularity, but serve well enough for an unpretentious musical. 'My Kinda Music', 'Rookies On Parade' and 'Chula Chi Hua Hua' possibly the catchiest. Others are 'Mother Never Told Me Why', 'You'll Never Get Rich', 'I Love You More' and 'What More Do You Want?' Bill Shirley makes one vocal a standout.

Gertrude Niesen does a brief Mae West gag version of 'Mother Never Told Me Why'. Songstress could have been employed to better advantage with a torch number, as suggested when she goes on again with short but effective vocal toward the close. Ruth Terry, heart interest and number one warbler, scores nicely with a couple of melodies and rates attention on appearance. That she is deserving of more sympathetic camera treatment is evidenced in one or two shots where she photographs unusually well.

Boys in uniform doing ballet work and breaking drill to go into a conga routine with rifles are among most hilarious episodes.

A Woman's Face

reasons for being so related. Suspense is enhanced. First shot shows Miss Crawford being led into a Europeon courtroom on trial for murder. But the nature of the crime and its possible accomplices are unfolded as witness after witness recites his knowledge of the situation. They are all excellent characterizations, these testifiers, and the narrative is held to high and mounting intensity, ending in a wild melodramatic chase of sleighs through snows alongside a thunderous waterfall and canyon where the killing of Veidt is done.

Elliot Paul made the original adaptation from the play, 'Il Etait Une Fois', and Donald Ogden Stewart collaborated with Paul on the screenplay, which combines sound psychology, exciting drama and pictorial thrill in a commendable piece of craftsmanship. It has the fault of overlength, which must be shared by writers and director for holding on to certain sequences, especially a country estate dance and festival scene, much beyond the entertainment values.

Miss Crawford excells all previous roles. Melvyn Douglas, in contrast to most of his recent parts, plays this one straight, and very effectively. Veidt's sinister contribution is in the rather theatrical villainous manner. Osa Massen impresses as the fickle and almost infantile wife of the surgeon. Reginald Owen and Donald Meek perform well as members of the blackmail ring. Basserman is the amiable wealthy grandfather of the little boy whose life is a pawn in the plot maneuvers. Marjorie Main is the jealous housekeeper. Many of the lesser roles are also carefully and interestingly depicted. Richard Nichols is the little lad.

As the producer, Victor Saville deserves credit for an attractively presented, substantial and widely exploitable piece of popular entertainment, meritorious in all its technical phases. The musical score by Bronislau Kaper is especially praiseworthy, and the photography by Robert Planck a notable contribution.

Play was made once before as a Swedish production with Ingrid Bergman starred, but was seen in this country only to limited extent in the arty houses.

ACRIMONIOUS LITIGATION INEVITABLE

the courts fail to call a halt to the reform-minded majority of the FCC, which climaxed over two years of discussion of alleged monopoly and protection of the public interest, with rules prohibiting almost every established business principle and greatly limiting the exercise of private initiative.

Strategy sessions of the scheduled victims started immediately after circulation of the long report adopted by a 5 to 2 vote. Executive Committee of National Assn. of Broadcasters huddles in New York Wednesday. Columbia and NBC executives start tomorrow weighing suggestions about ways to prevent scaffolding.

Prolonged, costly and acrominious litigation seems inevitable. Two veteran webs let regulators know months ago they will not submit willingly to dismemberment. First move probably will be request for a temporary injunction on claim of irreparable injury, with NBC likely taking the lead.

Crackdown policies reflect share-the-wealth philosophy and will have a far-reaching effect. Aim is to redistribute industry income and strengthen bargaining positions of independently-owned affiliates, incidentally creating new chances for non-web stations to tie in. More chains are desired, although most industry leaders doubt whether many gamblers will be attracted by such unfavorable odds.

COMISH TOUGHNESS

Most immediate effect of the comish toughness will be forced peddling of several NBC outlets and dissolution of the blue string of stations. Without trying to claim jurisdiction over the webs, new dealers invoked licensing powers in a way that requires unloading of one of two NBC plants in Washington, New York, Chicago and San Francisco, and junking of many agreements with indie blue transmitters.

Regional chains also will feel the force of the blow, but Coast combinations won't suffer any more than any one else. Don Lee chain stands to benefit to the extent that the regulations are more advantageous to Mutual than any other outfit in the industry.

Exclusive clauses of affiliation agreements go out the window, along with time options. No chain company can own or operate more than one plant in a single area, but the comish made no move against individuals with several transmitters. Further expansion of CBS or NBC holdings is prohibited, with both companies likely to be required to justify continued control of certain stations. Without fixing any specific maximum on the number of transmitters a web can own or operate, kilocycle cops laid down the principle that they will look at every situation and deny complete control wherever insufficient competition appears.

Questions of talent and recording activities of the chains were ducked, although majority FCC members recalled receiving strong complaints and made critical references to these sidelines, glowering in particular at RCA-NBC. Explaining that they don't think everything about Mutual is good, the majority was especially sympathetic to the rookie web's wails. Difficulties encountered in obtaining outlets were cited as proof of selfishness of senior claims.

REGULATORS HORRIFIED

Regulators were particularly horrified by financial success of Columbia and NBC. Too much of the cream is skimmed off, with the managed-and-operated plants getting favored treatment and the indie affiliates in the stepchild role. Long discussion of industry economics stressed that two veteran companies took $4,349,446 of the industry's $18,854,784 of net operating income in 1938, and combined with earnings of M and O stations their consolidated grab was 'about one-half' of the industry total.

Out of time sales revenues of $44,313,778, NBC and Columbia kept 73%; they had 44% of the industry's over-all receipts, with Mutual getting only 2%. Fat profits meant tremendous return on investment, the report said. Tangible property of the majors was worth only $9,276,019, so that in a single year they got back in net operating income more than the plant outlay. In 1938 NBC made 80% of the aggregate investment and CBS 71%.

The new policy will make the networks little more than time brokers. No options will be allowed, while every affiliate must have unrestricted freedom to turn down any program without advance notice. Report said that arguments in defense of the option system were tripe and scoffed at fears the industry's stability will be undermined.

UNLIMITED COMPETISH

Unlimited competition in business is a traditional American doctrine so firmly established as to be virtually a law, the regulators declared in justification of their toughness. Since facilities are limited and opportunities to enter business are automatically restricted, federal government must assure real rivalry. The report acknowledged FCC is not charged with enforcing the Sherman anti-trust act, but said that the public interest requirement inevitably requires lively competition and infractions cannot be condoned.

Concern over the listeners and advertisers, as well as the individual stations, was expressed frequently. Exclusivitity denies sponsors access to certain markets and prevents dial twisters from getting certain desired features. The rate cards are ample protection for the webs and individual stations, since advertisers aren't likely to waste any money.

Strongly worded minority report by Commissioners T. A. Craven and Norman S. Case warned that the new policies will impair efficiency of the entire industry and likely bring 'anarchy' or 'chaos'. They pointed out the regulators must take a huge slice of blame for any monopoly existing and protested unsuccessfully that the 'remedies' are almost certain to bring even worse conditions.

FCC ruling, while not unexpected along the local radio front, proved far more drastic than had been anticipated. Network heads here withheld quotable comment, but made no effort at disguising their shock at the far-reaching effects of the commission's dictum. All are agreed that it is the most momentous decision ever handed down by radio's governing body.

That NBC will resort to the courts to protect its $11,000,000 investment in the blue network is generally conceded. Immediate local effect of the report in ordering dissolution of the blue web is the detachment of Earle C. Anthony's KECA from NBC affiliation. Columbia loses KMPC in Beverly Hills by the edict, but station has been taking steps to sever the relationship.

NBC, along the Coast, also loses KGO, 7,500-watter in Frisco. Chain has operated the site as a blue outlet on a lease from General Electric since 1929. Coast blue sales staff, under Tracy Moore, established a year ago to compete against the net's red, will likely be absorbed by Syd Dixon's red crew.

TRAMMELL'S STATEMENT

New York, May 4.—Characterizing the report of the Federal Communications Commission on new regulatory policies affecting the networks as 'a definite step toward complete government control of radio', Niles Trammell, president of NBC, tonight issued the following statement:

'Even a casual reading of the regulations set forth in the report adopted by a majority of the commission is enough to indicate that chaos, not further competition, would result from the blow aimed at the American system of broadcasting. I do not purport to know why such a bombshell should be exploded at this critical time in the life of our country when the fullest use of the nation's radio facilities is demanded. The regulations make certain a confusion that must lead to further bureaucratic grip upon freedom of the air. I don't believe that when Congress created the Commission in 1934 it contemplated that the Commission would attempt to remake the American system of broadcasting without even consulting the Congress. Year after year the Commission had renewed licenses of independent stations affiliated with the NBC network in recognition of the fact that the stations performed a service in the public interest.'

STRINGENT REGULATIONS

Washington, May 4.—New FCC regulations governing network operations embrace the following points:

No station to be forced to carry the programs of only one network.

No network to deny service to any station desiring its programs.

Contracts between networks and stations not to run more than one year.

Networks not to tie up time of affiliates as now done by time option system.

Stations to have full freedom to accept or reject any network program.

No network to operate or own more than one transmitter in any service area or any station where ample competition is lacking.

No network to maintain more than one network.

Networks not to exercise control over rate schedules of their affiliates.

All provisions to become effective in 90 days.

PRODUCERS, SWG IN SESSION THURSDAY

pected to reach the Coast in time to sit in at the session.

Although the SWG is sounding out the membership on the advisability of a strike of writers if the Guild's demands are not 'reasonably met' by the companies, negotiations were resumed Friday night. After discussing the Guilder's demands for several hours, the session was adjourned at 11 p.m. with an agreement that the two committees would get together again Thursday.

It is reported that the two are still far apart on an agreement. The SWG had demanded a minimum wages of $150 per week for writers, with the Producers making a counter proposal of $50 per week. Other hurdles to be overcome are the Guild demands for elimination of all speculative writing and abolition of flat deals under $5,000.

Negotiations between the SOEG and Metro executives will be resumed Wednesday night (7).

SPEEDY HEARING FOR DISNEY

Following announcement by Walt Disney that he would close his studio if American Federation of Labor crafts call a strike and 'any violence occurs', the National Labor Relations Board Saturday wired authorization from Washington for a speedy hearing on the unfair labor practice charges filed against the company by the Screen Cartoonists Guild. It is understood that an NLRB complaint will be issued this week, and that the hearing will be held Tuesday (20) if a board trial examiner is available for that date.

The SCG claims that the Federation of Screen Cartoonists is a 'company dominated union'. The Guild claims to represent a majority of the 700 cartoon workers and is demanding immediate recognition as their sole collective bargaining representative. The Society of Motion Picture Film Editors also is demanding a basic agreement covering wages, hours and conditions. A company offer to recognize the Society, but to defer wage adjustments pending negotiations, was turned down by the film editors.

Authorization to hold a hearing was received Saturday by William Walsh, senior attorney for the board, who currently also is acting regional director, acting as a trial examiner and as a litigation attorney. Walsh said another attorney would be assigned to handle the Disney case, as he is scheduled to attend a conference of NLRB regional directors and attorneys in Washington May 23, 24, 25.

Disney in urging a speedy hearing also requested an NLRB election so his workers could select a bargaining agent. This will not be necessary, however, if the board finds that the Federation is 'company dominated'. It would merely order it to disband and notify Disney to cease dealing with the organization. This would leave the Guild as the only representative of the workers, and place them in a position to demand immediate recognition.

Walt Disney checks out today for a brief vacation, leaving union negotiations in the hands of Walter Spreckels, former NLRB regional director and now labor contact for the Disney company, as well as a large number of aircraft companies.

Film Extras Reap Golden Harvest In April

Film extras reaped a golden harvest in April. Estimates released to the Screen Actors Guild yesterday by Central Casting Corp. fixed the total number of job placements at 32,907, the biggest single month atmosphere players have caught since June, 1939. Based on an average daily wage of $11, this means the extras received approximately $361,907.

Because of the demand for young faces and high school sets, much of this, however, did not go to regular extras. The SAG was required to issue hundreds of waivers to take care of the demand for soldiers 18 to 25 and for young high school boys and girls. While the SAG has many members who know the new Army streamlined drills, few of them could qualify as 18 to 25 year old draftees.

Central executives are now making a breakdown to determine the number of extras called in the various classifications and the total amount paid them. While the Guild has tried to tighten up on waivers, both the SAG and Central Casting are faced with a continuous demand by directors and producers for new and young faces.

'Partners' Wash Up

ASCAP HURLS SABOTAGE CHARGE IN TUNE FIGHT

proved by Mutual directorate, until after NAB convention in St. Louis May 12-15.

Following telegram, over Buck's signature, was dispatched to Miller:

'We have a contract with the Mutual Broadcasting System where the approval of a majority of its affiliates will immediately reinstate the use of Ascap music on the entire Mutual system. We construe your telegram of May 1 to the several Mutual System broadcasting stations as an unlawful interference with the realization of the benefits of that contract. We hold you fully responsible for all damages we may suffer thereby and demand that you take immediate action to fully counteract the damaging effect of your unwarranted and illegal interference with the said contract.'

Early indications were that Miller would succeed in dissuading Mutual affiliates from approving contracts before opening of the NAB convention. Returns received by Mutual at close of business Saturday were small but showed that a majority of the affiliates were heeding Miller's suggestion and preferred to wait for action at the convention.

Fred Weber, Mutual prez, wired Miller, protesting against tendency of NAB to 'enter into controversial subjects affecting competition between the older networks and Mutual' and 'attempts along with others to coerce or restrain free choice of action by independent broadcasting stations.'

Mutual affiliates again were on a nationwide conference line yesterday to hear further reports on the progress of voting on the new Ascap contract. Lewis Allen Weiss, general manager of the Don Lee network, said that only Coast affiliates not yet voicing their approval of the Ascap deal are the Washington stations, stymied by the anti-Ascap law in the state. Weiss was certain they would vote for the plan, subject to limitations of the state law pending repeal of the statute due to the government's consent decree.

Eric Carruthers Wins In Local 44 Battle; Ticket Victorious

Eric Carruthers was re-elected president of Affiliated Property Craftsmen Local 44, as the Regulars in the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes union routed the Progressives and captured every office. William Mittlestedt was reelected as vice-prexy, and Cappy DuVal as business representative. Edwin T. Hill defeated Dell Crawford for secretary-treasurer. George Bahr was named sergeant-at-arms, and William Goodwin as trustee.

John F. Doolan was named to the executive board to represent the nursery set dressers, Walter J. Hoffman to represent the special effects, J. W. Lofey to represent the prop makers, Joe (Red) Thompson to represent the property men, R. C. (Brownie) Brown to represent the upholsterers and drapers, and James M. Walters to represent the swing gang. Frank O'Connor and W. A. (Tom) Dailey were elected as delegates to the Central Labor Council.

The Progressives blamed their defeat on a new International rule permitting members to vote for executive board candidates regardless of their classification. The election rules also required that a member must have attended six meetings during the year in order to qualify as a candidate.

U. S. COURT ACTION ON $3,000,000 JACKPOT SEEN

justments would be made later if it was proven a worker was entitled to it under the Wage-Hour Division classifications. The general procedure was explained by Dave Sokol, former attorney for the National Labor Relations Board who recently filed suit for retroactive pay for the garment workers. There is a possibility Sokol will be retained to bring joint legal action for the various IATSE studio locals if the Wage-Hour Division fails to settle the question of retroactive pay when it hands down decisions this week on disputed film classifications. It has been reported the Division will leave the question of back pay up to the individual unions or workers.

Baird Snyder, deputy Wage-Hour Administrator, passed through here Friday en route to San Francisco. He said the decision would be handed down soon, and in regard to compliance added:

'Compliance has been a little jumbled. They (industry leaders) took our rules and interpreted them. Due to the fact that the industry has not made as thorough a study as we did there was bound to be some confusion.' Snyder was accompanied by Wesley O. Ashe, regional administrator who will have the duty of enforcing the classifications in the film industry.

At the meeting of union tops called by Harold V. Smith, business representative of Sound Technicians Local 695 and chairman of the IATSE business representatives committee, it was stated the unions would have an opportunity to negotiate even after the classifications are announced.

Columbia Recording Strikers Hit Sponsor Airers by Mail

Columbia Recording Co. strikers yesterday mailed letters to advertisers sponsoring programs over the Columbia Broadcasting Co. network, as well as agents handling the accounts, indicating the Congress of Industrial Organizations might be asked to put their products on the 'unfair list' if they continued to patronize the company while the Columbia strike is in progress. The United Electrical Radio and Machine Workers also announced that Columbia Recording had been forced to suspend delivery of May and June record releases.

At the same time, it was learned that Edward Fitzgerald, United States labor conciliator, was trying to arrange another meeting between the union and company executives in the hopes that an amicable settlement could be reached. More than 500 pickets marched in front of CBS Studio Saturday night, including representatives from the Newspaper Guild, Warehousemen, Furniture Workers and Office Employes.

Demurrers Up Today In Rodriguez Job Suit

Seven demurrers will be argued by as many defendants before Municipal Court Judge Alfred E. Paonessa this morning in an action filed by Jose Luis Rodriguez, actor, against Screen Actors Guild, five major producing companies, and Central Casting agency. Other defendants are Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Corp., Paramount Pictures, RKO-Radio Pictures, Inc., 20th-Fox Film Corp. and Warner Brothers Pictures.

Rodriguez suit is for compensatory relief, exemplary damages and injunction, plaintiff contending that he has been refused work as an actor by virtue of his having refused to pay dues to Screen Actors Guild. Being without funds, actor will argue his own objections to the demurrers.

Complaint was filed under Sections 1567 and 1575 of the California Civil Code for detriment suffered through 'oppression', 'exercise of undue influence', and 'by taking grossly unfair advantage of one's necessities and distress.'

Action is somewhat unique in local court circles in that outcome of the litigation will likely indicate what rights free-lance actors, not affiliated with Screen Actors Guild have in securing film employment.

CHARGES FLY AS NETS READY FIGHT ON RULING

Washington, May 5.—Doubt of networks' ability to stave off Federal Communications Commission reforms today fanned flames of radio industry indignation. Litigation, probably long and costly, and certain to be bitter, is inevitable, but legalites were apprehensive about the outcome of efforts to get the courts to handcuff the regulators. Comish brain trusters may have outsmarted high-priced industry attorneys by framing new rules in such a way that assault is next to impossible.

With industry leaders fuming, Chairman James Fly of FCC said a formal report of the comish will be

It also was disclosed that the United Local at the Bridgeport home plant of Columbia Recording is reopening wage negotiations with the company. The Los Angeles Council of the Congress of Industrial Organizations will assist in the local negotiations, and in enforcing any secondary boycotts where dealers are found handling Columbia recordings during the duration of the strike. The San Francisco and Oakland CIO Councils have endorsed the local strike and have promised to cooperate by placing Columbia Product on the 'unfair list' if a settlement is not reached.

Hollywood Inside

FOLLOWING screening of 'Three Cockeyed Sailors' for United Artists heads in New York, plans for a regular UA trade paper advertising campaign and other exploitation means are being lined up by Jake Milstein, representative for Edward Small, and the distributing company. Picture, made in England by Michael Balcon and to which Small recently acquired U. S. rights with frozen English money, is a farce comedy and belief in its 'sleeper' qualities is behind extra exertion to sell it to the theatres and public. Film will be shown at each of the regional UA conventions, starting shortly, in order to prepare salesmen and exchange heads for drive on play dates. Title roles in film are played by Tommy Trinder, Claude Hulbert and Michael Wilding with Carla Lehmann as the femme interest.

TWENTIETH-FOX art department has prepared charts which show Rouben Mamoulian's ideas as to the emotional equivalents of color, as determined by experiments made during filming of 'Blood and Sand', and the studio will ask other directors making Technicolor pictures to consider them as potential 'palettes'. Mamoulian's charts will become standard props at the Westwood lot. They include ribbons, ties, drapes and other cloth goods in every color in the spectrum. Director used them in 'Blood and Sand' to 'paint' the tints as he went along. He also drew on the old masters of painting for color and composition.

There will be complications if the star who plays the title role in 'The Life of Rube Waddell' runs true to form. The Rube was the problem child of baseball in your grandpop's day. I'll Wait For You

(Drama)

Metro production Features Robert Sterling, Marsha Hunt, Virginia Weidler, Paul Kelly, Fay Holden, Henry Travers. Supporting cast: Don Costello, Carol Hughes, Reed Hadley, Ben Weldon, Theodor von Eltz, Leon Belasco, Mitchell Lewis, Joe Yule, Eddie Hart, Jerry Jerome, Steve Darrell and William Tannen. Director, Robert B. Sinclair. Producer, Edwin Knopf. Screenplay, Guy Trosper. Based on a story by Mauri Grashin. Photography, Sidney Wagner. Musical score, Bronislau Kaper. Song, Al Siegel and Ralph Freed. Film editor, Elmo Veron. Previewed May 5. Running time: 73 mins.

Metro's 'I'll Wait For You' will find numberless supporters among those who like stories filled with folksy human interest, and, although it will be no sensation at the box office, it will do all right in the secondary spots where patrons do not expect too much for their money.

Story is of a gangster, mixed up in laundry and restaurant rackets, who flees, wounded, from New York cops. He manages to make his way to a Connecticut farm before collapsing. Kindly farm folk take him in. He finds here, amidst the simple surroundings, that life is real and earnest. He dscovers honest love for the farmer's daughter, who responds to him so much that he is abashed and cannot pursue his courtship to the conclusion he would have with a chorus girl in the big city.

Finally, when the cops come for him in this rural hideaway where the farm folk think he is the victim of gangsters, he prevails upon them to pose as friends coming to take him away on business. At the last moment he cracks to the girl, tells her his real identity and is happily amazed that she will wait for him to get out of jail and come back to the quiet countryside with her.

Robert Sterling does a smooth job as the gangster, a job that is reminiscent of Robert Montgomery, who originally played the same role several years ago when gangster pictures were more in the vogue. Marsha Hunt gives a soft, appealing quality to the role of the farm girl who is attracted to the visitor. Virginia Weidler is an excellent kid sister. Paul Kelly and Don Costello, who plays it deadpan throughout, are warmly human as the cops inexorably pursuing Sterling. Among others who give quality to the cast are Fay Holden, Henry Travers, Carol Hughes, Reed Hadley, Ben Weldon, Theodor von Eltz, Leon Belasco, Mitchell Lewis, Joe Yule and Eddie Hart.

Direction, by Robert Sinclair, is first class for a film of this type. Edwin Knopf draws the producer credit. Guy Trosper's story, although old-fashioned, is good. Sidney Wagner, who photographed the picture; Bronislau Kaper, who was responsible for the musical score, and other technical aides are satisfactory.

James on Autry

Edward James has been assigned at Republic to do an untitled picture for Gene Autry.

Affectionately Yours

(Farce-Comedy)

Warners release of a First National picture. Cast: Merle Oberon, Dennis Morgan, Rita Hayworth, Ralph Bellamy, George Tobias, James Gleason, Hattie McDaniel, Jerome Cowan, Butterfly McQueen, Renie Riano, Frank Wilcox, Grace Stafford, Carmen Morales, Murray Alper, William Haade, Pat Flaherty and James Flavin. Director, Lloyd Bacon. Associate producer, Mark Hellinger. Executive producer, Hal B. Wallis. Screenplay, Edward Kaufman; from the story by Fanya Foss and Aleen Leslie. Photography, Tony Gaudio. Art director, Anton Grot. Film editor, Owen Marks. Music, H. Roemheld. Orchestral arrangements, Ray Heindorf. Musical director, Leo F. Forbstein. Previewed at Studio City theatre, May 5. Running time: 90 mins.

This broad farce taxes the capacity of its top players somewhat beyond their skill for slapstick comedy, coming out uneven in its quality of entertainment, but giving a lavish amount, and summing up as agreeable laugh material for the general runs because of its gags.

Rita Hayworth, who is on the quick upbeat because of recent roles, carries the acting honors and shows she can troupe a fine brand of farce. Merle Oberon is ill at ease in certain stretches and brightly competent in others. Dennis Morgan showcases his personality and thespian merits again, but also has to fight the tendency to overstress which characterialized work of cast generally.

The story as scripted by Edward Kaufman from the original by Fanya Foss and Aleen Leslie, blends war correspondent romance with domestic turmoil when the ace reporter, Dennis Morgan, cannot make up his mind as between the charms of his ex-wife, Merle Oberon, and his fellow reporter, Rita Hayworth. Ralph Bellamy completes the quadrangle with his standard role—the fatuous suitor doomed to ridiculous contrast with the contrite husband-lover. Point of the tale, after a string of fresh and intrinsically ludicrous gags, is that it is harder for an ace reporter to quit newspapering (as The Front Page first set out, to be copied in innumerable films) than it is for a gangster to quit his mob. James Gleason is the tough newspaper boss—and very good. George Tobias gets chuckles as the foreign press photographer.

Director Lloyd Bacon had a job cut out for him to stretch the thin line of antagonism between husband and wife across the required time, and hustled his pace and overplayed his actors to accomplish his chore competently. Laughs pick up toward the end, and are sprinkled throughout, although the proceedings are pretty silly and tediously repetitious in numerous scenes to pull down the entertainment level.

Mark Hellinger handled the associate producer responsibilities under Hal B. Wallis, giving the picture nice presentation. Tony Gaudio's camera shows the players favorably and Orry-Kelly's gowns look well on Miss Oberon and Miss Hayworth.

Mutual wired affiliates today the Ascap contract must be negotiated independent of any other networks and in good faith to avoid any charge of conspiracy with others in the industry in violation of the anti-trust laws, and accordingly network is prohibited from considering the Ascap deal on the floor of the convention in St. Louis next week.

Ascap officials called on the Justice Department in Washington, and after going over the Mutual contract received assurance they were within purview of the consent decree. Call had been prompted by complaints filed regarding Mutual contracts by some broadcasters.

The executives also discussed plans to cooperate with the combined convention of the Pacific Coast Conference of Independent Theatre Owners and the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America here next month. A special committee will be named to see that the industry is well represented by top actors and company executives.

The Producers received a request from the Screen Actors Guild that a date be set this week to resume negotiations. It was agreed, however, that the executives would not have sufficient time to digest the Guild demands by that time, hence the next meeting will be deferred for a week or 10 days.

company will be issued within the next two or three days and a trial examiner and attorney assigned to handle the case.

In the meantime, Walter Spreckels, Disney labor contact, sent a letter to all company employes in which he reviewed the entire situation from the time the Federation of Screen Cartoonists was certified by the NLRB up to the present SCG demand for recognition. He pointed out that the employes will have an opportunity to vote for a collective bargaining representative after the board hearing, and urged that all factional strife be put aside and everybody 'put his shoulder to the wheel'.

The SCG claims the Federation is a 'company dominated union', and that the Guild represents a majority of the employes. Guild tops met last night with American Federation of Labor leaders to discuss the situation. If the NLRB upholds the unfair labor practice complaint, the SCG is expected to demand immediate recognition as bargaining agent for the 700 cartoon workers.

SMPE Speakers Stress Aid of Films In National Defense

Rochester, N. Y., May 5.—Importance of motion pictures for aviation training under the National Defense setup was impressed on guests of the spring convention of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers at the opening session here this morning. Two government officials, Arch A. Mercy and E. M. Ellingson, described how three chief problems of aviation instruction are being overcome by motion pictures, especially teaching workers unfamiliar with building and care of equipment. New films now being produced will aid in pilot selecting and testing, the speakers asserted.

Afternoon and evening sessions were given over to sound in motion pictures, with the Disney Fantasound and Warners Vitasound methods being covered in several papers. Increased lens efficiency through chemical coatings also was explained in technical detail.

RODRIGUEZ GETS 30-DAY LEEWAY

Jose Luis Rodriguez, actor, suing Screen Actors Guild, Central Casting, and five major producing companies, for compensatory relief, exemplary damages and an injunction, was yesterday allowed 30 days by Municipal Court Judge Alfred E. Paonessa in which to file an amended complaint. Judge Paonessa expressed inability to rule on action which had been drawn up by the actor, who has no legal counsel, and advised Rodriguez to have brief presented by an attorney in proper form.

William Berger (Beilenson & Berger) appeared in court for Screen Actors Guild, and Arthur Freston (Freston & Files), represented Warner Brothers Pictures, Central Casting and the four other defendants, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Corp., Paramount Pictures, RKO-Radio Pictures, Inc., and 20th-Fox Film Corp.

Seven demurrers by the defendants scheduled to be heard yesterday were deferred pending filing of amended complaint by Rodriguez. Counsel for the defendants offered no objections to delay since actor was not represented by an attorney.

Rodriguez claims he has been barred from working in motion pictures for two years because he has not paid dues to the SAG.

turned over to Justice Department for any possible use in connection with investigation of the music situation or trade practices beyond the comish's jurisdiction. No recommendation will be made, with a decision up to Attorney General Jackson and his assistant, Thurman Arnold.

New developments in the latest industry-government feud included complaints from newspapermen and the commission minority that the New Deal element used dirty tactics in releasing the report and new regulations. These angles are likely to attract more interest in Congress. Handling of the document, adopted hastily last Friday, less than 24 hours after the proposed rules were submitted to members for scrutiny, may be the match that lights the fuse for congressional probe of the regulatory body.

Dissatisfaction and suspicion of conspiracy to conceal the strongly-worded minority report are becoming widely known. Though Fly had indicated publication would be impossible until this week, extraordinary moves nearly enabled the crackdown faction to do a little monopolizing of their own—in the press. Putting pressure on the government printing office, Fly arranged for issuance of a digest of the report for scribes Saturday morning for use in preparing stories for Sunday papers. No warning was given Commissioners Craven and Case, who dissented, and no provision was made to let them prepare a handout for simultaneous distribution. Result was that many newspapermen knew nothing about the minority report until Sunday. Only mention that the vote on rules was not unanimous was in next to the last paragraph of the 14th page of the mimeographed statement.

DISSENTERS' CONTENTION

Fly denied any intent to suppress the minority report or conceal the split within the commission ranks. He claimed Case had been told if he wanted any statement of minority views included in the press digest to get his stuff in pronto. But the dissenter maintains he was misled into believing nothing would come out before today's printed volume, with both factions' views not available until after the comish quit for the weekend.

Legal problems troubling the industry's strategists arise from the shrewd drafting job by the commission's lawyers. Except for one rule banning network dualism, new regulations apply only to stations, not chains. It raises the serious question whether the webs would have any standing in court. NBC probably can get a temporary injunction delaying execution of the blue web, but the rest is uncertain. Affiliates are almost sure to be egged into seeking injunctions or to otherwise try to block application of radical policies, but there is no assurance networks, National Assn. of Broadcasters or others will be allowed in. Requests for a new hearing on the specific rules are possible, but all signs point to a comish refusal.

VOLUMINOUS BRIEFS

Fly and his pals think plenty of time already has been spent and everything pertinent has been previously said at hearings lasting six months, three days of arguments and in voluminous briefs.

Cornered by newspapermen for a reply to statements by NBC's Niles Trammell and Columbia's William S. Paley that the new regulations mark a step toward government control over broadcasting, Fly said, 'I don't react to those matters. I am simply calling them as I see them. I'll let them do the name calling. There's an orderly process for settling problems of this nature.'

PALEY COMMENTS ON FCC MONOPOLY REPORT

New York, May 5.—William S. Paley, president of Columbia Broadcasting System, offered the following comment on the monopoly report of Federal Communications Commission:

'About three weeks ago President Roosevelt appointed Mark Ethridge of Louisville to make for him a study of the whole field of radio broadcasting. Pointing out that he, the President, recognized that the principal function of the Government was to determine who should operate the limited number of transmitters and asking Ethridge to make recommendations as to how to keep radio free, prevent monopoly of ownership or operation, and how best to utilize radio in the public interest.

'Ethridge's appointment came at a time when broadcasters throughout the country were disquieted at the increasingly hostile attitude shown by a majority of the commission toward the industry, and particularly toward the principal networks, with the air full of rumors that the commission's monopoly report would be destructive.

'The appointment of Ethridge was welcomed by the industry because of his broad experience both in broadcasting and newspaper publishing, and because the appointment was interpreted as evidence that the President, who has fostered broadcasting throughout his years in the White House, had not suddenly switched to advocacy of a wrecking operation and was willing openmindedly to weigh all the facts before any effort was made to tamper with the existing structure.

'Hardly had Ethridge embarked upon his Presidential mission when the commission launches a report backed up by regulations calculated to torpedo the existing broadcasting structure and apparently defiant of the orderly process proposed by the President and defiant as well of the very limited powers conferred upon the commission by the Congress.

WARNS OF AUTHORITY

'While crediting the commission with cleverness in cloaking the inevitable results of its proposed action in language designed to make the public believe it is promoting what it is actually destroying, I feel it to be a public duty as head of one of the major networks to warn out of the depth of long experience and study that if the commission succeeds in the venture it now launches, networks will become mere catch-as-catch-can, fly-by-night sellers of programs. Permanence and stability will have departed from the industry and incentive to public service will have been removed from the broadcasting the American people know and like. Worst of all, the first paralyzing blow will have been struck at freedom of the air, because a commission which can exercise such drastic powers without even going to the Congress for authority to exercise them, will have reduced the networks and stations of America to impotent vassals, able to survive only so long as they please the regulatory authority.

'Ramming what the commission calls ''a Magna Charta'' down the throats of the affiliates of the major networks is really taking away from them that freedom of independent lawful action without which radio itself cannot remain free. This is true even though there may be opportunistic elements in the industry who will see in a sudden upset of the whole broadcasting structure a chance to gain temporary commercial advantage.

OPEN THREAT

'The fact that the commission has proposed to go so far, and that it openly threatens Government ownership or common carrier regulation if it is thwarted in its purpose, is evidence enough that the American people should be alarmed and on the alert. If these are strong words, they are measured ones. Competition in broadcasting exists now; its principal limitation is imposed by the physical limitation upon existing facilities. To make a fetish of competition to the extent the commission proposes makes as much sense to me as if one were to argue that freedom of the press cannot exist unless one national magazine is allowed to sell advertising in the columns of another.

'This argument is absurd. If the one making it were to add that his real purpose was to strengthen and improve the national magazines as a whole, his sincerity would come into question. The commission in its report and proposed actions persistently ignores the evidence. It disregards the remarkable progress of radio, the absence of substantial complaint and it insists upon considering the whole question of monopoly without giving the slightest weight to the fact that the networks and the stations of America are publicly committed to a policy of freedom and fairness of the air, devoid of any editorial bias whatsoever.

'I do not believe that either the President or the Congress will countenance what the commission seeks to do.'

'Kane' Goes Into Frisco Geary in Theatre Sked Shiftover

San Francisco, May 5.—Golden Gate theatre today received orders to pull 'Citizen Kane', which was scheduled to open May 14. No reason was given for the sudden order.

Tickets had been on sale two hours when the decision to yank 'Kane' was made. Money paid at the box office will be refunded.

Charles Koerner, district manager for RKO, last night explained the reason for 'Kane' not playing the Golden Gate. He said RKO had decided 'not to disturb the policy of the house', which plays combined bill of films and vaudeville.

CANADA SEES 50% DROP IN PIC PATRONS FROM TAX

Toronto, May 5.—Canadian exhibitors fear a 50% drop in attendance at picture houses as a result of the unexpected 20% tax on film receipts imposed by the Federal government in the latest budget regulations. Grosses have been skyrocketing during the past year due to increased employment and spending under war momentum.

J. J. Fitzgibbons, vice-president in charge of theatre operations for Famous Players-Canadian Corp., stated that new tax will be passed on to moviegoers. He pointed out that patrons in the lower income brackets, who constitute major source of picture house revenue, would be affected.

Commenting on the surprise tax Fitzgibbons said: 'We'll feel it. Faced with so many new taxes the Canadian people will have to curtail their spending in some way and will probably cut down on their amusement allotments first; the film industry is terribly surprised, but if this will win the war, everybody will do his share and no one in the film industry is going to object to doing his part.'

Latest war measure boosts amusement tax in the Province of Quebec to 36%. In Ontario, only province in Canada where no amusement tax heretofore has been levied, customers will pay the 20% boost.

New tax does not apply to legit theatres or concert halls.

Publicity Directors Committee by giving the local writers an opportunity to review productions here before the films are shipped east to be previewed or released for exhibition.

Freeman explained yesterday that the Producers were not being pressured into anything, but were merely backing up the recommendation of the Publicity Directors Committee, which had advised the correspondents that their complaint was just and that every step possible would be taken to remedy the situation. He indicated that the matter could be adjusted speedily if all parties would cooperate and work to the best interests of the industry. His letter was written some time before the correspondents began catching sneak previews.

The Publicity Directors Committee held a meeting yesterday, at which time it was agreed that a copy of Freeman's letter would be sent to the reviewers, together with one from the Committee explaining the steps being taken to adjust the situation. It is reported that the Committee also is taking up with the various companies the question of eliminating the holding of two and three important previews on the same night, taking the position that this also is an injustice to the correspondents.

The correspondents yesterday turned down a dinner invitation from Warners which was showing 'Affectionately Yours' at the Studio City theatre. The writers explained that an important sneak preview was scheduled and that they planned to catch it if it could be learned where the showing was scheduled.

The action of Freeman, however, was expected to result in a speedy and amicable settlement of the preview differences.

INDUSTRY WATCHES FCC MONOPOLY RULING

New York, May 6.—Federal Communications Commission monopoly ruling against the major networks is viewed in the film industry as a move toward further government regulation that might extend to the picture business. Executives were aware of the danger in stirring up new interest in Washington regarding a possible commission for the film industry as a result of FCC move to increase the number of radio networks and give wider latitude to individual stations in dealing with the chains.

Picture commission idea has been up in Congress before, but there hasn't been so much talk of it in Washington, even though counterpart of Neely bill and Federal censorship had been offered.

Nick Castle and Rene Hubert have been added to production staff on 'Jump For Joy', colored musical revue opening next month at the Mayan.

Marjorie Main will be one of the featured players in 'Honky Tonk', new Clark Gable-Lana Turner starrer at Metro which Jack Conway is directing.

Kemper Campbell, Jr., American graduate of Oxford, will act as technical advisor on 'Charley's Aunt', Jack Benny starrer at 20th-Fox, for sequences touching on the English university.

Benny the Gouge sez—With all those breezes blowing around Hollywood and Vine, you would think the studio flacks were holding a convention.

Hollywood Inside

DOWNTOWN dailies are carrying their peeve against radio beyond the pale of accuracy. During his recent domestic unpleasantness, John Christ of the J. Walter Thompson radio production staff was identified as producer of 'One Man's Family.' In reality, his connection with the family series, as of several months ago, was an agency contact, with Carlton Morse, writer and producer of the program. On the occasion of his being called into the army, Christ is still referred to as the 'Family' producer despite memorandums from both the Thompson agency and NBC some time ago to the city desks as to his then actual portfolio. Intelligence apparently was brushed aside as a scowl at radio and to justify importance of the story under a two-column head.

CANDLES that actually burn have long been a headache in matching scenes, but property men at Samuel Goldwyn's have now devised a method to keep candles the same length indefinitely. Candles are wired for electricity and piped for gas. Inside them is placed a 110-volt light bulb hooked onto a motor-driven rheostat which causes the light to flicker. The white gas flame burns and registers on the film. Flickering light bulb gives the effect exactly of a candle (which a real candle will not do). With this device it is not necessary to throw a spot behind the candle, for the flickering light emerges from the rear side. Studio figures to save upwards of $600 on this arrangement during shooting of 'The Little Foxes.'

ONE of the most exacting scenes in years of picture making was the one-shot Director Michael Curtiz had to get for Warners 'Dive Bomber', calling for every facility of the U. S. Naval Air base at San Diego: 200 fighting planes, 2,000 uniformed men, 400 fliers, 1,000 men of ground crews, as well as some $500,000 worth of stellar actor material. Scene was filmed in Technicolor, and there was no chance of a retake. U. S. Navy cooperated fully for the one-shot, and Curtiz had to take the gamble. During time of filming entire Navy base was tied up and work in every hangar and machine shop ceased. To prepare the scene entire Warners crew worked through the night before.

ALTHOUGH George Schaefer has struggled during the last week to clear the RKO reorganization decks in New York, there is no evidence that unsettled conditions at the studio or in the theatre operating department have been unwrinkled. He spent the week trying to persuade John J. O'Connor, RKO circuit head, and Fred Meyers, chief booker, to withdraw their resignations. On the financial front, also ending last week, Floyd Odlum's Atlas Corporation obtained a 60-day extension of the option it holds to acquire the Meehan stock interests in Keith-Albee-Orpheum.

CURRENT practice of actors carrying on hot and heavy gin-rummy games between picture takes on the sets is causing the publicity unit workers a big headache. Having to catch players between scenes for interviews, still shots and other necessary exploitation fodder, flacks now find that it is as hard to break up a gin-rummy session, and just as disastrous, as it is to halt a scene for some publicity duty. With only the between-scenes time allowed for such work, unit men are hoping Hollywood adopts a new fad that will not require so much concentration by the players.

REQUESTS for early vacations are hitting studio department heads this season more so than any in the past. Reason for sudden rush of many lot employes to get their annual two-week holiday behind them is expectations of draft calls and uncertainty as to what the next few months will bring as regards national issues. Heretofore most workers tried to space holidays for late summer or early fall and this year's rush is causing plenty of scrambling for the periods to be juggled around so no department will be too much under-staffed.

And now the movie censor has proclaimed a law profound:
That players who are making love keep one foot on the ground.
It conjures up the early days when you were skipping school
And gathered in a smoky joint to shoot a game of pool.

And when you stretched your limbs to snag the eight-ball or the ten,
The one-foot-on-the-carpet law was potent, even then.
And though the censor may be chaste as old Sir Galahad,
He must have been a shark at pool when he was but a lad.

King of the Zombies

(Melodrama)

Monogram production and release. Features Dick Purcell, Joan Woodbury, Mantan Moreland. Cast: Henry Victor, John Archer, Patricia Stacey, Guy Usher, Marguerite Whitten, Leigh Whippen, Madame Sul-Te-Wan, Jimmy Davis, Lawrence Criner. Director, Jean Yarbrough. Producer, Lindsley Parsons. Photography, Mack Stengler. Screenplay, Edmond Kelso. Musical direction, Edward Kay. Film editor, Richard Currier. Settings, Dave Milton. Art direction, Charles Clague. Previewed May 6. Running time: 67 mins.

Monogram's 'King of the Zombies' is a well-contrived chiller, sure to evoke squeals of delighted horror from all but the audiences that sit on their hands at mystery shows. It should more than return its investment from that market for which it is aimed.

Dick Purcell, John Archer and the latter's Negro valet, Manton Moreland, are flying to an ocean island when their plane crashes on another island near the gloomy castle of Henry Victor, a mysterious doctor from Vienna. Victor lives with his wife, Patricia Stacy; his niece, Joan Woodbury, and a collection of zombies. He makes the superstitious natives think the zombies are automatons returned from the dead. Actually they are under the voodoo spell of Victor and Madame Sul-Te-Wan, ancient voodoo priestess.

Victor plots against his guests, for he has imprisoned in another part of the castle Guy Usher, an admiral whose plane has crashed on the island a few days earlier. He also has a secret radio station over which he transmits national defense secrets to the Nazis. Purcell, Archer and Moreland discover the plot, break up a voodoo ceremony and rescue Usher and Miss Woodbury as the zombies turn on Victor.

Archer easily takes the acting honors among the sympathetic characters, and Victor is a thoroughly reprehensible heavy. Moreland and Marguerite Whitten supply most of the numerous laughs, with the Negro's traditional fear of ghosts being well exploited by the story. Purcell has top billing, although his role is not as important as Archer's. He and Miss Woodbury give a good account of themselves. Others deserving mention are Usher, Madame Sul-Te-Wan, Patricia Stacey, Leigh Whippen, Jimmy Davis and Lawrence Criner.

Direction of Jean Yarbrough and certain minor weaknesses in the story make the action too slow at times, but the dimly-lit scenes, gloomy, cavernous interiors and the tense excitement in many of the situations, rate Producer Lindsley Parsons a bouquet. Technical assistance is adequate.

Welles Has Definite Offers From Alex Korda, Warners

New York, May 6.—Orson Welles has definite offers of a producer berth from Warners and Alexander Korda, with other studios making less definite overtures. While RKO is endeavoring to hold Welles after one more picture to which he is committed, Welles is reported 'listening to all offers' with determining factor not money or terms but 'artistic integrity'.

Welles apparently wants complete freedom to film scripts of his own choice without consultation with studio heads. Welles asserted that as long as studio has final okay on screenplays chances of obtaining 'complete artistic integrity' are nil.

Wells has left Columbia Artists management and is being handled by Al Schneider, who resigned from Columbia Artists to handle Welles exclusively. Welles' pact with CA permitted him to break away whenever Schneider did.

New York, May 6.—A report from the Coast that Kenneth Thomson has placed Lee Travers in temporary charge of the Los Angeles local of the American Guild of Variety Artists came as a shocking surprise to AGVA officials here. Travers was a Hoyt Haddock appointee as Philadelphia executive secretary. Later he was sent to Chicago as national representative, from which post he was discharged.

Officials here said yesterday that no action will be taken on the matter until receipt of a full report from Thomson.

The executive board of the Los Angeles local of the American Guild of Variety Artists, at a meeting yesterday, approved the actions taken by Kenneth Thomson since he agreed to assume supervision of the reorganization program. Freeman Strikes At Enemies Of Pic Industry ing the film industry and its 'front-page people'.

'They will no doubt continue to call us war mongers and many other names', Freeman stated to the 350 Ad Club members. 'Our answer is that we will stand on our record. To the best of our ability, we are striving to render to our government that service they have requested of us. If those who criticize us object to this procedure, let them tell the American public what they would do.

'Our people are news, however. This is a front page business. As a result, certain individuals have attempted to turn our efforts on behalf of National Defense into headlines for themselves, by attacking this effort. Attacks of this nature are not new to us in the Motion Picture Industry. Now, because we are attempting to do a job as part of the National Defense program, a small group has again discovered that we are front page people.

'We have no subsidies in this industry for our work. We make no profit from training films. For every minute of playing time that is taken from the screen of America, we lose so much playing time for our own pictures. We ask no praise for these services. We are merely doing what every other good American industry is doing—supporting his country's efforts for defense.'

DEFENSE PROGRAM

Freeman listed many of the contributions of the industry to the defense program, including newsreel coverage of skilled workers in defense jobs, of trainees in army camps whom the army wants to be shown to their families at home, trailers in theatres for recruiting soldiers and workers, army training films being produced by the Academy Research Council under Lieut. Col. Darryl F. Zanuck, commercial pictures portraying the army, navy and air force backgrounds, cooperation with the Nelson A. Rockefeller-John Hay Whitney government committee for Latin American Amity, etc. He also disclosed that the president of the British Board of Trade considered American films so important to the morale in England that he expressed a desire that film imports be maintained at the highest possible level. He said the American Neutrality Act has excepted motion picture film in its exports.

Kenneth Thomson, executive secretary of the Screen Actors Guild and executive secretary of the Motion Picture Society for the Americas, presided as chairman. Major Mason Wright, Jr., who has just arrived from the War Department in Washington for conferences with the Production Defense Committee, also spoke. He said 'history will record the importance of the motion picture industry's contributions to our national defense program. The industry is doing a heroic job. And its work in this country on behalf of civilian and military morale has not yet even scratched the surface of its possibilities.'

Others attending the luncheon included Colonel A. Perrin, of the War Department General Staff; Col. Richard Schlossberg, head of the photographic division of the Signal Corps; Captain Gordon Mitchell, manager of the Academy Research Council; John Joseph, A. H. McCausland, George Brown, John LeRoy Johnston, Bob Doman, Howard Strickling, Barrett Kiesling, Leo Doland and Fred W. Beetson. Entertainment was furnished by 'Red' Skelton of Metro, and Susanna Foster and Betty Loehr, of Paramount.

My White Tie, James!

NBC will try for an innovation at the Jack Benny testimonial dinner in Biltmore Bowl Friday night by making it 100% dress-up affair. Notices went out yesterday to the working press, photographers and newsreelers to deck out in formal getup. Formal aspect of the tribute to the comedian's 10th year on the air is being stressed in the invitations and all communications with the invitees by Clay Morgan, NBC exec in charge of arrangements.

Morgan yesterday dispatched NBC page boys on the rounds for personal delivery of admittance cards, which carry the table locations. Accommodations have been made for 1,268 guests, with Benny to be flanked at the speakers' table by 39 radio and picture execs.

Decision was reached yesterday by NBC not to do a broadcast from the Bowl on account of the preponderance of speeches. Half-hour program will be aired nationally an hour before the festivities begin from three pickup points around the country.

All Major Co. Execs To Be Exam'ed In NY Trust Suit

New York, May 6.—Officers and directors of all major film companies must stand examination before trial in New York Federal court in connection with the $900,000 triple damage anti-trust suit brought against them and MPPDA by Hillside Amusement Company. Judge Murray Hulbert ordered examination today in Federal court.

Plaintiff, operating the Mayfair theatre, Hillside, N. J., claims defendants violated anti-trust laws by giving each other preferred runs, imposing score charges on the Mayfair, forcing it to overpay for film, and favoring each other on availability and playdates of pictures.

CHAS. RYAN ASSIGNED FOR WALT DISNEY HEARING

statement: 'William R. Walsh, acting regional director of the 21st Regional Office of the National Labor Relations Board, today announced that he had, at the board's direction, issued a complaint against Walt Disney Productions, Inc., charging that the Walt Disney Productions, Inc., interfered with and dominated a labor organization known as the Federation of Screen Cartoonists.

'The complaint charges that the respondent, acting through its officers, agents, servants, intermediaries and others, including without limitation Walt Disney, Roy Disney, Gunther Lessing, Art Babbitt, Bill Roberts, Dave Hand, Harold Miles, Charles Phillipi, Norman Ferguson, Ted Sears, A. G. Kenner and others, incurred, dominated and interfered with the formation and administration of the Federation, and continued its support and assistance to it by encouraging and assisting in its formation at the time when several of the company employes were indicating their interest in several labor organizations affiliated with the American Federation of Labor. The complaint details the allegations against the company and charges that the company has violated the National Labor Relations Act, Section A, subdivisions 1 and 2.

'Mr. Walsh announced that the attorney assigned to handle the case was Mr. Charles A. Ryan. Mr. Ryan was graduated from Notre Dame Law School in 1935 and joined the staff of the NLRB in 1937. He has acted as field examiner and attorney for the board, and as attorney tried the Harlan County coal cases, the records of which the Department of Labor later used as the basis for the Civil Liberties prosecutions in Harlan County. Mr. Ryan also tried the Eagle Ottawa Leather Case, which resulted in the board's order requiring the company to reinstate 180 persons with back pay, the disestablishment of four company unions and the payment of back wages for approximately four years. The amount of the back pay has not yet been determined, but it is estimated that it will run into many hundreds of thousands of dollars.'

The unfair labor practice complaint was filed with the NLRB by the Screen Cartoonists Guild, which claims to represent a big majority of the 700 cartoon workers at the Disney plant. Details of the complaint charge that company officers attended Federation meetings on company property and on company time, and that employes were encouraged to affiliate with it in preference to the SCG. George E. Bodle is attorney for the Guild, and is being aided in negotiations by Herbert Sorrell, business representative of Moving Picture Painters Local 644; Aubrey Blair, American Federation of Labor organizer, and Lyle Shrader, international representative of the Brotherhood of Painters.

BODLE TELLS SOEG TO FORCE STAND

Attorney George E. Bodle told members of the Screen Office Employes Guild last night at the Roosevelt hotel that preliminary sparring with the major companies over the White Collar contract is about over and that it is now time for the Guilders to take a determined stand. He said that complete counter-proposals have been received from all the studios where negotiations have been in progress.

Bodle recommended that the Guild center its drive on the major demands and not be drawn into bickerings with the Producers on trivial matters. He said that these could be argued out after the basic agreement is signed. It was stated that negotiations with Metro had been slowed by the absence of Nicholas Nayfack, head of the studio negotiating committee, but that another meeting with that company is scheduled for tonight.

The Guild agreed to contribute $10 per week for five weeks to the KFWB program, This Is America, sponsored by American Federation of Labor crafts to combat passage of anti-labor legislation at Sacramento.

AFL ORDERS PROBE OF EXTRA SITUATION

Class A members and that approximately 8,000 members are denied a vote.

The wire from Green to Mayo stated:

'I have requested our representative, Meyer L. Lewis, to confer with you, investigate complaints submitted and report to me.'

The wire was in reply to one from Mayo which stated:

'I petition you to appoint a committee to make an investigation of the AAAA's (Associated Actors and Artistes of America) undemocratic setup whereby the Screen Actors Guild, a branch of the AAAA, governed by 1,100 Class A members, have denied a vote to the rest of the membership of approximately 8,000 members.'

It is understood that Lewis, who checked for San Francisco yesterday, will, or has already instructed Aubrey Blair, AFofL Hollywood organizer and Lewis' representative here, to confer with Kenneth Thomson, SAG executive secretary, and other Guild executives and to report back to him. It is understood that either Blair or Lewis also will contact Mayo and other extra leaders who have been making a fight for the right of Class B members to vote.

Simultaneously with the action, Green reported from the east that the AFofL Executive Council at its meeting in Washington May 19 will reopen the question of the AAAA being organized into one big union. Two years ago when the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes made a move to extend its labor jurisdiction over the entire film industry, the AFofL directed that the AAAA's be organized into an international union along the lines of the IATSE, Teamsters and other film crafts. Several surveys were made, but no definite action has ever been taken to carry out the AFofL recommendation.

It is understood that several leaders in the American Guild of Variety Artists also have contacted Green and other AFofL tops, complaining that the membership is given little or no say in operations and policies of the organization, and that it is now controlled by AAAA leaders. AGVA now is being operated by an AAAA committee, and Kenneth Thomson recently assumed supervisory control over the Los Angeles local after the ouster of Kenneth Howard as executive secretary. He agreed to act upon receipt of a request signed by a majority of members of the local AGVA board, and after the move had been approved by the national board.

The SAG abolished its Council some time ago, following approval of the action by Class B members in a mail ballot. Since that time the extras have had no direct representation in the Guild, their affairs being handled by the board of directors, members of which are elected by a vote of Class A members only. When the mail ballot was conducted a majority of the extras voted to have the board handle their affairs, approved abolition of the Council, and turned thumbs down on a suggestion that a special committee be named to represent them. Extra leaders, however, claimed the ballot was confusing and that many of the Class B members did not realize they were voting out their only representatives in the Guild.

Scribes Fail to Get Freeman Letter

Hollywood correspondents who had been demanding that pictures be previewed here before being screened elsewhere stated last night they had not received a copy of Y. Frank Freeman's letter to the major companies asking that where possible the writers' request be complied with, nor had they received any official answer from anybody. When shown a copy of the letter released by Jock Lawrence's Studio Publicity Directors Committee, several of them handed out the following statement:

'Referring to the statement issued by the Producers last night—which none of the members of the press have received—and with special reference to the last paragraph of the letter which says "we are grateful to the members of the press who have maintained the traditional ethics of the newspaper profession by not catching sneak previews"—it is a distinction to be called unethical by experts.'

Those who could be reached indicated that the Freeman letter did not clear up the situation, and added that the group would continue to catch sneak previews until the Producers agreed to preview all pictures here before screening them elsewhere. It was pointed out that no mention was made by Freeman or the committee to the request that the writers be given at least two weeks' clearance after previewing a picture here.

Mees Paper Highlites SMPE Confabs

Rochester, May 6.—Second day of spring convention of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers here was highlighted by paper by Dr. C. E. K. Mees of Eastman Kodak, who declared that scientific research in motion pictures is being transformed from chaos to an orderly network of facts; and the newly developed electron microscope will be invaluable in study of graininess and further reduction of the latter on film negative and positive. President Emery Huse was toastmaster at the convention banquet tonight.

Armand Schaefer has four assignments coming up and has completed seven on this year's program. The new quartet are 'Big Bonanza', John Wayne starrer; 'Mercy Island', and two untitled, one of latter to be a Weaver Brothers feature, the other to feature Lulabelle and Scotty with other radio name entries.

Albert J. Cohen has four productions coming up, headed in importance by 'Memphis Belle', musical budgeted at $750,000, his most pretentious feature to date; 'Pardon My Stripes', being scripted by Mauri Grashin and Robert Shannon; 'The Devil Pays Off', from story by George W. Yates and Julian Zimet, and 'Navy Blue Eyes', being written by Milt Gross.

(Reprinted from the May 7 edition of Weekly Variety, which will be on Pacific Coast newsstands Saturday)

RANK-AND-FILE membership in the Screen Writers Guild is growing impatient with the interminable, long drawn out and constantly postponed negotiations with the film studios for adoption of a contract covering scenarists' working conditions.

There is talk of a 'strike-vote' among Guild members, many of whom have expressed greater dissatisfaction with their own leadership than with the Producers' group.

Retakes

By GEORGE E. PHAIR

A motion picture, fashioned overseas,
Is screened in some secluded filming mart
And snooty fans go into rhapsodies:
'Ah, that is art!'

A 'B' production filmed in Hollywood
Is not obsessed by high artistic plans.
The common folks in yonder neighborhood
Are screeno fans.

The ermined fans come flocking out to see
If made in Hollywood, the film would be
A lot of tripe.

Picture makers from here, there and everywhere sent emissaries to find out what is wrong with Hollywood, and copy the technique.

Mark Twain started something when he trained frogs. Even when he weighted the favorite down with buckshot. The boys didn't use sponges or batteries in those days, and a frog hopped on his own, without the aid or detriment of a jockey, or trainer, or politician or studio exec.

Now comes a Jumping Frog Jubilee, at Angels Camp, May 16-17-18, if any of you frogs want to know, and there will be competition, amateur and pro. The pure A.A.U. frogs won't have a chance. It is a pro tournament, with sponsors, and a flock of entries like Al Pearce, Blondie, Cecil B. DeMille, Hedda Hopper, (a perfect name for a Frog Derby), Louella Parsons, Conrad Nagel, Edward G. Robinson, Mary Astor and Amos and Andy, entered as a team.

With those names there is going to be a lot of elbowing and whatnot. Cecil B. DeMille will probably turn out to be a chameleon and win the race in Technicolor, ridden by a North West Mountie.

George Bricker goes and writes a novel, titled 'Ohio', and gets a commission as Honorary Lieutenant Governor, which is across the river and one step above an Honorary Kentucky Colonel, neither of which is good to crash the gate at the Kentucky Derby.

Willie Collier (William Collier, Sr. to you) and Joseph Cawthorne (Joe Cawthorne to you) are putting on a sketch at the Masquers tonight. A couple of kids trying to get along without the aid of a radio quiz. Other youngsters on the program are Weber and Fields and the Duncan Sisters. It is Family Night, and what a family!

Into our town comes Paul Leyssac, lecturer, dramatist and authority on Hans Christian Andersen. Maybe it is just as well to have a referee around when Sam Goldwyn and Walt Disney go into a clinch about those fairy tales.

One Night In Lisbon

Paramount release of an Edward H. Griffith production. Stars Fred MacMurray and Madeleine Carroll. Supporting cast: Patricia Morison, Billie Burke, John Loder, Dame May Whitty, Edmund Gwenn, Reginald Denny, Billy Gilbert, Marcel Dalio, Bruce Wyndham, Jerry Mandy. Directed by Edward H. Griffith. Screenplay by Virginia Van Upp. Based on play by John Van Druten. Photography, Bert Glennon. Music direction, Sigmund Krumgold. Art direction, Hans Dreier and Ernst Fegte. Edited by Eda Warren. Costumes, Edith Head. Previewed May 7. Running time: 97 mins.

This is as slick and engaging a love tale as has come out of the Hollywood romance hoppers in a long time. A romantic comedy, it is both comic and romantic in a peculiarly charming way and will find welcome amongst all kinds and shades of audiences from the big towns to the cross-roads. It will outgross many a more arrogant entry in the long run, both from its own home studio, Paramount, and others.

The romantic siege laid against Madeleine Carroll, a very proper English maid, by Fred MacMurray, a brash young Texan who ferries bombers across the briny, is laid against the present war scenes of London and Lisbon. The twain meet in a bomb shelter. MacMurray wastes no time. He describes himself and his clan to the competing suitor for the beautiful lady, a stuffed British uniform, as 'the advancing Houstons'. He is easily identified as the most advancingest.

The delightfully conceived and scripted tale by Virginia Van Upp employs the socially ritualistic breeding of the English girl, who is wartime auto driver and confidential messenger for a Lord Fitzleigh, and her virginal retreats from the aggressions of the bomber pilot as the medium of credible suspense, even after MacMurray has broken through the first lines of defense with sustained kissfire. Warmth and scope of the story also gives Miss Carroll the foundation for her most persuasive performance, flawless in its characterization of a very reserved and decorous maid, overwhelmed toward marriage after only two days' acquaintance with the Texas hurricane.

MacMurray is at his best in this kind of 'advancing' romance, and here does a perfect job of breaking down the girl's resistance of her heart's desire and the fuddy-duddy interferences of the British wooer, a navy officer, handsomely played by John Loder. Patricia Morison parades her allure and her skill in a few striking scenes as the ex-wife of MacMurray. Billie Burke, less wacky than usual, is effective as an English hostess and friend of Miss Carroll. Dame May Whitty is thoroughly in character as Miss Carroll's privileged servant. Edmund Gwenn has a choice part as the war-time executive who tion to ascertain why they are not getting the gratis advertising and publicity that they believe their efforts entitle them to. There is current among them the apprehension that film directors are taking too many bows for the finer creative points, to which the writers alone are entitled.

Any parallel between the two dilemmas may appear somewhat remote on the surface of things, but actually there is definite relationship.

SCREEN writers several years ago were regarded throughout the industry as important contributors to the ever-growing art of motion picture production. Among them were many who appreciated the showmanship necessity of keeping their talents and their accomplishments sufficiently before the trade as to merit recognition for their individual efforts. Names of a few possessed box office value. The scenarist occupied a pivotal cog in the production machinery.

His importance is no less today, but much less appreciated, chiefly through circumstances of his own making. Screen Writers Guild several years ago adopted a resolution condemning self-exploitation by its members on the theory that such practices were 'undignified'.

THAT was the night P. T. Barnum turned over in his grave. If screen writers now are faced with studio procrastination, as they claim, they have only to look into the management and rules of their own Guild to find out the reasons.

Having placed no importance on the value of self-exploitation, there is no reason for them to look elsewhere for encomiums.

In show business no one ever was acclaimed greater than his own estimate of his own importance. Neither talent, nor a light, can shine when covered by a bushel. Both Broadway and Vine street are thickly populated with showfolk, out of work, who boast wonderful scrapbooks of press clippings. The men and women who always are on the payrolls, in good times and bad, insure their careers with unceasing exploitation of their own origination.

They never have to knock at doors. The wickets swing when they approach.

Settlement Digested Over 'Kids,' NBC Program Mixup

Basis for settlement of claims by Davis & Pearson agency, and its clients, Lime Cola, against NBC for refusal to put 'Kids of the Week' on the Coast blue network, is under discussion following a meeting in offices of counsel for the sponsor. Law firm of Penny, Trippett & Calloway, representing Lime Cola, served notice on NBC that a proffer of settlement would be expected within three days, indicating that legal action would be instituted against the chain.

Agency, according to Don Davis, is asking NBC to reimburse it for $3,051 expended on the program through talent commitments, the printing of 100,000 folders and other incidental expense. Lime Cola has not made known its claims or demands.

NBC refused air time to Lime Cola's 'Kids of the Week' three weeks ago, claiming that its formula was too similar to that of another NBC program, 'Quiz Kids'. Davis contends that the chain's policy should apply to 'Dr. I. Q., Jr.', a new entry on NBC from Chicago Sunday for Mars candy. He declared that its formula is more to the pattern of 'Quiz Kids' than his 'Kids of the Week'.

NBC has offered to make the Sunday time available to Lime Cola if it will accept a substitute program, but sponsor has declined the compromise.

TRAMMELL WEIGHS MOVE TO COMBAT FCC 'REFORMS' left New York and that nothing had developed to clarify the situation.

Trammell indicated that one of three avenues of appeal would be utilized to counteract the effects of the comish's so-called Magna Charta. They are (1) appeal to President Roosevelt, (2) appeal to Congress, (3) appeal to the courts. Although he hinted some plan of action might be formulated this week, he was more inclined to a definite move after the report had been roundly discussed with him by the network's station heads.

'I can't believe that the American system of broadcasting will be destroyed, because the people won't permit it', declared Trammell. 'Surely the action of the commission can't be predicated on complaints from listeners, advertising agencies or stations. These three elements are entirely satisfied with the present panorama of entertainment, education and culture afforded by the system the FCC seeks to destroy. If the new regulations are put into effect they will change an American institution enjoyed and respected in this country for 20 years.'

Trammell at noon today will be guest at a luncheon at Perino's, to be attended by executives of the picture industry. He is expected to tell them of the dangers that confront the film business through government regulation if the FCC 'reforms' for radio are put into effect within the prescribed 90 days. Yesterday, after attending a luncheon at the California Club, which brought out the town's civic and business leaders, he addressed the 180 employes of NBC here. He also conferred with Earle C. Anthony, owner of KFI-KECA. Don Gilman, western division head of the web, arranged and presided at the luncheons.

Bertha Brainard, NBC head of program and talent sales, was grounded in Indianapolis en route here for the Benny festivities, and trains in tomorrow.

Both groups expressed hope that considerable progress would be made tonight, but Guild shop stewards continued to discuss with studio writers the possibility of a work stoppage unless a deal is set. The Producer-SWG contract expired in April, but the Guild has continued to arbitrate screen credit disputes since that time. takes time out from state worries to help settle his driver's heart affairs. Reginald Denny, Billy Gilbert, Marcel Dalio, Bruce Wyndham and Jerry Mandy get interesting individual color into their contributions.

Producer-Director Edward H. Griffith displays the quality of his film craftsmanship and the inspiration of his players in one of his finest productions. The story telling is smooth, vivid, exciting and neatly conclusive. The playfulness in the intimate love scenes is delightful. The presence of the war is suggested in the sound of bombings and the detailed technique of the blackout, but these alarms never intrude too much upon the pure entertainment nature of the picture. Even a spy chapter is turned into amusement and related comically to the romance, rather than melodramatically. For the first time in American films, the song, 'There'll Always Be An England', is chanted, and very impressively, in a cellar night club.

Virginia Van Upp, in this, her fourth collaboration with Director Griffith, has made her script lush with romantic playfulness and freshly contrived behavior detail, especially the use by MacMurray of his seductive duck call. The dialog is bright and uses innuendo discreetly for adult consumption, and solid laughs. Love in a world of hate is its sustained theme.

Edith Head has done a beautiful job of costuming for Miss Carroll. Bert Glennon's camera does much to enhance the production quality. Balance of technical support is first class. Picture has elegance as well as superlative entertainment merit.

New Charges Hit AAAA Setup; AGVA Protests Election Methods

tists have protested both to the national AGVA board and the AFofL over the methods used in the AGVA national election.

In affidavits forwarded to the AFofL president the members stated they considered certain actions during the election of national board members to 'be equivalent to stuffing the ballot'. They claim members of the Bay City local were not given an opportunity for a free expression, and that the local board had even refused to accept their protest.

Simultaneously, it was learned that Aubrey Blair, AFofL Hollywood organizer, has been designated by Meyer Lewis, western director for the Federation, to contact SAG officials and get their version of why Class B members are not permitted to vote on policy matters or the selection of Guild officers and personnel. Blair has been actively engaged in the citrus strike at Ventura, but is expected to contact Kenneth Thomson and other SAG tops the last of this week.

Guild officials stated yesterday that they had received no official notification that the AFofL was interested in internal affairs of the organization. They pointed out that the Class B members themselves voted to abolish their Council and had requested that their affairs be handled by the SAG board of directors. They stated that no cognizance would be taken of the situation unless some official word was received from the Federation.

Notice that the AFofL was ordering an investigation of the situation was contained in a telegram received by Harry Mayo, chairman of the Extras Advisory Council, from William Green. He said he had requested Meyer Lewis to confer with Mayo, investigate the complaint and report to him (Green). Mayo had charged the AAAA setup is undemocratic in that it permits the Screen Actors Guild to be governed by 1,100 Class A members and denies a vote to the other membership of approximately 8,000 members.

It was indicated yesterday that a report will be furnished Green in time for him to place it before the AFofL Executive Council when it meets in Washington Monday (19). At that time it was hinted the Council may be asked to reopen the tiff of two years ago when AFofL leaders recommended the formation of one big actor union.

Hollywood Inside

THE entire current issue of the 'Hollywood Merry Go Round' is devoted to an analysis of the bill of particulars in the Willie Bioff income tax case, with special emphasis on its relations to pending negotiations between the Producers and studio unions of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes. The 'Merry Go Round's Watchman' first asks 'Why has the Painters' representative (Herbert Sorrell), operating without his International's support and as an autonomous union, been able to complete deal after deal with the Producers that have proven highly satisfactory to his membership? What have the powerful IA locals (representing an economic strength of membership second to no organized group in the studios) and operating through the business agents committee, not done so well in closing a new deal for their membership.' After asking a few additional questions as to why the IATSE locals have not been able to set a new deal, the 'Watchman' reviews the Bioff bill of particulars, and then continues: '(Exclusive and confidential). It is reported that immediately upon the rendering of the wage and hour decision, this week, by the Federal Government that the International Alliance will enter into negotiations for the unions, probably in the east. It may be another 10% farce. Immediately it will be nullified by cuts that will eliminate its effect. Will the International attempt to negotiate alone (as in the past) by cooling the heels of the local representatives outside? Is the deal in the making now in the east? (by the gift method).' IATSE tops have been unsuccessful in their efforts to identify the 'Watchmen' and his sponsors of the 'Hollywood Merry Go Round.'

BANK NIGHT frauds, extending over a period of several years, and including theatres in Orange county as well as in Long Beach, Glendale and Pasadena, have been cleared up, it is believed, by the arrest at Santa Ana of six youths, all of whom were at one time or another employed by the Milt Arthur Fox-West Coast operated theatres there and in Anaheim and Fullerton. Confessions are claimed by the police to have elicited the information that the sextet illegally grabbed $2,200 in bank night giveaways in Orange county, and a total of $5,600 in Southern California. It appears that Bernie put a substitute band there on the nights of his broadcasts, which, the restaurant people contend, is a violation of the pact and invalidates the agreement. Scattergood Pulls the Strings

(Drama)

RKO Radio production. Cast: Guy Kibbee, Bobs Watson, Susan Peters, James Corner, Emma Dunn, Dink Trout, Monte Blue, Carl Stockdale, Paul White, Fern Emmett, Lee 'Lasses' White, Ann Shoemaker, Gordon Hart, Howard Hickman, Earl Hodgins, Rex, dog. Directed by Christy Cabanne. Assistant director, John E. Burch. Produced by Jerrold T. Brandt. Screenplay by Christy Cabanne and Bernard Schubert. Based on Clarence Budington Kelland's 'Scattergood Baines' stories. Photography, Jack Mackenzie. Musical score, Constantin Bakaleinikoff. Film editor, Desmond Marquette. Previewed May 8. Running time: 69 mins.

This is a simple, folksy, country-philosophy type of drama which has been geared for the dual bill audience, and, as such, will fill the bill nicely as a programmer in the secondary runs. Christy Cabanne rates credit for a workmanlike job in piloting a none-too-meaty screenplay into acceptable and often absorbing theatre.

Most notable weaknesses are in the romantic interludes where Susan Peters and James Corner, juve leads, have been permitted to struggle valiantly but vainly with inane chatter. For the rest it's a story of the small-town sage who plays friend, counsellor and benefactor to the entire community. In this magnanimous character delineation Guy Kibbee conducts himself with urbanity, skill and commendable restraint.

In the second of this series (six in all are scheduled for delivery), young Bobs Watson displays remarkable trouping ability as the freckle-faced kid vagabond runaway from a state home for boys. Two of his scenes are standout tear-jerkers; one with Guy Kibbee on a fishing spree on the banks of a quiet stream when the youngster's voice reaches a high-pitched tremelo, and again when he catches up with the fugitive father.

The homeless waif motif should register strongly in the lesser situations for which the film is aimed. Yarn unfolds with boy being given a home by the kindly Scattergood, who then proceeds to straighten out a homicide rap on which kid's father was framed. The man who plays God at the same time takes a hand in a youthful romance, showing a visionary young inventor that though color-television idea may be a remote financial payoff, there's gold in a chemical by-product that removes freckles and other facial blemishes.

In supporting role as Bobs' father Monte Blue contributes a first rate performance. He shows as a valuable cast asset. Others who appear to advantage in minor assignments are Emma Dunn, Dink Trout, Paul White, Fern Emmett and Carl Stockdale.

Trammell Sez Much Ground Yet To Be Covered in Ascap Setup

Admitting that some progress has been made toward a settlement of the broadcaster-music fight, Niles Trammell, NBC president, yesterday told a press conference at the Ambassador hotel that 'we're still not together'. He added that both the National Assn. of Broadcasters committee and that representing the American Society of Composers, Authors & Publishers are making a sincere effort to settle the four-month-old controversy without animus or chip-on-shoulder attitude.

Trammell declined to hazard a guess on when Ascap music would be back on the major nets but indicated that there was still much ground to cover before a settlement would be reached. He said that the music matter would occupy considerable of the time of broadcasters at the St. Louis convention next week.

Boycott of radio news by downtown dailies, especially coverage of the Jack Benny testimonial dinner tonight, drew a rebuke from Trammell. He said he couldn't understand why a dinner in honor of a celebrity who has given his time and talent to so many benefits wasn't worthy of news coverage. He declared that such an attitude by the press toward radio has nowhere else been evident.

> Niles Trammell and Frank Freeman struck up a fast friendship at yesterday's luncheon. Both Georgians, they were attracted by each other's accent. 'Finally someone who speaks my language', exalted Freeman as he put his arm across Trammell's shoulder.

Contemplated divorce of radio stations from their newspaper ownership and operation prompted the remark from the chain head that they are doing an excellent job of running their plants and he had never known of an instance where they imposed their editorial policy on dialers to their stations.

That television will be retarded by the lack of facilities necessary to manufacture of receiving sets and transmitters was belief of Trammell. He said national defense orders have priority over materials needed to make television commercially possible.

Trammell was guest at a luncheon yesterday attended by 50 film executives. He made off-the-record reference to the Federal Communications Commission's monopoly report and hinted 'what happens to us might happen to you'. Other speakers were L. B. Mayer, H. M. Warner, Frank Freeman and Don Gilman.

The following joint statement was issued by the Producers and the Guild representatives:

'Representatives of the Screen Writers Guild met with the Producers committee to continue negotiations for a contract. The Producers presented counter-proposals which the Guild representatives are taking back to the executive board for discussion. A further meeting between the two groups was set for Tuesday evening, May 13.'

The demand will be taken up at the meeting of the SWG executive committee Monday night (12). If the proposals are not considered acceptable, the board has the authority to reject them without even submitting them to the general membership which is insisting that all speculative writing be eliminated and that all flat deals under $5,000 be abolished. Reorganization of 4A's Off AF of L Program For Wash. Session

Washington, May 8. — Nothing about the two-year-old proposal for reorganization of the Associated Actors and Artistes of America into one big union is on the agenda for the American Federation of Labor Executive Council meeting here Monday (19), but it can be brought up by anybody interested. No word of such suggestion has been received here so far.

William Green, AFofL prexy, has received numerous communications about the extra situation in the Screen Actors Guild, but nobody at AFofL headquarters will say what will be done. The complaints and requests have been referred to various individuals for 'study'.

Green, however, in a telegram to Harry Mayo, chairman of the Extras Advisory Council, stated he had requested Meyer L. Lewis, AFofL western director, to contact him, 'investigate the complaint and report to me'. It is reported that the complaints are based on the extras' demands for full voting privileges in the Guild.

It was stated here last night that Meyer L. Lewis had instructed Aubrey Blair, AFofL Hollywood organizer, to discuss the situation with Kenneth Thomson and other Guild officials. Blair was expected to contact Thomson today or the first of next week.

Columbia Recording Strike Washup Seen by Monday

General Manager Paul E. Crowley restated the position of the company favoring departmental seniority instead of plantwide seniority, but offered to make concessions regarding layoffs. The union argued for plantwide seniority, contending that was the only way in which the rights of the employes could be protected.

In opening the meeting Attorney Mitchell stated that the company was ready to do its best to reach an agreement with the union and get the plant reopened. Union tops said it appeared for the first time since the walkout started that the company was really trying to get together with its employes who have been picketing the plant since April 11.

If the seniority matter is settled today, the two groups will then have to take up the question of wage demands. It was generally agreed, however, that the biggest hurdle to get over was the seniority question. The union is demanding the 55 cents per hour minimum be tilted to 75 cents, but has indicated a compromise could be arranged if the other contract provisions are settled amicably.

Negotiations for the union are being handled by William Elconin, international representative of the United Electrical Radio and Machine Workers, and a committee composed of Robert Kennedy, Ray Williford, Mat Vidaver and Robert Green. H. C. Parker, Paul Jones, Paul Husbands, George Smith and Tony Blake sat in on the session as union observers for the rank and file membership.

The meeting reopening negotiations after a stalemate of two weeks was arranged by Edward Fitzgerald, United States labor conciliator. Fitzgerald is making every effort to get the two groups together so the plant can be reopened in time to furnish distributors with May and June releases of Columbia recordings.

Although both sides expressed hope that an agreement could be reached today, the union went ahead with plans for a monster picket demonstration in front of Columbia Broadcasting Co. Saturday night. The union also has indicated a secondary boycott of CBS air sponsors and agents will be started next week if the strike is not settled by that time.

berg, William A. Scully, Cliff Work, Matty Fox and other execs.

Feld will concentrate on the studio's biggest pictures. These include Abbott and Costello films, the Mayfair productions and 'Mermaid In Distress'. Abbott and Costello, through 'Buck Privates' showing at the box office, have become one of the biggest things on the Universal lot. Studio, under new plans, will concentrate on keeping their forthcoming pictures in the hit class.

Feld is working with Jules Levey on the Mayfair productions, 'Hellzapoppin', with Olsen and Johnson; 'Hold On To Your Hats', the Eddie Cantor musical, and 'Butch Minds the Baby'. Vaughn Paul's first Universal production, 'Mermaid In Distress', now is ready for the cameras, although a starting date has not been set. Paul, Glenn Tryon and Alex Gottlieb are associated with Feld under the new setup.

Jack Gross, with George Waggner and Joseph Bernhard, Jr., is responsible for a larger number of big-budgeted productions. 'Never Give a Sucker an Even Break', comedy for W. C. Fields, is the first of these to go before the cameras. 'Bad Lands of Dakota', 'The Yukon Trail', 'The Ghost of Frankenstein', 'The Wolf Man' and 'Captive Wild Woman' are also included in the Gross part of the program.

Schwarzwald, in collaboration with Ken Goldsmith, will handle the Hugh Herbert pictures, the Dead End Kids-Little Tough Guys group, and a number of musical romance films.

Gershenson, until now an associate producer, has been upped to a supervisory job and will work with Paul Malvern, Marshall Grant and Will Cowan. 'Idea' pictures, Johnny Mack Brown westerns and two-reel musical shorts, will be made by this production unit.

Writers under Ben Pivar are working on scripts for seven pictures starring Dick Foran, Leo Carrillo and Andy Devine. Henry MacRae is preparing two remaining 1940-41 serials and the first of the 1941-42 serials. 'Riders of Death Valley', for 1940-41, is already in release, and shooting will be finished on 'Sea Raiders' this week.

Waldo Tops 'Trail'

Janet Waldo is set for the femme lead opposite Tim Holt in 'Outlaw Trail' at RKO. Picture starts shooting today under the direction of Edward Killy. Bert Gilroy is producing.

HEAT DELAYS WAR

Because he felt that the heat would make his players listless in battle scenes scheduled for 20th-Fox's 'Belle Starr', Director Irving Cummings yesterday delayed clash of 500 extras as Union and Confederate soldiers. Cummings will shoot around these scenes until weather cools.

Weather also brought an innovation to the stage where 'Sun Valley Serenade' troupe is working at 20th. Director H. Bruce Humberstone installed a 'decompression' chamber between the hot outside and low temperature set to ease players through without danger of catching colds.

The combined brains, beauty and talent that have made Hollywood the capital of entertainment, turned out last night for the premiere of Orson Welles' first picture, 'Citizen Kane'. Some were skeptical. Some were downright pessimistic. Some were sympathetic but doubtful on arrival. But when they left, after viewing the screen sensation of the new decade, all of this was changed and the vote was unanimous.

They agreed, with one voice:

'IT IS TERRIFIC!'

Here you see a pictorial story of the glittering opening; the Four Hundred of Hollywood, arriving for the epochal event.

biz. Rudy Vallee presides as toastmaster. Speeches are promised in light vein, with the guest of honor to be twitted by the biggies and intimate friends of the sprocket and kilocycle.

Host for the evening, NBC, will eschew a broadcast from the Bowl, allowing that too much speech-making doesn't make for too-good listening. However, one hour before the festivities get under way the chain will give out with a half-hour broadcast, signing in at 6:30 p.m. on KFI. Pickups will be made in New York to insert Alois Havrilla and Ed Thorgerson, first announcers to herald Benny's entry into radio; Amos 'n' Andy, Eddie Cantor and Ole Olson, the hellzapopper. From Gary, Ind., the Quiz Kids will flip a few posies at their pal, Jackie. Comedy highlight of the show will be the pickup from Benny's Bevhills home, where Rochester will be dressing the master for his big night out. Hollywood's contribution will be tributes by Claudette Colbert, Herbert Marshall, Trammell and Don Gilman.

After Freeman and Trammell have taken care of the serious business of lauding the accomplishments of radio's top funnyman and filmdom's front rank comic, Benny will be at the mercy of several masters of the witty saying. Among them will be Bob Hope, W. C. Fields, George Jessel, George Burns, Gracie Allen, Jim and Marian Jordan (Fibber McGee and Molly), Edgar Bergen and Mary Livingstone.

Radio's counterpart of an Academy Oscar will be presented Benny by spokesmen for three groups associated with Benny's career. Filmdom's gift will be tendered by Freeman, NBC's by Trammell, and his sponsor (Jell-O) by Colby Chester, board chairman of General Foods. All will be in the nature of a surprise.

Outpouring of well wishers will be predominated by picture people, with only NBC officials and chain performers in the aerial contingent. Every major advertising agency will be represented, many of the execs making the trip from New York for the biggest social event ever auspiced on the Coast by radio.

Music for the anniversary dinner will be directed by a dozen or so maestros who wield a stick on NBC programs here. Phil Harris, tune dispenser for Benny's airshow, will be missing due to a band commitment out of town. Feuding Fred Allen is sending a proxy, his own idea of regaling Waukegan's first citizen. There'll be no comeback by Benny, for one can't talk back to a pancake.

Clay Morgan, assistant to Trammell, handled the arrangements for the dinner.

'Kane' Admish Appears Too High Downtown; El Cap Biz So-So

'Citizen Kane' at the advanced scale of $1.50 and $1.10 top at night and 75 cents for matinees seems to be a little too much for the patrons of the RKO-Hillstreet theatre and at the El Capitan trade has been just fair. Picture on three days at the RKO downtown house did around $2,700 with the Sunday take for reserved seats being only around $850. The El Capitan got off to a $2,700 start on Thursday while its premiere grabbed around $1,000 on Friday, with Saturday being over $1,600. Yesterday, with the weather as opposition, the take was around $1,300.

Hollywood Inside

NEW simplified single sound track developed for broader roadshowing of 'Fantasia' will not require the elimination of the various sound amplifiers that are installed in theatres to give the sound full play. When Fantasound was first developed by Disney engineers, concert feature carried eight separate tracks, requiring roadshowing in only a few houses that could be closed for a two-week period while necessary installation took place. Now that a single track sound has been perfected, the equipping of a theatre to play the picture is only an over-night job. Walt Disney first tried out the newer development for the run of the picture in Minneapolis at the Minnesota theatre. Screening there proved single sound track could display the advantages of Fantasound without loss of reproduction qualities and opened the way for Disney to close a distribution deal with RKO to handle future roadshow engagements in nearly every one of the country's theatres.

ATTORNEYS are trying for an amicable settlement of L. Wolfe Gilbert's controversy with 20th-Fox over the use of 'Ride On Vaquero' as the title of the studio's current release. Back in 1929 as a songwriter at Fox, Gilbert and Abel Baer dished up a tune, 'Ride On Vaquero' for 'Romance of the Rio Grande.' Gilbert raises the point that while the song is the studio's property, the title applies only when used with the music and cannot be legally utilized as the title of a picture without permission of or compensation to the composer. Studio contends ownership of the title and all else contrived by Gilbert while on the studio payroll becomes its property. Songwriter was under contract to the publishing house at the time and farmed out for the studio job.

ACTOR who is one of the town's most athletic gentlemen has been incurring the displeasure of a group of stunt men who resent his rough house tactics during takes. Stunt men, hot over the fact that the actor knocked out one of their number recently, are preparing their revenge, although the beef may cool off before the denouement. Seems the actor, suddenly anxious to prove he is a tough guy, smashed an extra much too hard during a gang fight scene. After that extras were not used, with stunt men being substituted for battle shots. Trouble arose when the actor, after he had been carefully coached, unwound a haymaker right on the stunt man's button. Victim claims he was double-crossed and his fellows feel the same way.

'JOURNEY INTO FEAR', which David Hempstead planned for immediate production at RKO, has been set back and will not be made (if at all) until Michele Morgan's first picture, 'Joan of Paris', has been finished. George Schaefer okayed Hempstead's decision to set 'Journey' back because the background of the story is in the Balkans. Present conditions there might change matters so much that the film, when made, would be historically inaccurate and untimely. Ben Hecht has finished his treatment of the story. 'Joan of Paris' is also a war story, taking place after the Nazi occupation of Paris.

CHINESE THEATRE patrons Friday night were thrown into an uproar of laughter when a gang of college fraternity boys invaded the house and staged an impromptu show while 'That Uncertain Feeling' was being screened. Just as Melvyn Douglas points a gun at Burgess Meredith (one of the tense scenes in the picture), the college lads, engaged in an initiation ceremony, trooped up and down the aisles, clanking a chain and wearing odd, sheeted costumes. Then they walked across the stage of the theatre, silhouetted against the screen. Frat boys took over the house for at least five minutes.

HARRY SHERMAN is currently garnering exterior footage on three Hopalong Cassidy westerns in order to speed up his program for Paramount and eliminate unnecessary overhead involved in making three separate jaunts to distant locations. Producer now has 'Secret of the Wastelands' in work at Lone Pine and the additional footage being taken is for 'Sheik of Buffalo Butte', next Hopalong, and 'Timberwolves', slated as the third. Triple filming is also permitting producer to take advantage of weather now prevalent in that sector and avoid costly delays that might result later in the season.

HOTTEST costumes (to wear) in any current picture are the 1900-model clothes in Samuel Goldwyn's 'The Little Foxes.' Technicians have defeated the recent terrific heat on sound stages where the film is shooting by building an air-cooling system. Outside the stage there is a pile of coke and above it is a huge quantity of ice. Ice water drips down on the coke and air is blown through the coke by a wind machine into a canvas tube which extends inside to the stage. Device has kept heavily-padded, corseted costumes from wilting between takes.

H'wood Film $1,300 Suit Hits Goldberg

Hollywood Film Enterprises has filed suit against J. S. Goldberg in Superior court, claiming $1,300 due under one-year written agreement involving marketing of 8 and 16 mm. films. Goldberg recently took action for $50,000 against Hollywood Film Enterprises alleging breach of oral contract for an additional year after written agreement expired. S. S. Silverton is attorney for Hollywood Film.

Frank Lloyd Selects 'Lewis' Locations

'I, James Lewis', Frank Lloyd production for Universal, will do sequences at two other studios as well as two long location hikes. Lloyd will use the tank stage at Paramount for a number of his scenes and the street set at 20th-Fox for others. Location jaunts include Lake Tahoe and the Catalina Isthmus. Fritz Colling will be second assistant director on the film.

Gene Raymond finally gets a role in a Jeanette MacDonald picture—and loses the gal.

NBC Side Show

Martha Tilton did all the singing with the band—and plenty good.

'Love In Bloom' was sawed away, after the Benny technique, while the band rested.

Spotted dancing to Gordon Jenkins' music—Paul Rickenbacher and Lolly Parsons.

Hedda Hopper was virtually mobbed by the photogs. Gals gave her headgear a double take.

NBC orders on the party were 'go first class all the way.' Ask anyone who was there if they didn't top that.

Flowers from well-wishers were strewn all over the bowl and overflowed into the foyer in regimented profusion.

Prexy Trammell bouqueted Hal Bock, Joe Alvin and Frances Scully of the NBC publicity staff for a job well done.

Clay Morgan handled the whole affair with barely a squawk. That should call for a merit badge or something.

It was easily a 90% picture turnout, which should make the industry cognizant of their radio friends when they toss a party.

Those comics must have savvied fast when Bob Hope cracked, 'Radio is hard on the hair. Your forehead and Crossley go up together.'

Jell-O was not served. Those toothsome morsels were pretty tough to follow. Probably Clay Morgan couldn't think up a fancy name for it.

Don Gilman spent most of his time at the speakers' table standing, mitting the couples as they danced by. Is there anyone that guy doesn't know?

Colossal was the word for the gifts showered on 'The Bee' man. The birthday cake had to be wheeled in and two huskies bore the case of silver service.

Autograph hounds caught the celebs coming out at 1:30 a.m., and had a field day. Kay Kyser and Ginny Simms had to beg off after finger cramps set in.

Benny just couldn't play straight for his writers, Bill Morrow and Ed Beloin. After accolading them for being terrific writers, he flipped, 'I introduced them just to see if they could stand.'

Downtown sheets boycotted the Benny dinner as 'un-newsworthy'—but not socially. The biggies and their columnists were out in force. NBC-ites took it big and gave them choice locations.

Trammell and Sidney Strotz, NBC program chief, planed out Saturday for broadcasters' conclave in St. Louis. Other out-of-town visitors dribbled back to their home bases over the weekend.

Jimmy Walker's presence was a real surprise. The hand they gave him must have made him feel pretty good. He returned the gesture by remarking, 'I'm one fellow who knows all Hollywood isn't synthetic.'

Jack Benny Paid Homage Via Serious Tribute, Flip Banter

The kilocycles and the sprockets got together last Friday night in Biltmore Bowl to pay homage to one of their favorite sons, Jack Benny, entering upon his 10th year as a topflight giggle-getter. Serious tribute vied with flip banter for one of the most sentimental and hilarious evenings of this or any other year. Benny's radio pals, all past masters of the quip, paid their respects in the way they knew best, to the howling delight of 1,200-some stiff-bosomed guests.

It wasn't all persiflage, however, for there was the serious business at hand of glad-handing and well-wishing the nation's Sunday night cheerer-upper, embarking on another decade of spreading laughs among a war-worried populace. Such notable sentimentalists as Jimmy Walker, George Jessel, Niles Trammel, Don Gilman balanced off the evening against the onslaught of the zaneys and the blending of the two made it a memorable event.

NBC hosted the party, about $25,000 worth, but NBC Prexy Trammell must have felt well repaid when Benny levelled with 'I hope I'm with NBC the rest of my radio career.' In many minds that put at rest any possibility of him skipping over to any other network. When a man makes that kind of a statement in a mellow mood the blue chips can ride along with it. Benny never sounded more sincere.

MIRACLE OCCURS

Hollywood said it couldn't be done, but the miracle happened. It was a dress-up affair down to one careless bulb-popper. Along the speakers' table were ranged the white ties, all others turned out in tuxes. Clay Morgan, aide to Trammell, who handled the arrangements, proudly presented his minority report. The odds were all against a 100% dress affair, considering the unseasonable heat, but there they were, and there are pictures to prove it.

When Gilman tapped for order and gave a facetious accounting of Toastmaster Rudy Vallee, the crowd all knew they were in for a fast ride the rest of the way. Vallee didn't let the tempo sag for a minute, flipped 'I'm here largely to see that NBC gets the check—payment at the source.' He trade-lasted Benny for letting others of his cast bask in the spotlight and then called up Edgar Bergen, who forthwith unpacked Charlie. How the old vaude bookers would have winced to see that opening act. After a few exchanges with the dummy, Bergen cracked, 'Yes, I was in vaudeville with Benny. We were the ones that weakened it so Bob Hope could make the kill.' Charlie had the next line. 'It's not Chase & Sanborn that keeps you awake, Bergen, it's Jell-O'. Bergen passed it off with 'the crown rests on the head it fits best,' but Charlie served notice 'we'll steal it if we can.'

Jim and Marian Jordan (Fibber and Molly) were next up, and whammed the mob with 'anyone who can parlay a fiddle, Fred Allen and a polar bear into a career deserves a dinner.' Quipped Molly, 'all NBC did for us on our 10th anniversary was to start signing our contracts with ink.' When Fibber remarked that Benny was to have his own network, Molly shot back, 'they've got to give one away to someone, don't they?' Trady and timely and the mob ate it up.

VALLEE GETS CHUCKLE

Vallee cuts himself in for a laugh when, on introducing Colby Chester, board chairman of General Foods, he quipped, 'a sponsor is the man who pays for the radio program his wife runs.' Chester didn't mind it as much as being introduced with his front name last. George Burns and Gracie Allen directed their sally at Hilliard Marks, brother of Mary Livingstone. Tossing a glance at the 220-pounder, Gracie jibed, 'now there's a kid who could use a good dinner.' George said he knew him when he was a baby, that he looked like Arthur Lyons—about 10% of him. Sam Lyons took a ribbing as 'interpreter for Benny's father.'

Next called up was Bob Hope, who wanted to know if the order of appearance had anything to do with the Crossley. 'I had the choice of sitting at the speakers' table or being put in the men's room but I don't get along so well with the CBS gang,' he cracked. There weren't a half-dozen Columbians in the room. He then wowed them with 'Benny is a very generous guy. I saw him giving away dollar bills, the same day that Hearst went to see 'Citizen Kane'. He bowed off by saying that 'when bigger laughs are manufactured Rochester will get them.'

JESSEL DEADPANS

A roar swept through the Bowl when Vallee classified the next speaker as 'the man who has done so much for the youth of America.' The crowd at once sensed that it was George Jessel. He took it big and dead-panned, 'those who have been reading the papers know that I have been particularly busy this year.' He then went serious and paid high tribute to the Benny program for the tolerance of many races and creeds on the program. 'That's what makes it a great show and this a great country,' he exulted. 'Long may it live and long may it laugh at Jack Benny.' The mob gave him a tremendous hand.

Surprise guest was Jimmy Walker, onetime New York's hizzoner. Called to the dais by Jessel, he flipped, 'I've turned out to be a buttonmaker,' referring to his new job with the needle trade. Shunning the glaring spotlight with 'I hate those lights,' he struck a serious note when he remarked, 'Time was when people couldn't see me, but now I want to see them.' After paying his respects to Benny and Mary Livingstone as a lovely couple, Walker begged off by saying he was waiting for his wheel chair.

Vallee got himself in solid at the City Hall by having Fletcher Bowron take a bow as 'the best mayor L. A. ever had.' Trammell followed, recalling that 18 years ago he was peddling receiving sets here. He lauded Benny and his cohorts for 'making the country laugh when it needed it most,' and then brought the evening's honor guest to the mike. The crowd rose as one and gave him an ovation that lasted fully two minutes. It was an hour past midnight and Benny laid it on for a hilarious windup.

'I want to thank NBC for inviting so many comics to speak,' he sparked. 'There have been eight up here and I'm standing on Milton Berle. Why do they have to louse up a guy's testimonial? I'd like to say that I wasn't discovered by Vallee, Gus Edwards or anyone else. I was found under a rock in Waukegan by Arthur Lyons. His brother Sam said I looked good for 10 years on the radio and we've all been eating since, only it's more becoming on Arthur.'

LAUDS SHOW MEMBERS

Benny called on members of his show to take bows and lauded each for his work. Speaking of Rochester, he said, 'there's one picture he won't steal and that's 'Charley's Aunt''. He's not in it.' Mary Livingstone had to beg off from saying a few words, a sporting gesture inasmuch as the others didn't do any talking.

Gifts were showered on Benny as the festive evening came to a close. Frank Freeman, on behalf of the Producers Association, gave him a watch; NBC presented him with a silver service, the master keys to all NBC studios in New York and Hollywood, and a scroll. Timepiece bore the inscription, 'To Jack Benny—in appreciation of his services to humanity.' Freeman added that the sentiment is engraved on all our hearts.

It was radio's first big social outing here and gave the others something to shoot at. It won't easily be topped, east or west.

RADIO SCRIBES SESSION ON SWG STRIKE IDEA

the conference between the Producers and the SWG has been moved forward to tonight instead of tomorrow night. The SWG executive board will meet earlier in the day to consider counter proposals that were submitted to the scriveners last week. The general belief is that these counter proposals will be turned down. This was indicated by the fact that the SWG continued with its plans to sound out the membership on the advisability of taking a strike vote if the Guild demands are 'not reasonably met' by the Producers.

A special membership meeting of the SWG has been called for Monday night (19) at the Roosevelt hotel. The board has requested 'every member to be present and be prepared to express himself fully on this critical issue'. Because of the emergency, telegrams were sent to members of the Radio Writers Guild urging them to attend tonight's session.

If a strike vote is taken, the SWG probably will appoint committees to contact other guilds and unions to seek their support. These would include crafts affiliated with the Hollywood Guild Council, which was sponsored by the film writers. Vic Shapiro and Milt Watt now are handling publicity for the SWG.

charge of RKO theatre operations in Chicago, it is said, will take over the Koerner post here.

Koerner started in pic biz in the northwest in 1914 as an exhibitor and in 1919 joined the Jensen and Von Herberg outfit in Seattle. For six years he handled distribution of First National in the Portland and Montana area. In 1925 he acquired interest in the George Mann circuit of northern California and was its general manager until the Hughes-Franklin circuit took over the houses in 1931, with Koerner becoming personal representative of Harold B. Franklin and going with the latter to RKO that year.

First he was division manager of RKO southern territory and later handled theatres in northern New York from the home office, afterward taking over the New England territory out of Boston. It was from there he was brought out here two years ago to succeed Cliff Work who went to Universal.

Schaefer will tender Koerner a farewell stag dinner tonight at the studio with executives from the plant and local exhibs attending.

Preceding the one here there will be a conference for midwestern and southern region representatives at Chicago May 16-17. Murray and Jordan will be at all meetings.

THREAT OF DISNEY STRIKE OFFED

Threat of an American Federation of Labor strike at the Walt Disney Studio was eliminated over the weekend when Walter Spreckels, Disney labor contact, agreed to discuss problems of the Screen Cartoonists Guild with a Guild grievance committee pending the National Labor Relations Board hearing set for Monday (19). The deal was set at a conference between Spreckels, Aubrey Blair, AFofL organizer; Herbert Sorrell, business representative of Moving Picture Painters Local 644, and Attorney George E. Bodle.

Sorrell and other union tops expressed the belief that the SCG and other crafts would experience little difficulty in reaching an amicable agreement with the company so long as the negotiations are handled by Spreckels. He said that Spreckels has been entirely fair with the unions and that his appointment as labor contact undoubtedly averted a strike and saved the company the expense of a walkout.

The NLRB hearing is on a complaint charging that Disney and other company executives sponsored a company union in the Federation of Screen Cartoonists. If the board upholds the SCG accusation, the Guild will immediately demand recognition as the exclusive bargaining representative for all Disney cartoon workers.

Col. R'cdg Parleys On Tomorrow for New Wage Minimums

Columbia Recording Corp. and its striking employes have reached a tentative agreement on seniority rights of workers, and are preparing to resume negotiations tomorrow on minimum wage demands of the United Electrical Radio and Machine Workers Union. After a four-hour discussion Saturday, it was agreed that the union would draw up a seniority clause that would give the company entire control of its plant and at the same time protect the employes.

The company had complained that plant-wide seniority would not permit it to move men from one department to another in emergencies and would give the union control of the plant. Union tops said the clause would be drawn so as to give the company the control it desired.

The wage situation was taken up briefly Saturday, but the two groups were unable to get together. The union had offered to prune its demand for a 75 cents per hour ceiling to 65 cents, but company officials would not go above 1.7 cents per hour increase from the current 55 cents minimum. They said pay for holidays, however, would bring the increase up to approximately four cents per hour. Both company and union officials stated that progress was being made, and expressed the belief that the two groups would get together this week on a deal that would permit reopening of the plant which has been closed since April 11.

Obituary

CISSY FITZGERALD

Cissy Fitzgerald, 68, former Broadway star and one of the earliest film players, died May 5 in Ovingdean, near Brighton, Eng. As a stage star she played under the management of Charles Frohman and Charles Dillingham on Broadway. As a screen actress she made her initial appearance in 50 feet of film to help out Thomas A. Edison when he was trying to perfect a motion picture camera. Later she acted in a number of two-reelers for J. Stuart Blackton, pioneer producer, and subsequently produced pictures of her own in Miami and Hollywood. Among her stage starrers were 'The Gaiety Girl', 'The Foundling', 'On and Off', 'The Belle of New York', and others. On the screen Miss Fitzgerald appeared in more than 100 films of varying lengths. Among them were 'The Winsome Widow' and 'The Diplomat' for Fox Movietone; 'Laugh, Clown, Laugh' for Metro, and other features, including 'Painted Angel', 'Social Sinners' of Tuxedo Talking Comedies. In private life she was Mrs. Cissy Tucker.

MUTUAL, ASCAP DEAL SIGNED; BACK MAY 13

make separate agreements for local broadcasting of Ascap.

Previous ballot had showed 61 to 40 in favor of the agreement. While this constituted a majority of those who actually voted, it did not represent a majority of the 175 affiliates, and the matter, therefore, was up in the air until decisive action was taken at today's late afternoon meeting, following many hours of speeches and debate.

It had been assumed then that no action would be taken until the convention of National Association of Broadcasters meets Tuesday at the Jefferson hotel.

Dissenters to the ratification of the music pact were led by John Shepard, III, prexy of the Yankee and Colonial networks, and Hulburd Taft, Jr., owner of WKRC, Cincinnati. They declared there was no necessity to hasten the negotiations with Ascap. Proponents were headed by W. E. MacFarlane of Chicago, prexy of Mutual, and McCosker. 'It's the best music tax proposal I ever heard of,' McCosker said.

MacFarlane, who also is v.p. of Mutual's Chicago outlet, WGN, declared that Mutual 'had a responsibility to its listeners and advertisers to bring all catalogued music back to radio.' He added, 'I disagreed with the viewpoint that you can eliminate the best music from the air and not suffer. The suffering may not be immediate in dollars and cents, but the entire industry suffers from the loss of prestige.'

Mutual's meeting two days in advance of the NAB opening was frankly admitted as an effort to beat NBC and CBS to a settlement of the industry's wrangle with Ascap.

CHARGES SMOKE SCREEN

In a prepared speech, MacFarlane said 'Mutual will be charged at the convention with trying to sell the radio industry down the river. This is dust to blind the eyes of listeners, advertisers and radio talent. It also is a smoke screen behind which NBC and CBS seek to retain the tremendous profits from their own affiliates.'

MacFarlane told reporters after the futile meeting this morning that failure of Mutual members to sign the Ascap contract was, in effect, a victory for NBC and CBS. John G. Paine, general manager, and E. C. Mills, chairman of the administrative committee of Ascap, were in the same hotel awaiting an invitation to appear before the Saturday session. The meeting had just gotten under way when a dance orchestra in an adjoining room struck up 'God Bless America', an Ascap tune. Identity of the person who engineered the gag was not learned, but the Mutual crowd, who heard every note, apparently didn't like it.

NAB CONFAB OPENS TUESDAY IN ST. LOUIS

St. Louis, May 11.—Nineteenth annual convention of National Assn. of Broadcasters opens Tuesday at the New Jefferson hotel. Monday is reserved for preliminary meetings symbolic of the need for networks to get together with their affiliates on the Federal Communications Commission report and still unsolved Ascap situation. Networks may try to hurry through a settlement with the Society to get this issue out of the way. Edward Klauber, exec v.p. of CBS, is huddling here with Ascap's E. C. Mills and John Paine at Klauber's invitation. Both networks have extremely large delegations here.

As to which is the more serious problem for the convention, the government or the Ascap one, comment is 'which hurts most when a man with a toothache gets hit by a falling brick'? An ironic situation confronts the convention in that one of the scheduled speakers is Chairman James L. Fly of the FCC, chief author of the drastic proposals which has shaken broadcasting to its roots.

Advance opinion is that the convention will probably not approve the request for $250,000 to set up a special public relations fund although the view is spreading in the radio business that the trade has done an inadequate job in protecting itself against Washington bureaucrats by selling itself harder and more intelligently to the general public and more particularly to organized groups of citizens.

Estimates of possible registration at the conclave run as high as 900, probably setting an all-time record. Delegates are scattered all over town, with cliques more marked than usual and the Mutual network, which had indorsed the government report, suffering from some lack of universal industry popularity.

PICKFORD, ROGERS ANSWER SUIT

New York, May 11.—Mary Pickford and Charles 'Buddy' Rogers have filed answer in Federal court here to the $300,000 suit in which Arthur T. Michaud and Jules V. Pappe charge that Rogers breached a 10-year managerial contract with them. Miss Pickford is named because she is alleged to have persuaded her husband to abandon the pact, offering him better opportunities in Hollywood.

Defendants' answer sets up general denial and asserts specifically that the challenged contract could be cancelled in case Rogers' earnings during 1939-40 were less than $24,000. Rogers also seeks $4,500 in counter claim, saying plaintiffs had agreed to pay him $5,000 weekly minimum.

Hollywood Inside

SENSATIONAL developments in the United States Government's income tax investigation centering around Willie Bioff are scheduled within the next two or three weeks. Officials here admitted yesterday that 'something hot' is on the griddle, but said they were not in a position to discuss the developments at this time. It was learned, however, that U. S. officials have been interviewing a large number of guild and union leaders in the film industry, including Kenneth Thomson, executive secretary of the Screen Actors Guild, Aubrey Blair, American Federation of Labor organizer, Herbert Sorrell, business representative of the Moving Picture Painters Local 644, and that an effort had been made to contact Pat Casey, Producer labor contact, now in the east for conferences with international heads of studio unions. It also was learned that agents of the Internal Revenue Bureau were trying to locate a former employe of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes who acted as private secretary to Bioff and Harland Holmden when the IATSE maintained elaborate International offices in the Taft building. It was reported that the new developments centered around statements said to have been made in the east recently by a top in the industry.

WILLIAM F. GREEN, prexy of the American Federation of Labor, is reported to be somewhat peeved over the refusal of the Associated Actors and Artistes of America to accept his recommendation that Ralph Whitehead be retained to help reorganize the American Guild of Variety Artists. Green is understood to have even stated that Whitehead's salary would be paid by the AFofL. It was shortly after the AAAA had turned thumbs down on Whitehead thaat Green requested Meyer Lewis, his western director, to make an investigation of the extra setup in the SAG. Whitehead was national secretary of the American Federation of Actors, which had to be scuttled by the AAAA in order to get rid of Whitehead when the AFA charter was jerked and AGVA organized to take its place. Lewis has designated Aubrey Blair, Hollywood AFofL organizer to investigate complaints that the SAG is controlled by 1,100 members and that 8,000 Class B members are denied a vote. The SAG apparently is not perturbed over the action, taking the position that the extras themselves voted to designate the SAG board of directors as their collective bargaining representative.

MARY LEE, young Republic contract player who has been appearing in the Gene Autry features and on his Wrigley radio show, 'Melody Ranch', has been withdrawn from both. Reason behind withdrawal of young singer from the air program is understood to be failure of agency to offer a larger salary and refusal of studio to allow her to make the frequent road trips required by Autry for his personals and during which out-of-town broadcasts are staged. It is believed agency producing the show would have come forth with the double coin sought by Miss Lee's representatives if studio clearance for road trips could have been set, but Republic is reported to feel Miss Lee is growing up too much to continue playing the little girl singer in the Autry westerns and her continuance on the broadcasts would serve to confuse fans if she didn't appear also in the films. Studio has plans of building Miss Lee into a solo name and the first step was the divorcement from the Autry features and a number of vehicles are now in preparation for her. Autry returns to town tomorrow after a six-week jaunt, which ended with last Sunday's broadcast from New York. During the tour he used guest femme vocalists in the various towns.

PRODUCTION MANAGER WILLIAM KOENIG at 20th-Fox has found that for the Westwood plant, at least, production efficiency declines when over eight pictures are in work at once with present facilities. This 'economic speed' for the studio will be maintained as nearly as possible during the spring and summer shooting schedule, although currently nine features are before cameras, and a 10th is slated to roll Friday. This is highest production peak at 20th since November of 1938. Although new ones are starting, several on the current working list will finish shortly and hold the average down to around eight. Shooting are 'A Yank in the R.A.F.', 'Sun Valley Serenade', 'Charley's Aunt', 'Dance Hall', 'Charlie Chan in Rio', 'Dressed to Kill', 'Private Nurse', 'Last of the Duanes.' 'Wild Geese Calling' goes in Friday. Coming up are 'Remember the Day' and 'Cadet Girl', both to start (26); 'We Go Fast' and 'Lone Star Ranger', 'Marry the Boss' Daughter' and '21 Whistlers', the four set for June 2, and 'How Green Was My Valley' on June 9.

ELMA GOODWIN has been nominated for re-election as president and business representative of the American Federation of Labor Office Employes Union 20798. Nominations will be continued at the meeting Thursday (15), with the election scheduled for the first meeting in June. Mrs. Goodwin is now negotiating a contract for clerical workers and casting directors at Central Casting Corp.

'IN THE NAVY' will be the final title for the Abbott and Costello picture at Universal. First handle was 'They're in the Navy', but that conflicted with Paramount's current 'We're in the Navy.' Universal finally arranged with Par for part of their title after considering 'Abbott and Costello in the Navy' and having to discard that because equal billing has to be given Dick Powell.

Love Crazy

(Farce Comedy)

Metro release of a Pandro S. Berman production. Stars William Powell and Myrna Loy. Features Gail Patrick, Jack Carson, Florence Bates and Sidney Blackmer. Supporting cast: Sig Rumann, Vladimir Sokoloff, Donald MacBride, Sara Haden, Kathleen Lockhart, Fern Emmett, Joseph Crehan, George Meeker, Clarence Muse and Elisha Cook, Jr. Director, Jack Conway. Screnplay, William Ludwig, Charles Lederer and David Hertz; based on original story by David Hertz and William Ludwig. Photography, Ray June. Musical score, David Snell. Art director, Cedric Gibbons; associate, Paul Groesse. Film editor, Ben Lewis. Previewed at the Academy theatre, Inglewood, May 12. Running time: 100 mins.

Those disciples of sophisticated comedy, William Powell and Myrna Loy, here turn to broadest farce, the screwiest assignment they ever have had, and romp on it for heavy laugh payoff. It's a coin picture because of the names and the content, which is antidotal for the encircling gloom.

Script by William Ludwig, Charles Lederer and David Hertz from the original by Hertz and Ludwig, hesitates at nothing, no ancient gag or daffy twist, to capture a laugh. Powell and Loy, under direction of Jack Conway, demonstrate that there is still plenty of paydirt in the oldest screen routines if given the slightest renovation. Powell clowns his role with relish and resourcefulness. Miss Loy counters with a straight romantic complement which even works up a bit of tearful sentiment, in her best manner and the customary urbane behavior. Gail Patrick as a bored and venturesome wife; Jack Carson as a willing respondent to Miss Loy's jealous endeavors to retaliate upon her husband for conjectured peccadillos; Florence Bates as an intrusive mother-in-law, lend top support in richly written roles, and Sidney Blackmer, Sig Rumann, Vladimir Sokoloff, Donald MacBride and Sara Haden skillfully make their parts important.

The story adds a deft variant on the current mode to unravel the drama backward. Here the narrative starts with Powell and Miss Loy preparing to celebrate their fourth wedding anniversary by repeating what they did on their bridal night—only starting retrospectively. They emerge from the boudoir to eat their dinner in reverse courses. Circumstances quickly get them involved in matters which pile up one frustration upon another in slapstick anecdote and acceleration. Powell gets stuck in a balky elevator with a former sweetie, now the wife of an apartment neighbor. The results—one of the most hilarious episodes in the picture—starts a train of jealousies and suspicions which lead to the divorce court. In order to delay the divorce action, Powell takes frantic steps and is finally persuaded by his attorney to simulate mild insanity. He lands in a booby hatch, instead of his wife's custody, as he had planned.

(Drama)

Monogram release of an I. E. Chadwick production. Features June Lang and Johnny Downs. Supporting cast: Eric Blore, Weldon Heyburn, Anna Chandler, Frank Jaquet, Zarova, Baron Emerson, Harry Burns, Donald Thompson. Director, Edward Cahn. Associate producer, Herman Wohl. Screenplay, Conrad Seiler and Dorothy Reid; from novel by Beth Brown. Photography, Andre Barlatier and Benjamin Kline. Film editor, Carl Pierson. Musical director, Paul Sawtell. Previewed May 12. Running time: 64 mins.

This is a mild programmer which will have to rely chiefly on the performances and relative name values of June Lang and Johnny Downs to pull through in the lesser situations for which it is geared. Production is hampered by uninspired yarn which Edward Cahn's direction fails to hurdle.

Assets are the two leads, with Miss Lang registering photographically and Downs making the best of a clumsily written role as the ne'er-do-well son of a rich industrialist.

Whether in Beth Brown's original or in the screen treatment the yarn is intrinsically colorless. It's the story of the drunken wastrel turned loose with warning never to darken the door of the ancestral home again. He inadvertently prevents the heroine from jumping to her death and marries the girl, who thereafter proceeds to mold him into a solid, reliable citizen.

Eric Blore, as the family retainer sent forth by the well-meaning father to keep an eye on the young couple, makes a minor part important. Weldon Heyburn, as the middle-aged family friend, has distinctive delivery which should send him into more substantial assignments after more studied grooming.

Marriage sequences are quickly resolved into the familiar formula of the wife who plays hard to get because it was just a business arrangement whereby they were to split 20 grand which boy's father was to buy her off with. When payoff doesn't jell girl makes a deal on her own but finds romance instead. Rather abrupt is the manner in which a gigantic steel rolling plant is suddenly introduced in the vicinity of the dilapidated little hamburger stand which is first pictured situated at a wayside remote from all residential or industrial activity.

This and other sequences give ample indication that script needed much additional polishing before cameras began to turn. Andre Barlatier and Benjamin Kline turn in a first rate photographic job on June Lang.

independent field. The group earning $150 or more was composed of 120 dress extras, 17 cowboys, 64 character extras and 19 standins.

Those earning $200 or more per month were composed of 58 dress extras, 10 character, seven cowboys and two standins.

A breakdown of Class B earnings in 1940 disclosed there were only nine Guild members who earned between $2,500 and $3,000. Only 268 earned from $1,000 to $1,250; 155 from $1,250 to $1,500; 104 from $1,500 to $1,750; 52 from $1,750 to $2,000; 28 from $2,000 to $2,250, and 17 from $2,250 to $2,500.

Since 1933 there have been only two years, 1934 and 1936, when the pickings were as slim for the extras as in 1940. A comparison of job placements and earnings since 1934 follows:

1935......	278,486	2,571,293.64
1936......	268,436	2,420,453.55
1937......	294,307	2,986,372.89
1938......	264,268	2,848,445.68
1939......	294,432	3,124,671.64
1940......	228,342	2,529,766.00

Extras reaped a golden harvest in April of this year, but the job placements began to fall off early in May.

Representatives of the SAG meet with Producers Friday night (16) to complete negotiations covering reclassification of extra brackets. These reclassifications, together with recommendations of the Standing Committee to eliminate casuals, is expected to result in pruning about 2,000 players from the eligible list. SAG tops expect this to result in more work for the regular extras, with the result that there will be a substantial increase in their annual earnings.

GRAINGER SEES UPSWING AFTER 13-WEEK REP TOUR

James R. Grainger, president and general sales manager of Republic Pictures, arrived at the studio yesterday for a 10-day stay after a tour of all key cities. Grainger said he had seen substantial improvement in the picture business during his 13-week swing over the circuit.

Before leaving New York Grainger conferred with Joseph Bernhard, vice-president and general manager of Warner Bros., and C. E. Bond, chief film buyer for Warners, on principles governing a deal for the 1941-42 product between Warners and Republic. Warners, Grainger said, would handle the pictures on a nationwide basis.

During his tour Grainger contacted Warners district and zone managers on the coming season's product and closed deals for a Warners circuit of more than 200 theatres in the Pittsburgh, Washington, Albany and Buffalo territories. He also announced that Republic had made other deals with the Butterfield Circuit of 128 theatres in Michigan; the Publix Richards-Saenger Circuit of Mississippi and Louisiana for 110 houses, and the Fox Inter-Mountain group, with 103 theatres in Denver, Salt Lake and Butte territories.

Grainger will confer here with Lou Halper, in charge of Warners Coast territory; Charles Skouras and Larry Kent, of the Fox West Coast circuit, and Harry C. Arthur, of the Fanchon-Marco theatres. Grainger said the advance sale for Republic's 1941-42 product is the heaviest of any year.

Many Coastites Attend St. Louis Sessions

St. Louis, May 12.—Although Coast broadcasters originally had not intended to attend the St. Louis convention, many seemed to have changed their minds at the last minute due to curiosity on the Ascap, Mutual and FCC rules situations. Among familiar Pacific radio faces here are Ralph Brunton, Howard Lane, Charles Myers, Art Bright, Lewis Allen Weiss, Tom Symons, G. G. Goddard and James Murphy.

NAB ENDORSES MILLER; RAP SEEN AT MUTUAL

thors and Publishers and praising the Federal Communications Commission's recent order against the big networks.

There is talk around that several of the stockholders, including Lewis Allen Weiss, may resign from NAB by Thursday, and any possible developments along this line are being closely watched by those gathered here for the 19th annual convention of the Broadcasters.

NAB board extended Miller's contract as paid president until July 1, 1944, after voting approval of his work in the interests of the organization.

The Stephen Early letter to Alfred J. McCosker, chairman of the Mutual network board, conveying the praise of President Franklin D. Roosevelt to Mutual's attitude in welcoming the FCC's proposal, already has caused a lobby sensation among those who knew about it in advance of the NAB convention's formal opening tomorrow. Naturally the ultimate disposal of the NBC Blue network is causing endless conjecture here. Various investment syndicates are reported interested, but Sales Manager Edgar Kobak is encouraging the present stations on the Blue to take it over and run it on the Mutual style, rather than have it pass to outsiders not in the radio business.

Fred Weber reports that 102 stations have now okayed the Ascap agreement and he hopes for 140 to be in the lineup for the big resumption of Ascap music next Monday.

Mutual Decision Dram Prolog

St. Louis, May 12.—Mutual network and its leaders provided the 19th annual National Association of Broadcasters convention with a dramatic prolog by ratifying its contract with American Society of Composers, Authors & Publishers by a vote of 86 to 46, with John Shepard of Boston and Hulbert Taft of Cincinnati reversing their positions. This action depressed the convention and left NBC and CBS somewhat embarrassed as they had issued public statements they would not sign with the Society unless they got better terms than those accepted by Mutual.

Mutual will begin dance remotes Tuesday and Saturday night there will be a full hour Ascap salute, the last half from Hollywood.

Meanwhile the convention is further depressed and confused by the full implications of the new Federal Communications Commission orders. NBC prexy, Niles Trammell, today presided over a meeting of 200 affiliates at Jefferson hotel, while William Hedges explained traffic problems, engineering difficulties, added expense and probable loss of station-break advertisements if stations in general are to constantly shift from network to network. Period of chaos in time selling is feared, with the bigger conservative advertisers who like things clearly marked well ahead possibly staying off the air this fall. Situation might possibly favor spot business as, theoretically, after the 90-day period it would be easier to clear local time than to clear a network.

Ascap Directors Say MBS Price Minimum

New York, May 12.—Board of directors of American Society of Composers, Authors & Publishers today unanimously passed a resolution declaring that the contracts between the Society and Mutual Broadcasting System and its affiliated stations represent the minimum terms which Ascap will accept from any other radio network and their affiliates. Under any and all circumstances these terms constitute the Society's minimum offer, the Ascap directors declared.

Prexy Gene Buck of Ascap pointed out that the Mutual contracts provided everything that the radio industry had repeatedly demanded during the negotiations and that the new pact represents a substantial saving in music cost to the broadcasting stations.

Thomas' Strawhatter

Frankie Thomas will produce and star in 'Concert Tour', summer legit at Woodstock, New York, shortly after he finishes his role in Universal's 'Flying Cadets.'

BMI Will Announce Reduction in Rates At Wed. Sesh

St. Louis, May 12.—Board of directors of Broadcast Music, Inc., will announce a reduction of rates for BMI subscribers at Wednesday's session of the NAB convention. Exact terms have yet to be approved by the board. New plan will provide for both blanket and per program arrangement for payment of music.

Indications are that the per program plan will be half the figure Ascap gave Mutual, namely 10% on commercial business plus 1% for sustaining service.

Geo. Jessel Attending NAB Convention

George Jessel planed for New York yesterday, returning here in two weeks. He will speak at the closing session of the National Association of Broadcasters at St. Louis Thursday (15) and then goes back to New York to be toastmaster at the dinner the City of New York is giving (19) in honor of Lord and Lady Halifax.

Seniority Balking Col. Recording Strike Washup

With Columbia Recording Corp. and its striking employes scheduled to resume negotiations at 10 a.m. today, the United Electrical and Radio Machine Workers Union announced that the question of seniority rights of workers was still unsettled. It was thought the two groups had agreed on a seniority formula Saturday, but when it came down to putting it into written form it was found the company was standing pat for departmental seniority, with the union insisting on plant-wide seniority.

Both the question of seniority and wages will be taken up today. When the two groups recessed last week, the company was holding out for its offer of 1.7 cents per hour increase with pay for six holidays, and the union was demanding a hike of 10 cents per hour. The current minimum is 55 cents per hour.

Ralph Dawson, of the Los Angeles Industrial Council, stated the union would not approve any deal that did not include a 10 cents per hour raise. He said that all Congress of Industrial Organizations contracts being signed throughout the country called for a 10 cents per hour boost to meet the rising cost of living. The Columbia plant has been idle since April 11 when its 85 employes walked out.

Following negotiations pending since last June, Projectionists Local 150, International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes, has moved into the Million Dollar and the Hippodrome theatres downtown, bringing these houses into the union fold for the first time in many years.

Deals have been concluded whereby union musicians, stage hands and projectionists are now installed in both these houses. Local 150 has been out of the Million Dollar for past seven or eight years, and out of the Hippodrome for at least 10 years.

In addition to swinging these downtown spots into the union fold, Projectionists also have concluded deals with the Regent, Optic, Gaiety, Art and Burbank, in the downtown sector, whereby booths hereafter will be manned by members of the IATSE local.

Radio Scribes Pledge Support To SWG If Strike Comes

The Radio Writers Guild meeting at the Roosevelt hotel last night pledged its full support to the Screen Writers Guild in event the film scriveners take a strike vote in an effort to force recognition of their demands by the Producers. While the SWG negotiating committee was still in conference with the Producers, the air scripters adopted the following resolution:

'Be it resolved, that the members of the Radio Writers Guild of the Authors League of America, Inc., Western Region, meeting tonight at the Hollywood Roosevelt hotel, having been acquainted with the problems and demands of the Screen Writers Guild, Inc., in their present efforts to negotiate with the Motion Picture Producers Association hereby state that the Radio Writers Guild is in full sympathy with all the demands and conditions sought by the Screen Writers Guild and offer them our complete cooperation and support in their efforts to achieve their demands and working conditions in the motion picture industry.'

Lester Cole, of the SWG, appeared at the meeting to explain the situation, but stated that the Guilders had entered into an agreement with the Producers that nothing would be given out on the negotiations unless the two groups issued a joint statement. One RWG member asked about the attitude of the Producers, stating that the SWG demands were so modest he could not understand why the companies objected to giving them a contract.

He asked if it were true that the Producers had countered with a proposal of a minimum wage of $50 per week, when the Guild had requested $150. Upon being told there were rumors to that effect, he pointed out that publicists were paid $100 per week to publicize writers, indicating that it would be rather absurd to pay a man $100 to publicize another getting only $50.

It was stated that the Guild might have to make up a war chest in the event of a strike to get the scriveners on an economic unity. There was some criticism of efforts to divide the high and low salaried writers. It also was stated that the SWG wants control of screen credits, the RWG being told 'We don't want nepotism to run rampant as it once did, with relatives getting the screen credit.' One member said he thought the question of maximum pay was more important than a minimum wage, pointing out that a writer might be hired on a $5,000 deal and then called back for 20 weeks or more to rewrite a story.

The RWG also voted to cooperate with the Authors League in the first Western Conference of the creative writers to be held May 23-24 at the University of California at Los Angeles.

New York, May 12. — Martin Gosch and Howard Harris have sold their play, 'Hula Honeymoon', to Paramount, and leave for the Coast around June 1 to do the screen treatment. Deal calls for 14 weeks' work, with options for further pictures. Financial arrangement is complicated, but amount is understood to be around $15,000. Picture will be produced by Arthur Hornblow, Jr., as a musical, probably with Bob Hope. Composer Richard Rodgers formerly had the play under option.

The Gosch-Harris radio series for Keglined, 'The Amazing Mister Smith', goes off the Mutual network in July, but another sponsor has made an offer for the fall and RKO is after the picture rights. And from there on escape, chase and a sequence in which Powell masquerades as his own elderly sister in his wife's apartment, pile up the laughs thick and fast. Female impersonation is a pip, Powell having to yield to no one in this demonstration.

Story ends where it started—in the bedroom, as is customary with many of the Powell-Loy offerings.

Director Jack Conway puts on a hilarious show which fulfills every implication of the title. The matrimonial couple of the 'Thin Man' memory and repute lay it on thick under Conway's deft urgings. His previous Powell-Loy comedy was 'Libeled Lady'. Mistaken identity gags are good for guffaws. Operations of the lunacy commission putting Powell through the standard tests are satirical commentary on the kinship of romantic jokes and apparent mental lapses. Gags and situation finally become so screwball that even the writers couldn't find a conclusive ending—hence the refuge in the boudoir for the reconciled couple.

Pandro S. Berman garners himself a strong production credit with a sure-fire audience picture.

Ray June turns in a top job of photography to head the excellent technical support and the gorgeous presentation.

Smith, Aller Report On Anti-Labor Legislation

Harold V. Smith, business representative of Sound Technicians Local 695, and Herbert Aller, business head of International Photographers Local 659, have returned from Sacramento, where they conferred with Assemblymen and Governor Culbert Olson on pending anti-labor legislation. Smith expressed the belief that the governor will veto the hot cargo and secondary boycott and closed shop bills unless the former is amended to apply only to perishable goods, particularly citrus and milk.

The governor is reported to be anxious to give protection to dairymen and farmers now being made the center of a drive by the teamsters union. The Congress of Industrial Organizations is said to be watching the situation closely, with the idea of moving in on the San Francisco teamsters of the American Federation of Labor if the hot cargo bill is enacted into law.

SAG PARLEY MONDAY ON IF, WHEN STRIKE SETUP

While the Screen Actors Guild is scheduled to resume contract negotiations with the Producers on Tuesday (27), the Guild executive board has called a special meeting for Monday night (19) to sound out the membership on the advisability of calling a strike if the SWG demands 'are not reasonably met'. The session will be held at the Roosevelt hotel, with Prexy Sheridan Gibney presiding.

The two groups met Monday, with

NY LEGIT OPENING

THE HAPPY DAYS

New York, May 13.—'The Happy Days', an innocently hopeful little play adapted by Zoe Akins from the original French of Claude-Andre Puget, opened uncertainly tonight at the Henry Miller theatre. The audience waited tolerantly through a mildly garrulous first act but alternately yawned and giggled at the final two.

It's one of the frail efforts that sprout so bravely every spring but quickly wither away and are forgotten. Naive and tender and occasionally touching or amusing, but nearly always it's a trifle pathetic. A cast of youngsters plays it strenuously and not too successfully. Diana Barrymore, daughter of John Barrymore, tries hard in one of the leads. Joan Tetzel, a radio actress, is ap-

Hollywood Inside

THE International heads of studio unions are shying away from holding their annual wage and conditions conference with the Producers, it was disclosed yesterday, although 20,000 film workers are pressing their business representatives to get some action on negotiations. Because of the unsettled labor conditions here, particularly in the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes, and because of reports that Producers are preparing to demand an eigh-hour day, the Internationals are inclined to stall the meeting in the belief that a real labor shortage may develop in the industry when the Defense Program hits its peak in June. A wire received yesterday by the business representative of a studio local from the International was reported to have quoted William L. Hutcheson, president of the Carpenters as saying: 'There is nothing of so great consequence in the motion picture industry to warrant a meeting at this time.' Pat Casey, Producer labor contact, who has been east for two weeks, also was quoted as stating that the situation among labor tops there was pretty much unsettled, and that no date had even been discussed for holding the conference. It was pointed out that union leaders still were waiting for final decisions by the Wage-Hour Division on disputed classifications of film workers, particularly soundmen, cameramen, company grips, best boys and electricians. The word has been passed around that the Producers have been told to negotiate with the locals of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes, but to give them nothing. It was said the International hoped in this manner to keep control of its 10,000 members here and force the locals to ask the International to set deals for them. The rank and file membership, however, is opposed to this, fearing they may be handed another one of those 10% wage tilts which resulted in less money for all of them. The boys are clamoring for certain working conditions, and while they are willing to accept aid from the International, they want to sit in on any negotiations.

THE film industry does not anticipate a heavy clampdown or meddling by the Government if and when war or a national emergency is declared. When comparing with experiences during the last year it is found that the situation is entirely different now. Then the industry was disorganized; today it has the Hays office which has established an unwavering policy of cooperating with the Government. In the event of a national emergency, however, key men currently serving on defense committees would go on a full-time basis. By strengthening the industry's voluntary cooperation picture executives hope to have a liaison with Government defense workers which will satisfy Washington.

PARAMOUNT has been able to arrange first class cooperation from the Army for the local opening here tomorrow night at the Paramount theatre of 'I Wanted Wings.' While 30 Paramount stars and players absorb attention of the fans in front of the house, promptly at 8 o'clock 50 Army planes will fly over downtown Los Angeles in a series of aerial maneuvers. Ships will fly down from Paso Robles shortly before the opening. As they go over the theatre huge anti-aircraft searchlights, set up in adjoining Pershing Square, will pick them out of the darkness. Army exhibit in the nearby park includes the lights, machine guns and battle equipment, four Army tents and a pursuit plane.

TIEUP of Joseph I. Breen with RKO studios is not the first approach of that company to secure services of an executive of the Hays and Producers Association group. Several years ago, Hiram S. Brown, then president of RKO, had a deal virtually set for Charles C. Pettijohn, general counsel of the Hays office, to join the company as studio head. Intervention of Will Hays personally on plea that Pettijohn was urgently needed by the major companies as legislative contact on tax matters in various states, finally persuaded Brown to seek a studio head elsewhere at the time—with David Selznick selected for the post.

JOE E. BROWN will have a new set of numbers and lyrics, being written by Bob White and Chet Forrest, for 'Rio Rita' which opens fourth annual civic light opera festival at the Philharmonic auditorium May 19. Ann Ronell is writing lyrics for new compositions being prepared by Oscar Straus for John Charles Thomas in 'The Chocolate Soldier' which is to be staged week of June 2. Straus will come in from New York to conduct every performance of 'Soldier.'

WARNERS will cash in on the Rudolf Hess flight from Germany in 'Under-ground' to be released in three weeks. When yarn broke script was changed to have Philip Dorn, one of characters, do underground broadcasting of Hess' flight. Then today new scene is inserted into picture with Frank Wilcox portraying the Hess part, which will show flight, shooting, landing, Scotch farmer, etc., and end with the Hess theme song of why he blew out on Hitler.

DEAL is pending between Brock Pemberton and Columbia whereby the latter would finance summer stock tryouts and Broadway productions next season if promising shows are obtained. Little money would be required for the tryouts, but if the material looks favorable, financing of regular production would proceed without further huddling between Pemberton and the film company.

COLUMBIA'S 'Free Company', which recently went off the air after the regular scheduled 13 weeks, doubled its rating during the two weeks the Hearst press was attacking it for alleged radicalism. According to the Gill survey, rating went from 2.1 to 4.5 during that period.

Truth is so much stranger than fiction that a lot of good newspapers won't print it. Not because of any political affiliations, but because Joe Public might get the idea that all newspaper writers are screwballs. Which they are not. A good reporter tells approximately half of what he knows and tries to forget the rest of it. Any of the top reporters of bygone days, like Gene Fowler, can tell honest tales so grotesque that no newspaper editor will print them. The Hess hop from Germany to Scotland is too unbelievable for a screen play. Fiction has a charley horse when it tries to spring along with fact.

Too Many Blondes

Universal production. Stars Rudy Vallee and Helen Parrish. Features Lon Chaney, Jr., Jerome Cowan, Shemp Howard, Iris Adrian, Eddie Quillan, Irving Bacon. Supporting players: Jeanne Kelly, Paco Moreno, Gus Schilling, Dorothy Lee, Carmela and Jose Cansino, Dinorah Rego, Humberto Herpera and Orchestra. Director, Thornton Freeland. Associate producer, Joseph G. Sanford. Original story, Maxwell Shane. Screenplay, Maxwell Shane and Louis S. Kaye. Photography, Milton Krasner. Art director, Jack Otterson; associate, Richard H. Riedel. Film editor, Bernard W. Burton. Set decorations, R. A. Gausman. Gowns, Vera West. Sound supervisor, Bernard B. Brown; technician, William Hedgcock. Music director, Charles Previn. Songs, Milton Rosen and Everett Carter and Walter O'Keefe. Previewed at the Alexander, Glendale, May 13. Running time: 60 mins.

'Too Many Blondes' is a mild little comedy with music that is slated for spotty reception in its supporting bill playdates, but because of its short running time and a number of good laughs, will manage to please sufficiently. The players have a hodge-podge of material to wade through and at times are able to clear their way okay, at other spots the proceedings bog down to a minor pace. Walter O'Keefe's 'The Man On the Flying Trapeze' is dragged in as an audience participation gag with Rudy Vallee doing the vocals, and there are three other numbers, done capably by Vallee and Helen Parrish, his co-star. Brief snatches of a South American tune, sung by Dinorah Rego, and a dance number by Carmela and Jose Cansino, are injected for production.

Plot wraps itself around a pair of singers (Vallee and Miss Parrish) who are trying to save money to get a divorce, and jumps from bad gag to good gag as the couple go through their maneuvers, aided by the sideline coaching of Jerome Cowan, a villain who wants the gal himself. Story contrivance puts the couple below the border, intent on a quick unsplicing when they save the necessary coin. Of course, after many misunderstandings and some action explained with dialog, they get together again with a fabulous contract to sing on the air.

Aiding Vallee and Miss Parrish with the comedy is Shemp Howard, a hotel clerk, who wrangles most of the laughs. Eddie Quillan does his share, and Lon Chaney, Jr. (minus horror makeup) completes the supporting fun trio. Iris Adrian registers as the girl friend of Chaney's and Jerome Cowan eases through his assignment first rate. Paco Moreno and Gus Schilling each have brief moments.

Thornton Freeland, doing his first directing job in Hollywood after seven years in London, could have had better material for his new start. He keeps things on the go the majority of the time, and frames the songs and laughs nicely. Joseph G. Sanford's production values make the most of the budget allotment and the technical departments are satisfactory. Maxwell Shane and Louis S. Kaye screenplayed from the Shane original.

Title for 'Christian'

Final title for RKO's third Dr. Christian picture will be 'They Meet Again.'

SCHAEFER FINALLY TELLS OF BREEN APPOINTMENT

Although negotiations were on for three weeks and concluded last week when the RKO board put its okay on the deal, George Schaefer held up until yesterday the announcement that Joseph I. Breen, who resigned his post as Production Code Administrator with the Hays organization, was joining RKO as general studio manager on a long term contract. Breen also will be elected a vice-prexy of RKO at the next board meeting, Schaefer announced.

Though no definite date for Breen's moving into RKO was given, it is understood that regardless of whether Will Hays picks his successor before that time Breen will take over his new post June 1. With Breen coming into RKO, it is likely that a settlement may be made by Schaefer of the Harry Edington contract which does not expire until Dec. 31, and pays $2,000 per week. Reports were current that a settlement of the Edington ticket was under way.

Also another situation which was on the horizon was possibility of Joe Nolan stepping out around June 1. But understood that he has talked with Breen and would go on vacation shortly after the new boss came into the plant and return to take different post than he previously occupied.

Breen, who has been with Hays organization for eight years, had no previous studio experience. Understood that Floyd Odlum of Atlas Corporation was staunch advocate of bringing Breen into studio.

Breen has been ill at his home this week with infected throat and was not available last night to state when he took over his new job. At Hays office it was stated he was not expected to return to his chores there this week.

Blair Attends Sesh On Extra Setup

Aubrey Blair, who has been designated by the American Federation of Labor to investigate the extra setup in the Screen Actors Guild, attended the meeting of the Extras Advisory Council last night at 1753 Highland. Blair, AFofL organizer here, spent some time in conference with Harry Mayo, Council chairman and head of the SAG Council when it was abolished, and also talked with many players who attended the session.

Blair stated he was not in a position to disclose contents of the complaints that have been handed him, but said they would all be incorporated in a report which he will submit to Meyer Lewis, AFofL western director. Lewis in turn will submit a complete report to William F. Green, president of the AFofL, in time for consideration at the AFofL Executive Council meeting in Washington Monday (19) if Green desires to bring it up then.

Schlesinger Session

Wage demands of cartoon workers at Leon Schlesinger were discussed yesterday at a conference between company representatives and officials of the Screen Cartoonists Guild. Another meeting will be held later this week. The SCG has authorized a strike of workers if, and when it is deemed advisable.

Play Review

'A-LOVIN' AN' A-FEUDIN' '

If there is anything to the superstition that the wronged dead turn over in their graves, the Bard of Avon became 'whirling William' last night when the Pasadena Playhouse Association presented 'A-Lovin' an' A-Feudin'.'

Play, by Ethel Park Richardson and Erik Barnouw, was a magnificently bad job of rewriting Shakespeare's 'Romeo and Juliet'. Only the most ardent of the Pasadena Community Playhouse patrons, or those philosophical enough to take the bitter with the sweet, or those interested in strange, depressing novelties could like this show. It is not good theatre. It is unworthy of the Playhouse group.

'A-Lovin' an' A-Feudin' ' was laid in the Tennessee mountains, with the Capulets and the Montagus as hill-billies. Shakespeare's original language was stripped of its tragic poetry. Fay Sappington and Herman Hoch turned in the best performances. Hershel Daugherty directed. It is no good for pictures and no good for the stage.

Gordon played on the New York stage and in repertory companies around the United States, and among his last stage appearances was the role of the mayor in 'The Front Page', and later he did same part in the picture. During 1927 and 1928 he served as president of The Troupers and was drafted in 1940 to the same post, and was active in welfare work among impoverished actors.

LifeBO Sets Program To Move in If LOP Drops

Fate of three William Esty radio shows will be determined during the current visit of Richard Marvin, radio head of the agency. Two are virtually safe and the other has a tough hurdle to get over. Practically certain of being renewed are 'Blondie' and Al Pearce for Camel ciggies. Perched on the big question mark is LifeBO's 'Hollywood Premiere'. All three are in the same time cycle, with options falling due late this month.

Marvin said that the Lolly Parsons show might be continued if some 'sensible' talent budget can be arrived at to compensate the guest stars. He declared that some basis for computing the worth of players on the program must be reached before any decision can be made.

Marvin said he has a variety show all signed and sealed to take over the LifeBO time in the event that the Parsons turn is not renewed. Program would alternate originations between both coasts, with indication that picture talent would be used on the new setup.

SCRIVENERS CATCH DOUBLE SNEAKS

Hollywood correspondents caught a doubleheader sneak preview last night in their campaign to force Jock Lawrence's Studio Publicity Directors Committee to screen pictures here before they are shown elsewhere. The writers descended on Huntington Park when it was learned Universal was staging a sneak preview of 'Bachelor Daddy' at Warners theatre.

Before entering the house, the writers were advised that Metro also was staging a sneak of 'Lady Be Good' at the California theatre. The group went into a huddle, assigned nine of the writers to catch the Metro offering and six to take care of Universal's 'Bachelor Daddy'.

Earlier at a meeting in Hollywood the correspondents agreed to continue to catch sneak previews until some definite action is taken by the Producers. They said there had been no change in the situation, that Lawrence continued to shout empty promises, but that no move had been made to guarantee correspondents that pictures would be previewed here before they are screened in NY.

Kreisler May Not Play Again

New York, May 13.—Fritz Kreisler, world famous concert artist, may never play the violin again. Although reported slightly improved this week at the Roosevelt hospital where he is being treated for a fractured skull, he's still on the danger list. It is understood from close friends that the violinist-composer already has made plans to devote himself chiefly to composing in the future, limiting himself to but few concert dates.

Ice-Capades Garners 132G at Pan-Pac, Setting New High

Ice-Capades closed out its four-week run at the Pan-Pacific last night for a total take of $132,000, setting a new high for that length of engagement by an icetravaganza. Troupe posted $29,000 on the final week, with two extra days thrown in.

After a two-week layoff the blade experts check in at Republic for two weeks' filming of the frapped revue. Rehearsals for the 1942 edition will be held in Philadelphia in July, after which the outfit opens in Atlantic City with the present setup. New show will be unveiled at the Dallas state fair.

THOMSON RESIGNS AGVA POST

with him Lee Travers, whom he last week placed in temporary charge of Los Angeles AGVA local after the dismissal of Kenneth Howard as executive secretary.

His retirement climaxes a double burn-up, one by Thomson against AGVA national officials, and the other by the latter at Thomson for his Travers appointment. Thomson assumed control of the AGVA local on April 30, first sending Charles Drubin, a SAG checker, to take charge of the office, but later announcing that Lee Travers had been loaned to the local for 30 days.

It was announced in the east that appointment of Travers was a 'shocking surprise' to AGVA officials. They said he was a Hoyt Haddock appointee as Philadelphia executive secretary, and later was sent to Chicago as national representative, from which post he was discharged. The local AGVA board asked Thomson to take over supervision of the local and aid in its reorganization.

Complaints against the management of AGVA and the method in which the recent national AGVA election was conducted have been filed with the national AGVA board and with William F. Green, president of the American Federation of Labor. Only a few hundred votes were cast, although AGVA is reported to have a membership of more than 10,000. It is probable the election will be declared invalid since a majority did not vote. Such action was taken by the SAG some time ago when a majority failed to vote for members of the SAG Council.

each side submitting proposals and counter proposals. It was agreed that these would be taken back by the negotiating committees for consideration of the Guild board and the Producers, and that the parleys would be resumed May 27. It was generally believed, however, that the counter proposals of the Producers would not be acceptable to the scriveners.

In the meantime, the SWG moved to consolidate all of the writer groups in support of the SWG demands. The Radio Writers Guild has pledged its full support, and similar action is expected by the Dramatists Guild, Authors Guild and the Authors League of America. The SWG handed out the following statement last night:

'Every major writing guild in Hollywood and New York presented a solid front today in support of the current Screen Writers Guild bargaining negotiations with film producers.

'In the face of a strike possibility if the Writers Guild negotiations are not successfully concluded, the Authors League of America, Inc., and its affiliated crafts, the Dramatists Guild and the Authors Guild in New York, have called emergency meetings for the adoption of sympathetic resolutions of support, according to a telegram from Howard Lindsay, vice-president of the Authors League of America. Acting in the absence of President Elmer Davis, Lindsay assured the Screen Writers Guild of lively and sympathetic backing in the negotiations and requested full information for members on future progress. The Screen Writers Guild also was advised that the Authors Guild has called a special Council meeting for May 20 in support of writer negotiations.

'The Radio Writers Guild unanimously adopted a resolution pledging support to the Screen Writers at a special meeting Monday night. This is the first instance in the history of the writing crafts wherein national Guild unity has been so forcefully expressed.'

Congressional Probe Of Drastic FCC Moves Proposed

impressions the comish majority had Presidential backing.

Resolution calling on the regulators to stay the effective date of their stringent rules and providing for a far-reaching probe was handed the Senate by Senator Wallace White of Maine, co-author of 1927 Radio Act. By implication proposal had endorsement of Senator Burton Wheeler, chairman of the Interstate Commerce Committee, though latter is far too concerned about war matters to have time just now for radio rows.

Temporarily shelving the idea of sponsoring legislation that would revise the Communications Act, Senator White introduced the measure under which the Interstate Commerce group (of which he is a member) would study effects of the commission's blitz and legality of the crackdowners' eight commandments. Measure would require FCC to turn over immediately all data collected during the wearying investigation so Congress could reach an independent opinion whether monopoly exists and such violent remedies are necessary.

Not long before, Secretary Early vigorously explained his acknowledgment of telegrams from Alfred J. McCosker and W. E. MacFarlane, Mutual execs, praising the regulations, was nothing more than it appeared, only a matter of courtesy. The Early letter, which took on possibly great significance, replied to McCosker-MacFarlane wire cheering the comish majority. Because of the president's illness Early voiced the appreciation, explaining his boss was pleased when 'two executives with such important interests at stake can view a situation with such detachment.'

Quizzed about his intentions, in view of Mutual claims the letter showed the White House favors the crackdown, Early immediately disclaimed any idea of rubber-stamping the regulations, and promptly telegraphed Lowell Mellett, head of the office of government reports, who is in St. Louis, 'I deeply regret that such use of the letter is being made by its recipients or their agents.' Newsmen were told by Early his letter was nothing more than a 'polite acknowledgment to a telegram received.' He remarked it does not indicate all hope of relief is lost, adding, 'it does not, as some would have it appear, express any statement of policy on behalf of the administration.'

The White resolution, which cited the Supreme court opinion in the Sanders Bros. case saying the comish has no authority to regulate the business affairs of radio, noted the regulations have been condemned as 'an attempt upon the part of the commission to exercise supervisory control of programs, business management and policy' of webs and affiliates. Consequently, the Maine Republican proposed investigation of:

1. Probable effects of rules on broadcasting industry structure of network organizations and stations.

2. Effect on program quality.

3. Whether the comish is trying to supervise programs, policies and business matters.

4. Whether rules will have reverse effect on industry and service rendered.

5. If they are a 'threat to freedom of speech' via the airwaves.

6. If government ownership and operation is liable to follow, or the rules may reduce stations to common carrier status.

7. Whether rules are 'in effect' an effort to define monopoly and whether the comish is claiming power to penalize anybody for engaging in monopolistic practices.

8. Whether comish action is justified by the statute.

IATSE LAUNCHES DRIVE ON LABORERS, UTILITY WORKERS

Studio Laborers and Utility Workers Local 727 of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes has launched a drive to take over all laborers and utility workers in the film industry. The workers are being asked to approve a consolidation of Studio Utilities Employes Local 724 with the IATSE group and to designate Local 727 as their collective bargaining representative.

A total of 3,000 postcards are being broadcast in the studios, one to be signed and returned to Local 727. The card to be returned states:

'Gentlemen: I am a laborer and utility worker employed in the motion picture studios, and am of the opinion that there is not room in the industry for two labor organizations, and that there should be a consolidation of Local 724 of the Hod Carriers and Local 727 of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes. I hereby cast my vote to consolidate the two locals into Local 727 of the IATSE and for Local 727 to be the bargaining agent for wages, hours and conditions. I am a member of Local ——.'

The other card to be retained by the worker states:

'The two cards enclosed are very important. If you are in accord with the message on the card, sign one and post it immediately. It is most essential that it be received within the next few days. The additional card should be handed to another laborer or utility worker whom you know is not a member of Local 727 and who is now working in the studios, with a request that he immediately sign and mail it. Mail it for him if you care to after it has been signed.'

A jurisdictional beef has existed between the two American Federation of Labor locals since the IATSE-United Studio Technicians Guild election, when the Congress of Industrial Organization tried to move into the picture field through supporting the latter group. The Producers recently ordered all Local 727 men who were employed on a working permit yanked, which is believed to have resulted in the move by Local 727 to force a showdown. The two locals are reported to have aggregate memberships in excess of 3,000.

Vice-President Wallace Accolades NAB For Hemispheric Goodwill

Washington, May 13.—Vice President Henry A. Wallace today told the National Association of Broadcasters in a convention in St. Louis of the administration's 'high appreciation of what you've done in providing good music for the millions and building hemispheric good will', but failed to sound a reassuring note to soothe the nerves of jittery station owners and network execs. He spoke from his office in the Capitol building, excusing himself from a personal appearance before the kilocycle nabobs because of 'press of duties.'

His subject, 'Responsibilities of the Radio', treated largely with conditions created in this country by the war and he pleaded for a continuation of free discussion and resistance to Nazi-inspired propaganda. He said radio had been highly instrumental in making our good neighbors know us better and asked that the communal spirit in this country be fostered to a greater degree than ever before.

Term contracts have been handed out at Metro to Howard Emmett Rogers, writer, Dorothy Morris and Natalie Thompson, actresses. Miss Morris was spotted by talent scout Bill Grady while playing at the Pasadena Community Playhouse while Miss Thompson was tagged after appearing in legit in New York.

James L. Fly Asserts FCC Regulations Are 'Flexible'

St. Louis, May 13.—Chairman James L. Fly of Federal Communications Commission appeared before the opening session today of National Assn. of Broadcasters to say that while certain regulatory principles were fixed the question of 'means, methods and timing are flexible'. Fly gave unmistakable evidence that he was 'grimly determined' to keep radio out of either government ownership on the one extreme or domination by two or three management groups on the other side. He charged 'men, to divert attention from the fact of monopolistic control in their hands, conjure up insistently the bogeyman of government operation.'

Following Fly's speech, which was the third of four in a panel on 'National Defense and Radio', the chairman of the convention, NAB Prexy Neville Miller, stepped in to say that he felt Fly's remarks should not go entirely unchallenged. Miller stated that the government also used bogeys to hide purposes, and declared broadcasters were as patriotic as anybody in or out of the government. The wave of applause for Miller's parenthetic comment created the most sensational episode that has ever occurred in the presence of a member of the commission. Miller's attack and the reaction caused the chairman to color up. It was an incident that obviously pleased many delegates but alarmed others.

Only Lincoln Dellar, manager of KSFO, Frisco, asked Commander H. R. Thurber of the Navy a routine question, if stations could assume that Navy stories on the wire services were sufficiently checked. Thurber said he would not at present make such an assumption. Major General Robert Richardson of the Army and Lowell Mellett of the office of government reports were other participants in the morning panel.

Independent Radio Network Affiliates voted at a breakfast meeting not to make any recommendations of its own regarding the monopoly report.

Tom Harrington, radio head of Young & Rubicam agency, flew back to New York yesterday. Clay Morgan, aide to NBC Prexy Niles Trammell, will pass a day in Frisco before returning east. Wobber Kept Here

Herman Wobber, 20th-Fox distribution head, postponed his departure for the east yesterday and remains here, along with William Kupper, western division manager, to continue looking at product and discussing consent decree selling.

Hollywood Inside

INDEPENDENT producer with a new program of pictures lined up, a number of which will be musicals, is muttering in his beard at having let slip through his fingers a Broadway singing find who would have been a natural for his features. Producer's New York office forwarded to the Coast a contract calling for $75 weekly, along with photos and the good notices received by singer when she opened in the show that brought her to the front. Pact needed only the producer's signature to make it legal, the find having inked the pact in the east. After six months of collecting dust in the producer's files ticket became just so much waste paper when a major lot seized the opportunity to hand actress a pact at much more money. Actress has garnered much nationwide publicity in photo magazines and syndicated articles but the man who could have had her services for practically nothing, considering their value, is having to look elsewhere for a name to hypo his new series of films.

TWO writers, recently wracking their respective memories for a good story idea, remembered a short story by Guy de Maupassant. Together they devised a modern background, eliminated all traces of the Frenchman's hand and developed a salable screenplay. One of the team quietly peddled the finished product to a major studio without his erstwhile partner's knowledge. The other lad, deft detective he, soon learned of the happening and charged his ex-pal with stealing the story idea. Feud raged on for several days, with each writer accusing the other of stealing the yarn from him. Finally, a story editor who knew both writers and had detected the origin of the modernized screenplay, wrote them a joint letter asking them to get together and forget their differences. Screed was penned in classical French and signed 'Maupassant.'

UNIVERSAL has carried out an Oriental theme in a number of its smaller-budgeted features, judging by the titles 'Dark Streets of Cairo', 'Halfway to Shanghai', 'South to Karanga', 'North of Borneo', and now has 'Bombay Clipper' up for production by Marshall Grant, who also served in the same capacity on several of the other four. Another who has carried through in the Oriental mood is Stanley Rubin, who did scripting jobs on all five of the pictures and just completed work on 'Bombay Clipper' with Roy Chanslor. It is figured some extra value is given the small actioners by framing title and at least a portion of the plot in faraway spots where fictional adventures can appear a little more credulous than if laid in familiar territory.

DELAY in concluding the sale of film rights to 'The Flying Yorkshireman' by Frank Lloyd to the Frank Capra-Robert Riskin production unit is largely due to necessary clearance that must be obtained from the various interested parties who own a slice of the story. Lloyd and the Capra-Riskin combine have already verbally agreed on sale and expect other formalities will be taken care of by the end of the week. 'Yorkshireman' was originally intended for Arch Oboler to do when he was a member of the Lloyd unit at Universal. Lloyd has now replaced picture on his Universal schedule with the recently purchased 'River Lady' and if script and a cast can be readied in time it may be his next production following the current 'I, James Lewis.'

Previewed at Alexander, Glendale, May 14. Running time: 85 mins.

A comedy of extraordinary brightness and high entertainment value, this tale of a girl and a boss and a playboy, once titled 'A Girl's Best Friend Is Wall Street', should find wide welcome where sheer amusement is wanted. It is the best potential box office entry Charles R. Rogers has turned out in years, and does credit to the best talents of all concerned in its making and presentation.

Joan Bennett and Franchot Tone are a happy combination to bring out the delightful romantic maneuvering and to sock the freshly turned situations pointed up in the screenplay by Harry Segall, Kenneth Earl and Curtis Kenyon, based on a mag story by Jane Allen. Equally important and effective in rounding out the hilarious predicament is John Hubbard as the rich loafer who sets out to marry the attractive chorus girl but thinks better of it at the very brink of the altar. Eve Arden makes it a perfect foursome as Miss Bennett's knowing pal, who doubts the wisdom of the whole escapade but is willing to try anything for a friend. Add to these toppers William Tracy, Pierre Watkin, Almira Sessions, Thurston Hall and Grady Sutton and you have a group of troupers who keep the narrative smooth and the laughter running in high.

The story has Franchot Tone, a Wall street broker of a very important and conservative firm, frowning on the wooings of Hubbard, whose guardian he is. Joan Bennett doesn't want her fiance (ready to marry after brief acquaintance) to lose two million through elopement and disinheritance. She suggests she will win Tone's approval of herself. She goes to work in the brokerage offices as a telephone operator, wholly without experience and under false pretenses. These pretenses catch up with her after she has done many strange things and finds Tone in love with her. The playboy's final desperate decision to avoid the marriage for which he is not ready, saves the day for the real lovers.

Richard Wallace seals the quality of the offering with topflight direction, skillful in getting the best out of the hilarious situations, the novel routines and the very warm human relations maintained throughout. A fine piece of screen craftsmanship is the fresh use of voices as the conscience of the principals in arriving at the story conclusion. A most amusing gag also is the use of eye exercises.

Charles R. Rogers gives the picture very attractive presentation and is supported by excellent technical work from every department.

COLUMBIA RECORDING UPPS WAGE OFFER BY 2¢ HOUR

Columbia Recording Corp. has upped its offer of wage increases to striking employes to two cents per hour, with tilts of five to 10 cents per hour for employes in certain classifications, but the United Electrical Radio and Machine Workers Union is holding out for a flat 10 cents per hour boost. The union claims the five to 10 cents per hour raise would not apply to more than half a dozen workers.

The union said that seniority proposals of the company still are not acceptable, but added that the executives were showing a better inclination to get together with their employes and that a deal may be set by the first of the week. When the negotiations meeting was adjourned yesterday it was tentatively agreed that another session would be held late today.

In the meantime, the union continued with its plans for a community meeting Saturday night on the picket line to be established in front of Columbia Broadcasting Co. It was announced that the speakers will include Frank Scully, Herbert Biberman, Dorothy Connelly and Lynn Hanes.

Picket Line at Central Casting Withdrawn

The picket line maintained in front of Central Casting Corp. during the past eight weeks was withdrawn at 5 p.m. yesterday, following conferences between Ed Dahlen, film extra; Fred W. Beetson, of the Producers Association, and Howard R. Philbrick, Central general manager. Dahlen said he had agreed to discontinue the picket line to give the Producers an opportunity to work out some seniority plan for old time extra players.

He said Philbrick had pointed out that Central had no authority to act, since the Producers and the Screen Actors Guild had designated the Standing Committee to handle such matters. Dahlen said Philbrick had assured him there would be no discrimination against him and Tiny Jones and C. Bishop, who aided him on the picket line.

Total of 26 new actors and actresses has been signed and nine of these, during the past year, have already been shoved into leads. Two have been starred. Two who have stepped into stardom are Veronica Lake, who scored in 'I Wanted Wings' and has been given the top femme role in 'Sullivan's Travels' and Stirling Hayden, who tops the cast of 'Bahama Passage' and who first rang the bell in 'Virginia.'

Others who have been signed include Esther Fernandez, Mexican star of 'Rancho Grande' and other pix made south of the border. DEAL ON PREVIEWS SET TENTATIVELY

A tentative deal ending the tiff between Hollywood correspondents and the Studio Publicity Directors Committee over the screening of pictures in the east before they are previewed here was reached yesterday when the Committee and Y. Frank Freeman accepted an invitation to meet with the writers on Thursday (22). In the meantime, the correspondents agreed to discontinue their campaign of catching sneak previews, indicating the matter will be officially washed up at the Freeman session.

The situation was discussed yesterday at the weekly meeting of the Studio Publicity Directors. They took the position that the correspondents were unreasonable in demanding an agreement in writing, since both the Committee and Freeman have been urging the studios to preview their pictures here before showing them elsewhere, in order to cooperate with the writers. They said the writers first asked for a clearance of three weeks, and then increased it to four weeks..
